Retro Rodger

When Rodger Wood retired after 42 years with the U.S. Treasury Department early last year, he didn't quite know what to expect.

"When you get back from having your morning coffee, it dawns on you pretty quickly that there's nothing in the house except two cats and you," the father of three and grandfather of six from Sterling, Va., recalls. "You find out that you have to find something to do fast."

Fortunately for us, that's never been a problem for Rodger, whose photos grace nine of our 13 "throwback" covers for this year's Street & Smith's College Football yearbook. When we decided to embark on this project to recreate Street & Smith's glorious old cover shots featuring posed players sans face masks, Rodger volunteered for the mission and put in thousands of miles in the air and on the road to make it happen.

With the help of Creative Director Keith Wood and Copy Editor Jonathan Woog, who contacted sports information directors and equipment managers to set up these retro shoots with college football's best, Rodger went nonstop from April 12 in Louisville with Brian Brohm to May 8 in Columbus, Ohio, with James Laurinaitis.

Wood estimates that he took about 200 shots each of all the players he shot, asking them to pose the way Street & Smith's photographers shot the college stars of the 1950s and '60s—flying through the air while making catches, diving on fumbles, stiff-arming, gritting their teeth in anticipation of tackles.

After his session with Laurinaitis, the Ohio State All-American told Rodger that his 45-minute workout was almost as tough as some of his Buckeye practices spent with Coach Jim Tressel.

In addition to Brohm and Laurinaitis, there were 12 other players who were willing and very helpful participants in this project: Rutgers' Ray Rice, Clemson's C.J. Spiller, Tennessee's Erik Ainge, Arkansas' Darren McFadden, Florida's Tim Tebow, Texas' Colt McCoy, Oklahoma's Allen Patrick, California's DeSean Jackson, UCLA's Bruce Davis, USC's John David Booty and West Virginia's Patrick White and Steve Slaton.

As you'll be able to tell from the photographs, they seemed to enjoy it as much as Rodger, who says he especially "hit it off" with WVU running back Slaton and Cal receiver Jackson.

"They were all great, but DeSean Jackson was very outgoing and really wanted to make it perfect; he hugged me at the end," Wood says. "In one sequence, I took a group of shots with him jumping over me to make a catch. We worked very well together."

At Arkansas, McFadden actually broke out a leather helmet to pose for some of his shots, prompting Wood to tell the Razorback star that he actually played with a leather helmet during his high school football days while growing up in Detroit.

That's not all Rodger has done. He spent a year in the Merchant Marines before heading off to college at the University of Detroit, where he says a Jesuit priest "turned me around and put my head on straight." He went on to get a master's degree from Wayne State University in public administration before embarking on his long career in government.

His thirst for learning is what got him into photography. Hanging around minor league ballparks in Hagerstown, Md., and Prince William, Va., while taking pictures to get autographed developed into a second job back in the early 1980s and, before you knew it, his pictures were turning up regularly in publications like Baseball America and USA Today and on baseball cards for Upper Deck.

And, of course, today, when he's not substitute teaching at elementary schools or taking German classes at the local junior college, he's traveling across the country shooting covers for us.

Thanks, Rodger. Obviously, we couldn't have done it without you.

If you had joined Jim Hurley's Network® when we started in '85 and played my phone service, you'd have cleared well over $100,000, based on $100 bets - and some guys have made double and triple that.

JIM HURLEY'S NETWORK ISN'T JUST GOOD. THE RECORD SAYS WE MAY BE THE BEST.

Over the last 22 years - while hundreds of other services have come and gone - we have had only ONE losing season - and that barely. We broke the game wide open in '85 by picking more winners than any service in the country (as per AADSS) and we haven't stopped since.

WE WERE THE... 1st

- ... to computerize.
- ... to employ full time scouts.
- ... with a football search engine (TRENDSEARCH).
- ... to use advanced analytic tools like fuzzy logic and genetic algorithms.

So this is not seat of the pants. This is state of the art. We are not talking a once-in-a-while lucky shot... but systematic year-in year-out profits that a man can build a better life on. Can you hear me now? Then make up for ALL the Jim Hurley winners you've been missing.

SEEKING THE NEXT DAVID

With Boise State pioneering the way, college football fans now look for another BCS underdog to cheer—and may just find it deep in the heart of Texas.

By Scott Rabalais
The (Baton Rouge, La.) Advocate

As New Year's Day faded into the first night of 2007, the controversy and divisiveness over the Bowl Championship Series faded while a nation sat enthralled watching Boise State battle Oklahoma in the Fiesta Bowl.

It was a game for the ages. Oklahoma rallied from an 18-point third-quarter deficit to take a 35-28 lead with 1:02 left in the game. Boise State forced overtime with a 50-yard hook-and-lateral on a fourth-down play as just seven seconds remained on the clock. The Sooners scored first in overtime and kicked an extra point. The Broncos answered with a receiver option pass for a touchdown and—how retro was this?—a winning two-point conversion on a Statue of Liberty run play by tailback Ian Johnson.

Suddenly, the talk went from whether the former 12-0 Boise State deserved to be in a BCS bowl game to whether the 13-0 Broncos shouldn't have been in the BCS Championship Game in that same University of Phoenix Stadium a week later.

That game, compared with the Fiesta Bowl, was certainly anticlimactic. Florida romped to a dominating 41-14 rout of previously top-rated Ohio State in a non-contest that didn't have even half the drama of the Fiesta Bowl.

Nor did it have much of a shelf life outside of Florida or Ohio. Instead, the buzz continued to be about Boise State, and how the little school with the home blue turf from deep in the Rockies could hurl a stone and slay one of college football's Goliaths—and whether it could it happen again.

Chris Petersen, who had a dream first season as Boise State's coach, doesn't see the many miles between a Boise State and an Oklahoma that others may.

"Our guys don't think of themselves as a mid-major program," says Petersen, who inherited the job (he was formerly the Broncos' offensive coordinator) when Dan Hawkins went off to Colorado. "They've won a lot of big games the last seven years—the bigger the game, the harder they seem to play.

"We're not going out under any illusions of trying to carry the flag for a bunch of different programs. We just try to keep climbing."

The path to the top was made clearer because of expansion in the BCS system. Last season marked the first year of the BCS Championship Game, which subsequently opened up two more slots in the existing four BCS bowls: the Fiesta, Rose, Sugar and Orange.

To create more access for schools that aren't in the six BCS conferences (ACC, Big 12, Big East, Big Ten, Pac-10 and SEC) or don't happen to be Notre Dame, qualifying rules were changed. Non-BCS teams can now gain entry if they finish in the top 12 in the final BCS standings (Boise State was comfortably in at No. 8) or rank among the final BCS top 16 and also in front of a BCS conference champion.

SEC Commissioner Mike Slive, who also serves as BCS coordinator for the 2006 and 2007 seasons, rated the grand experiment a success.

"When we added the fifth bowl and increased access, it was good for college football," Slive says. "It provided some additional opportunities. Boise State had a very fine football team, they took advantage of it and it was one of the great bowl games. I think it added something to the postseason excitement and drama."

AARON BROWN, RB TCU

> "One thing we have to do as a football team—and we've done a good job of it the last five or six years—is to remember that EACH GAME COUNTS AS ONE. You get more emotional for some, but you have to find out the way to win the other ones."

GARY PATTERSON COACH, TCU

However, Boise State wasn't the first non-BCS school to break through. Two seasons earlier, Utah went to the Fiesta Bowl and came away with a 35-7 victory over Pittsburgh to cap a 12-0 season.

But the Utes' victory, while impressive, didn't capture the nation's imagination as much as Boise State's daring heroics. Now you can almost picture college football fans scanning the national landscape, saying, "Go on, give us another one."

Predicting who the next Boise State will be could well become the next national parlor game. Fairly enough, you have to start with the Broncos themselves. But Petersen, like any coach, doesn't want to hear it.

"Our mission statement isn't different," he says. "One of the reasons I had so much respect for the team last year is after we beat Oregon State (42-14 on Sept. 7), everyone in town started talking BCS games.

"We had 10 games left to play. Our players focused on one game at a time. It's all about doing your best week-in and week-out and not getting distracted."

Petersen's mantra is older than the Statue of Liberty play itself. But it works just as well for TCU Coach Gary Patterson.

Patterson's Horned Frogs have gone 22-3 the last two seasons, including an 11-2 mark in 2006 that left TCU ranked No. 21 in the final USA Today coaches' poll. The Horned Frogs have the talent and schedule (early games with Baylor and Texas) to build a strong case as the trendy pick for this year's BCS sleeper bid.

But Patterson knows his team won't get there if it gets caught up in the preseason hype.

"With Baylor and Texas starting off, if we go 1-1, they'll be counting us out already," Patterson says. "One thing we have to do as a football team—and we've done a good job of it the last five or six years—is to remember that each game counts as one. You get more emotional for some, but you have to find out the way to win the other ones."

If a team like the Broncos or Horned Frogs wins them all this season, can it expect to get into the BCS Championship Game, or are perceptions about the non-BCS conferences likely to keep it ranked too low in the polls? Wouldn't the non-BCS schools benefit more from a playoff?

"We have no control over that," Petersen says. "Whether we won the national championship or not, we went 13-0 and did the best we could. Our kids beat everyone in front of us."

"I like the system the way it is," Peterson adds. "I grew up with the bowl system. That many teams go to bowls and get a win and feel good about themselves going into the next year is a very important thing."

So this season, look for a lot of college football fans to start the season rooting for their favorite teams—while also keeping a lookout for the next feel-good story from a non-BCS conference.

COTTON-PICKING NEW HOME

The 71-year-old postseason classic announced in February it will be moving from its aging stadium of the same name near downtown Dallas to the Cowboys' glittering new $1 billion showplace in suburban Arlington. The first Cotton Bowl will kick off there in January 2010.

The decision to change locations could help the Cotton Bowl move back closer to the national spotlight. The old stadium, and the always-significant potential for bad weather, helped keep the Cotton out of the BCS mix. The new facility will have a hole in the roof similar to the one at Texas Stadium—but one that can be enclosed by a state-of-the-art retractable cover. The annual Texas-Oklahoma game will remain at the original Cotton Bowl stadium through at least 2015.

WHEN A BCS TITLE GAME ISN'T ENOUGH

With the Gators winning every NCAA title in sight these days, you would think University of Florida President Bernie Machen would be happy with the status quo.

In basketball, yes.

Football, no.

Machen wants a playoff, though which kind he isn't advocating just yet. Whether it be a plus-one format, final four or an eight- or 16-team playoff, Machen believes it's best left to majority rule. That is, as long as the majority can agree a change is needed. And in the SEC, Machen believes he has that.

"It will take a conference like ours to get this moving in the right direction," he says.

SEC Commissioner Mike Slive, also the BCS coordinator, isn't advocating any particular path but does want to encourage talk about future postseason plans.

"I don't know if there's a perfect solution," Slive says. "We've had some great games, some years with significant controversy and some years with no controversy. In basketball, we pick 65 teams and this year we had a significant amount of controversy [for the NCAA Tournament selection]—you can't get away from that.

"We need to figure out what's best for college football. How do we protect the regular season? In the SEC, we have eight bowls and two-thirds of our teams can go out and have a postseason experience. We're interested in keeping that. Some [conferences] have championship games that are important. We have academic and calendar issues, and we're trying to keep football a one-semester sport. All of those are issues that need to be examined in terms of what is the appropriate format."

This season, of course, the only change will be the site of the BCS Championship Game. It moves to New Orleans' Superdome from Glendale, Ariz., followed by stops in Miami (2009) and Pasadena, Calif. (2010).

> "IT WILL TAKE A CONFERENCE LIKE OURS TO GET THIS MOVING IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION"

REWRITING THE RULES ... AGAIN

New for 2007: more football. No, the NCAA isn't lengthening the regular season from 12 to 13 games—yet. But it has decided to throw out many of the clock-cutting measures that were adopted before the 2006 season.

Under last season's rules, the clock started when the ball was kicked on kickoffs instead of when it was touched, and also as soon as the ball was made ready for play after a change of possession instead of on the first snap of a drive.

The rules met their intentions. They did shorten games to an average of three hours and seven minutes, down about 14 minutes from 2005. But coaches were widely critical because the new clock rules eliminated about 13 plays per game, resulting in an average of some 66 yards lost and five less points per contest.

Those regulations have been replaced by what will hopefully be more acceptable timesaving measures:

- Limiting reviews during instant replay to a maximum of two minutes.
- Cutting the length of timeouts from 1:25 to 55 seconds.
- Trimming the 25-second play clock to 15 seconds following TV timeouts.
- Starting the play clock on free kicks immediately after an official hands the kicker the ball.
- Avoiding re-kicks by assessing penalties against the kicking team on kickoffs at the end of the runback.

Two other changes being phased in over the next two seasons will make college football more closely resemble the NFL. Starting this fall, kickoffs will be from the 30-yard line instead of the 35. And in 2008, the NCAA will implement a 40-second play clock that starts when the previous play is blown dead, as in the NFL. The current 25-second play clock begins when the ball is placed ready for play.

WHERE DOES YOUR TEAM LIVE?

You may not have noticed it last December during the holiday shopping and bowl rush, but the NCAA's new names for Division I-A and I-AA football went into effect for this season.

From now on, Division I-A is now the Football Bowl Subdivision. Division I-AA is now the Football Championship Subdivision, with its 16-team playoff culminating in the Division I football championship.

The reasons behind the semantics were complaints and frustration from I-AA schools that were often labeled as small-time compared to their BCS brethren. This is taking place even though a school like Rice (FBS) has about 3,000 students, compared with Texas State (FCS), where the enrollment is around 27,100 students.

Will this stop fans and media from referring to schools as I-A or I-AA, or Division I (in reference to Football Bowl Subdivision) schools and Division II for the rest? Probably not, but the NCAA is hoping to guilt fans into using the new terms.

2007 Street & Smith's TOP 25

JOHN DAVID BOOTY
QB USC

PATRICK WHITE, QB West Virginia

1 USC (11-2 IN 2006)

If the Trojans keep this up, Coach Pete Carroll is going to get his own star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame. Every season, USC loses great talents—this year it's receivers Dwayne Jarrett and Steve Smith—but still deserves rankings like this because Carroll brings in the nation's best recruits. Sure, the Trojans choked away a spot in the inaugural BCS Championship Game with that loss to UCLA, but quarterback John David Booty and company will be able to rely on a quicksilver defense that returns 10 starters. Southern Cal fans had to cancel their reservations for Phoenix last January, but they should book early this season for New Orleans.

2 WEST VIRGINIA (11-2)

When Rich Rodriguez turned down the Alabama coaching job, one of his reasons had to be the wealth of talent he has returning to Morgantown. With a quarterback like Patrick White and a running back like Steve Slaton, along with another favorable schedule, the Mountaineers look like a prime candidate to make a national-championship run.

3 WISCONSIN (12-1)

The Badgers' winningest season ever didn't earn them a Big Ten title or even a Rose Bowl berth. This year, the schedule gets tougher with games at Ohio State and Penn State, along with a home matchup with Michigan, but Wisconsin isn't going away, either. Eighteen starters return, led by tailback P.J. Hill (1,569 yards, 15 TDs), the 2006 National Freshman of the Year.

4 LSU (11-2)

Last year, a brutal road schedule separated the Tigers (barely) from the national title game. But this season, Florida, Auburn, Arkansas and Virginia Tech all come to LSU. Quarterback JaMarcus Russell bolted early for the NFL, but Matt Flynn is a capable fifth-year senior. The defense, led by All-America defensive tackle Glenn Dorsey, could be the nation's best if LSU finds a free safety and an defensive end.

5 MICHIGAN (11-2)

Yes, the Wolverines ended with the downer of two straight losses to Ohio State and USC, but what Michigan did to start 11-0 is worth remembering. The defense must be completely rebuilt, but there should be shootouts aplenty with the return of offensive talents in QB Chad Henne, tailback Mike Hart and wideout Mario Manningham.

6 FLORIDA (13-1)

Coach Urban Meyer's spread offense got the glory last year, but it was defense that led Florida to the national championship. That unit lost nine starters, however, so more of the load now shifts to the offense. The true test will be how well QB Tim Tebow can run the show full-time. The elusive and versatile Percy Harvin will also have to shine even more.

7 OKLAHOMA (11-3)

Once the shock and awe of their Fiesta Bowl loss to Boise State wore off, the Sooners had to realize one important thing: They are good enough to win the Big 12 and do it again. Yes, tailback Adrian Peterson and QB Paul Thompson are gone, but there is strength in players like running back Allen Patrick and safety Reggie Smith.

8 TEXAS (10-3)

Three losses and a short trip down I-35 to the Alamo Bowl had to qualify for a bit of a disappointment in Austin. That's the level to which the Texas program has risen under Coach Mack Brown. But there is reason to dream big again, especially with QB Colt McCoy and most of a talented offense coming back.

9 VIRGINIA TECH (10-3)

The Hokies look like the class of the ACC with QB Sean Glennon (2,191 passing yards, 11 TDs) and running back Branden Ore (1,137 rushing yards, 16 TDs) returning, along with eight defensive starters, led by all-conference linebacker Vince Hall. A Sept. 8 matchup at LSU could be a BCS title-elimination game.

10 LOUISVILLE (12-1)

Cardinals QB Brian Brohm turned down the lure of NFL megabucks; Coach Bobby Petrino did not, leaving for the Atlanta Falcons. Enter new Coach Steve Kragthorpe from Tulsa, who inherits both a Heisman-candidate quarterback and a national-championship contender. Well, national-championship-contending offense, anyway. The defense needs work.

11 CALIFORNIA (10-3)

Quarterback Nate Longshore has come of age in Coach Jeff Tedford's offense, which could mean a nasty, throbbing headache for USC and the rest of the Pac-10. With Marshawn Lynch gone, the bulk of the ball-carrying duties fall to Justin Forsett (626 yards, 4 TDs). Linebacker Zack Follett will lead the defense.

12 ARKANSAS (10-4)

No team is loaded with more potential and potential for disaster than Arkansas. The Razorbacks possess the nation's best backfield tandem in Darren McFadden and Felix Jones, but the program went into total meltdown after last season. Both QB Mitch Mustain and wideout Damian Williams transferred to USC, while Offensive Coordinator Gus Malzahn defected to Tulsa for an assistant's job.

13 PENN STATE (9-4)

An upset win over Tennessee in the Outback Bowl gave notice that the Nittany Lions will be a tough out in 2007. Quarterback Anthony Morelli is one of eight starters back on offense. The defense lost second-round NFL draft pick Paul Posluszny, but another All-America linebacker, Dan Connor, returns, along with cornerback Justin King and safety Anthony Scirrotto.

14 AUBURN (11-2)

The Tigers have become a perennial SEC power, but they enter 2007 with holes to fill on the offensive line and at running back. Quarterback Brandon Cox must continue his maturation process, but should be able to count on a stout defense led by tackle Sen'Derrick Marks and safety Aairon Savage. Both were Freshman All-Americans last season.

15 OHIO STATE (12-1)

The Buckeyes' problem is similar to a year ago, just in reverse. In 2006, Ohio State had to restore a ton of defensive talent. This year, it's about replacing Heisman-winning QB Troy Smith, versatile receiver Ted Ginn Jr. and other offensive stars. The Buckeyes are in reload mode these days, so expecting a repeat of last season would be unfair.

16 GEORGIA (9-4)

Coach Mark Richt saw the holes on this year's team (especially on defense, with just four returning starters) and told Recruiting Coordinator Rodney Garner, "Drop and give me 20!" Georgia signed five military-school players in a typically top-notch class. The offense is in good hands with QB Matthew Stafford and running back Kregg Lumpkin.

17 UCLA (7-6)

The Bruins served notice in a win over USC last November that there is another team to reckon with in southern California besides, well, Southern California. A QB duel between Trojan-slayer Patrick Cowan and Ben Olson must shake out for UCLA to get going. Justin Hickman is a big loss on defense, but he's the only one. Bruce Davis is an All-America defensive end who just needs to find consistency.

18 MISSOURI (8-5)

How good can QB Chase Daniel and the Tigers be? Just take a look at Missouri's annual Black-and-Gold Game, during which the offense put up 550 total yards and 72 points. Coach Gary Pinkel's spread assault fits Daniel perfectly, and the junior has two great targets in tight ends Martin Rucker and Chase Coffman. The Big 12 North could be decided against Nebraska, but the Tigers will have home-field advantage.

19 RUTGERS (11-2)

College football's feel-good story of 2006 is back for a sequel. Coach Greg Schiano shunned Miami to stay in New Jersey. The man must have his reasons. The Scarlet Knights have to find a couple answers on defense, but few teams will have the solution for tailback Ray Rice, a legit Heisman contender who will keep Rutgers on the radar.

20 NEBRASKA (9-5)

The Cornhuskers aren't ready for global domination again just yet, but Lincoln is alive with the tingle of optimistic anticipation. It all starts with QB Sam Keller, who possesses a talented arm that was formerly flinging passes for Arizona State. The defensive front has holes, but anything less than a return to the Big 12 title game would be a disappointment.

21 TENNESSEE (9-4)

The Volunteers clawed back to respectability and a Jan. 1 bowl last season, but QB Erik Ainge must recover fully from a spring MCL injury or Tennessee will once again be in trouble. The running game is a three-headed beast with LaMarcus Coker, Montario Hardesty and Arian Foster. Punter Britton Colquitt (44.9-yard average in 2006) is one of the nation's best.

22 CLEMSON (8-5)

Death Valley boasts one of the nation's top rushing duos in James Davis and C.J. Spiller, who wrecked opposing defenses for more than 2,100 yards last year. Who hands the ball off to the tailbacks is a question, as Cullen Harper has the edge coming out of spring. Backed by a strong returning defense (seven total), this could be the year the Tigers break their 16-year ACC title drought.

23 TCU (11-2)

Could TCU be the next Boise State? Riding an eight-game winning streak, the Horned Frogs have built the foundation for more on a defense that returns nine starters (led by defensive ends Tommy Blake and Chase Ortiz) from the nation's No. 2 unit. Replacing QB Jeff Ballard (19-2 as a starter) is the key, as Marcus Jackson and Andy Dalton will battle for signal-calling duties.

24 OREGON STATE (10-4)

With 18 returning back, the Beavers can rightly dream big of a shot at a BCS bowl. The offense could fly behind new QB Sean Canfield and talents like running back Yvenson Bernard and wide receiver Sammie Stroughter if the offensive line improves. Road games at California (Oct. 13) and USC (Nov. 3) could decide how good Oregon State's season will be.

25 BOISE STATE (13-0)

Maybe we're just hoping the Broncos will be good again so we can see what trick plays Coach Chris Petersen will pull this time. This is no shooting-star program, however, as the Broncos have averaged 11-plus wins over the last five years. The defense must replace linebacker Korey Hall. Taylor Tharp takes over at QB for Jared Zabransky, but can he run the Statue of Liberty?

CHRIS PETERSEN

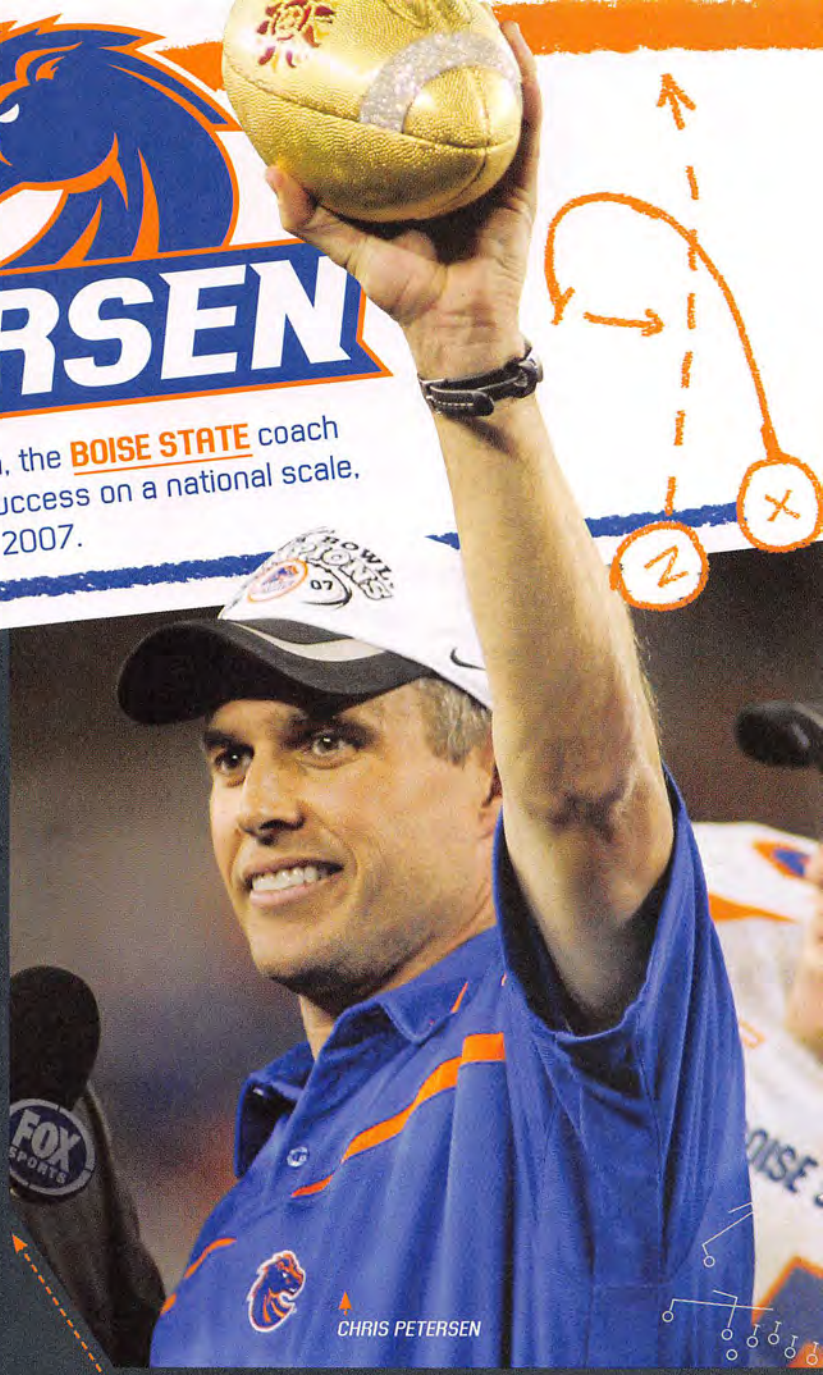
After a storybook first season, the BOISE STATE coach discusses trying to sustain success on a national scale, and his new bag of tricks for 2007.



CHRIS PETERSEN

RICK SCUTERI / US PRESSWIRE

By Matt McKenzie
Street & Smith's Staff Writer

For years, Boise State was simply thought of as "that team from Idaho with the Smurf-blue Turf." But in a matter of 10 minutes during last season's Fiesta Bowl, all that changed. Heading into the matchup with Oklahoma, many observers lauded the Broncos for becoming the first "true mid-major" (with apologies to Utah) to play in a BCS game. No one, however, gave them much of a chance against a then-11-2 powerhouse Sooners team.

And despite being ahead most of the game, Boise State was all but written off after Oklahoma scored 15 unanswered points in 24 seconds to take a 35-28 lead with just over a minute to play. What happened next will be remembered in college football history for years to come.

Facing fourth-and-18 at midfield with 18 seconds left, Broncos quarterback Jared Zabransky threw a 15-yard pass to receiver Drisan James, who lateraled the ball to wide receiver Jerard Rabb, and Rabb raced the other 35 yards to the end zone for the game-tying touchdown.

During overtime, after Sooners running back Adrian Peterson scored on the first play, Boise State again faced a fourth-down situation, and again used deception to prevail. Zabransky went into motion, and the ball was snapped to receiver Vinny Perretta, who rolled right and tossed a six-yard score to tight end Derek Schouman. Now down one, the Broncos elected to go for the win, and boldly called for "Statue."

In a play better designed for sandlot football, Zabransky took the snap, faked a throw to his right and in the same motion, moved the ball behind his back to running back Ian Johnson, who scampered to his left untouched into the end zone. With just three plays, the Broncos had shocked the world and captivated a nation of college football fans.

Behind all of those tricks and gadgets was Chris Petersen, who, in his first year as head coach, led the Broncos to a 12-0 record, their fifth straight WAC title and first BCS bowl championship. Boise State also finished fifth overall in the national polls, the team's highest ranking in its 39-year football history.

Before taking over for Dan Hawkins (who left to coach Colorado), Petersen was Boise State's offensive coordinator from 2001-05. His biggest success came with the quarterbacks, as Ryan Dinwiddie (2001-03) is currently the NCAA's career passing efficiency leader (168.19 rating) and Zabransky graduated with more than 9,000 yards of total offense, along with 58 TDs.

In the offseason, the 42-year-old former UC Davis quarterback signed a new five-year, $4.25 million contract, the highest ever for a Boise State coach. The deal could be more lucrative if the Broncos win 12 or more games (an extra $161,500) and play in another BCS matchup ($100,000). That's quite a step up from his original contract, which was $2.5 million over five years.

Right after finishing up spring practice with the Broncos, Petersen spoke with Street & Smith's Staff Writer Matt McKenzie on various subjects, including his and the team's newfound popularity; the suddenly shrinking gap between so-called BCS and non-BCS schools; and whom he'd choose to play him in a movie role.

S&S: What's been the biggest change for you since the Fiesta Bowl ended and right now?

PETERSEN: There seems to be more demands on my time for non-football stuff, different speaking engagements here and there. Last year, I was new to the job, and I felt like at times I was just running around getting nothing done. But I realized when you're not in football season, there's a lot more stuff that you need to attend to.

S&S: Even though you broke through the mold, is there still a need for a college football playoff?

PETERSEN: That's obviously the million-dollar question. You know, I grew up watching college football and bowl games and have taken part in coaching bowl games too, so I like how it is right now. But is there a need to try and hold a small playoff to decide the national championship? Probably. It's probably coming. But I don't have a problem with how it's set up right now. The debate and arguing over all of it, that's part of the beauty of college football.

S&S: How have you been able to attract BCS-caliber athletes to Boise?

PETERSEN: One thing we've done here is get the right players for us and our system. We're not trying to convince anyone to come here and sell them on Boise State. We really want to point out what makes us different, and how much work is going to be involved here. And the fit has been good both ways. We're all about the things we try to educate the players on and preach day-in and day-out.

S&S: What is your recruiting approach and what can other non-BCS schools learn from it?

PETERSEN: When Coach (Dan) Hawkins was here, he'd have schools come in and ask, "What are you doing here?" But it's not one thing. It never is. If it was, everyone would be doing it. For us, it's a collection and combination of how we do things in order to push our players to be the best.

S&S: Talk about the decision to go for two at the end of the Fiesta Bowl. Was there ever any doubt in your mind to send it to another overtime?

PETERSEN: Well, when we scored at the very end (of regulation), there was talk of going for two right there since we had the momentum back. But we decided to wait it out and head to overtime. Then as soon as Adrian Peterson scored (on Oklahoma's first overtime play), I knew we were going to go for two when we scored. Oklahoma was coming on strong, and they're a very physical team.

You know, playing a team like Oklahoma, they're going to make a run at you. In some ways it was a little bit predictable, although I don't think anyone would predict that we'd throw an interception with just a minute left. But you give a lot of credit to both teams; they were battling and not giving in and that's what you like to see as a college football coach.

S&S: How confident were you and the staff that the hook-and-lateral and the Statue of Liberty plays would work against Oklahoma?

PETERSEN: As soon as we got sacked (with less than a minute left), the time became a huge factor. It was second and 20ish, and (Offensive Coordinator) Brian Harsin said if we get to fourth down, we're probably going to use a play we haven't had to use in five years. We only practice (the hook-and-lateral) on Fridays, and we had never scored, only came close just once. But the kids love to practice those kinds of plays … and we were very fortunate that play worked like it did.

On "Statue," we actually tried to use that play along with the halfback pass (that Boise State scored the TD with in overtime) earlier in the game and it just didn't work out. But those were nice to have in your back pocket. We never had "Statue" as a two-point play, but knew then it would be a good option to use, because it adds deception and we were giving it to one of our best players. You could see how (the Sooners) were lined up in their formation, that it was going to work. Unless we blatantly missed a block, we were in good shape.

S&S: Will there be a whole new stash of trick plays this season?

PETERSEN: I think so, but maybe not as much as last year. We've always kind of been wide-open and explosive; trick plays are only a small part of it. Kids like to practice them. If we think there's a point where it'll work, well, then we'll run them. But that's not what we're all about at Boise State. We're about running the football and playing solid defense—that's what we try to hang our hat on. You know, the expectations here are always high. Two seasons ago, we were 9-4, but it sometimes felt like we were 4-9 because of the expectations. We always want to win games, and a lot of them.

PETERSEN: Well, one thing is the scholarship number. From the outside, 85 scholarships sound like a lot, but it's really not. You end up having guys with injuries, and then, from recruiting, some guys don't necessarily turn out the way you imagined them to. Also, the coaching at the high school levels has gotten so much better. Kids come in ready to do so much more than in the past. For colleges, we're also able to study the pros. Everyone has elevated their game.

S&S: What, in your mind, are the biggest differences in BCS and non-BCS schools and how have the gaps been shortened?

PETERSEN: The main thing is that it starts with money. Facilities and money. You look at BCS schools and see what they have and say, "Wow, that does make a difference." But when you think about our conference, the WAC, we won three out of four bowl games this past year. So the gap is closing and I think (it's) because there's a lot of good football players out there helping with their talent. But, you know, we don't see or think of ourselves as a non-BCS school. Coaches and players don't talk about it and we don't think in those terms; it's really only reporters that bring it up. If we play a Pac-10 or SEC school, those are not the thoughts we have. Everyone else wants to talk about that. We just like to think of ourselves as a successful football program.

IAN JOHNSON, RB

S&S: Do you ever give any thought to moving on from Boise State to a more visible Division I-A program, sort of like Urban Meyer did going from Utah to Florida?

PETERSEN: No, the only thought that crosses my mind is how Boise State is growing and changing. I'm standing in my office right now talking to you and watching the new press box being built. Those are the things getting people excited. As many games as we've won, there is room for improvement. There's always a thought of, "How can we get better?"

S&S: What are your thoughts about last season being made into a movie? (Five different Hollywood production companies have met with school officials to discuss securing story rights). Any casting ideas?

PETERSEN: Well, there are two things. First (there) is going to be a documentary made on last season, which will kind of be neat and give good exposure to the school. As for the Hollywood-type movie, I hadn't really thought about that, because it would probably happen down the road, which is good, because those type things can be kind of a distraction. So I really don't know (about casting). What's that football movie with Al Pacino as a coach?

S&S: "Any Given Sunday."

PETERSEN: Yeah, that's it. I've seen that twice. And that halftime speech Al Pacino does—if I could give a speech like that, I'd be a heck of a coach.

With 30 all-conference players returning, ACC teams are looking to bounce back big

By DAN COLLINS
Winston-Salem Journal

If Wake Forest can win the ACC football championship, who can't?

Certainly everything we all thought we knew about the power structure of the conference was altered dramatically when Wake, a program that has had more winless than winning seasons in ACC play, came out of nowhere last season to win just its second conference title ever.

Job security has never been a perk for ACC coaches, but never before has there been as much pressure on so many. Fans, supporters and administrators from the traditional powers right on down through downtrodden Duke have to wonder why their coach can't accomplish in 2007 what Jim Grobe of the Demon Deacons pulled off in 2006.

All bets are off. If Wake Forest can win the ACC football championship, who can't?

The argument can be made that the Deacons took advantage of a down year in the conference, a year in which Florida State, Miami and Virginia Tech all failed to live up to their lofty standards as national contenders.

That excuse will not be available this season. The conference is loaded with returning starters and stars. Of the 51 players who made first-or second-team All-ACC last season, 30 are back.

If Wake Forest contends again, it will prove that Grobe's patient approach has built not just a great team but a great program. And with experienced juniors and seniors all over their depth chart, the Deacons certainly have the personnel to make another run.

Tommy Bowden's efforts to build a national power at Clemson have yet to produce an ACC championship. The Tigers, who in James Davis and C.J. Spiller could have the best rushing tandem in college football, may possess as much talent as anyone in their division, if not the entire conference. Perhaps this will be their year.

And Georgia Tech returns the nucleus of the team that won the Coastal Division last year, with two notable exceptions. Losing receiver Calvin Johnson, the ACC's Player of the Year, will hurt. Losing quarterback Reggie Ball, whose erratic play proved fatal against Wake Forest, may help.

RECRUITING ROUNDUP

1. MIAMI ▸ Hurricane prep pipeline still flowing with ex-assistant Randy Shannon promoted to head coach.
2. GEORGIA TECH ▸ Coach Chan Gailey has won his share and more on the field. Now he's winning his share and more of head-to-head recruiting battles.
4. CLEMSON ▸ Quarterback Willy Korn is the headliner of another typically good class.
5. FLORIDA STATE ▸ Seminoles have slipped on the field, but brand name remains solid with Florida prep talent.
6. VIRGINIA TECH ▸ Hokies have fended off Virginia's efforts to dominate in-state recruiting.
8. MARYLAND ▸ Coach Ralph Friedgen's reputation as an offensive wizard helped Terps land top offensive talent. Defense? Not so much.
9. BOSTON COLLEGE ▸ Not bad for Coach Jeff Jagodzinski's first effort. Next year, with more time, things should be better.
10. WAKE FOREST ▸ Wake's classes are ranked low year after year, but Deacons won ACC in 2006 with all that undervalued talent.
11. N.C. STATE ▸ Coach Tom O'Brien spent his limited recruiting time focusing on helping the offense, particularly the line.
12. DUKE ▸ Hope springs eternal in Durham, where help is on the way from TE Danny Parker and OT Chris Shannon.

FOUR FEARLESS FORECASTS

1. Wake Forest will prove that it has more talent and experience this season than it did during last year's run to the ACC championship.
2. The departure of four-year starter Reggie Ball will make Georgia Tech a better football team.
3. Tommy Bowden, in his ninth season as head coach, is finally going to bring Clemson an ACC championship.
4. Coach Ralph Friedgen of Maryland will be reminded how hard it is for a first-year starter at quarterback to run his offense.

With NCAA's most explosive tailback tandem, talented Tigers may have what it takes for first title since 1991

That's not the current president first elected in 2000. It's his father, George Herbert Walker Bush, elected in 1988 and president through 1992—notably the year Florida State joined the ACC.

Yes, it has really been that long.

For all of FSU's dominance since, five other schools have either won or shared the conference title with the Seminoles. Virginia's on the list, as is Georgia Tech, Maryland, Virginia Tech and Wake Forest. Clemson, which was last champion in 1991, is not.

Since 1992, two Clemson coaches have been fired during or after seasons in which they lost to Wake Forest. So what happens to the current coach, Tommy Bowden, who was on the job the year the Deacons won it all?

He's entering his ninth season looking for the kind of year that will soothe a restless fan base. Bowden was chin-deep in water hot enough to scald after 2003, the season the Tigers trailed Wake Forest 45-0 on the way to a 45-17 defeat, but he survived.

But the Tiger fans who show up 82,000 strong for home games don't want to just survive. They want to thrive. And they let anyone and everyone know that if they can't thrive with Bowden at the helm, then someone else should get a shot at one of college football's best jobs.

"Yes, I would say it's out there," Bowden told The State newspaper of Columbia, S.C. "I don't listen to it because there are too many facts to say that's not necessarily the case. To me, if you're close, it's an indication that it can be done. The last two years we've been close, not that far away."

Last year the Tigers became the team to beat in the Atlantic Division after back-to-back conference victories over Wake Forest and Georgia Tech. Then Virginia Tech beat them. Then Maryland beat them.

Then, after the Tigers slipped past N.C. State 20-14 at home, South Carolina beat them 31-28 in the biggest game of the season and Kentucky, of all teams, emerged victorious over Bowden's bunch in the Music City Bowl.

Ranked as high as No. 10 after an Oct. 21 victory over Georgia Tech, Clemson finished 8-5 overall and 5-3 in ACC play.

On the surface, it's hard to see how the Tigers will be better in 2007. They lost their best player (defensive end Gaines Adams), their best receiver (Chansi Stuckey), their starting quarterback (Will Proctor), a starting cornerback (Duane Coleman) and four starting offensive linemen to graduation, while the other starting cornerback (C.J. Gaddis) left for the NFL Draft after his junior season.

Clemson has four starters back on offense and seven on defense. Most ACC teams have more. But few programs in the ACC have recruited as consistently well as Clemson has during Bowden's time at the school, suggesting that the lack of experienced starters does not equate to a lack of talent.

There is no lack of athletes who can run, catch, throw and tackle at Clemson. There hasn't been in years. And one of these seasons that talent is going to carry the Tigers back to an ACC championship.

High on the list of the ACC's most talented players are James Davis, C.J. Spiller, Barry Richardson, Jacoby Ford, Nick Watkins and Tramaine Billie.

Davis and Spiller play running back, giving the Tigers one of the strongest backfields in the country. Davis, a 5-11, 205-pound junior, gained 1,187 yards on 203 carries last season and scored 17 touchdowns, good enough to be named first-team All-ACC. Spiller, a 5-11, 190-pound sophomore, gained 938 yards and scored 10 TDs, good enough to be named second-team All-ACC.

Richardson is a 6-7, 320-pound offensive tackle who made first-team all-conference last season. He is a preseason All-American and candidate for the Lombardi and Outland trophies.

Ford is a 5-9, 180-pound sophomore wide receiver who appears to be on the verge of stardom after catching 15 passes for 187 yards and two touchdowns last year, plus returning both a kickoff and a punt for a score. One of the conference's fastest players, Ford won the 2007 ACC indoor track title in the 60 meters with a time of 6.52 seconds.

Watkins is a 6-2, 220-pound senior linebacker who led the team in 2006 with 116 tackles and intercepted three passes. He is a candidate for this

THE NEXT BIG THING

» PHILLIP MERLING, DE

Poised to become the leader of the Tigers' defensive line after the departure of Gaines Adams to the NFL. At 6-5 and 270 pounds, he has a similar size and skill set.

And Billie is a senior linebacker whose return is being widely anticipated after missing last season with a broken ankle. Billie made 93 tackles in 2005, 12 of them in a 13-9 victory over rival South Carolina.

As might be expected given the number of departed starters, Bowden has some deep holes to fill. The most conspicuous is at quarterback, where four previously untested players will battle to replace the graduated Proctor, who completed 183 of 304 passes for 2,353 yards last season, with 16 touchdowns and 11 interceptions.

The favorite among many fans is 6-2, 200-pound Willy Korn, a Parade All-American during his glory days (10,176 yards passing for 125 touchdowns) at nearby James F. Byrnes High School who enrolled last January and participated in spring practice. But the favorite of the coaching staff coming out of spring drills appeared to be Cullen Harper, a 6-4, 215-pound junior who completed 70 percent of his passes and compiled a pass-efficiency rating of 168.1 last season as Proctor's backup.

After watching Harper complete 15 of 24 passes for 147 yards and three touchdowns in the spring game, Bowden was asked what it would take for Harper not to be the starting quarterback for the Sept. 3 opener at home against Florida State.

"He'd have to have a poor offseason and a poor August, which would be out of character for him," Bowden said.

The other candidates are Tribble Reese, a 6-4, 205-pound junior, and Michael Wade, a 6-1, 200-pound freshman who redshirted last season.

The deepest hole to fill is along the offensive line, where four new starters will take the field against Florida State. Though not considered a returning starter, Chris McDuffie, a 6-5, 330-pound senior guard, started five games last season and played 340 snaps. He and Richardson are expected to man the left side.

"We have players returning who saw significant playing time last year, because we had many games in hand in the second half," Bowden says, "so I don't think we are as bad off from an experience standpoint in the offensive line as it might look on paper."

But the most critical hole to fill may be at cornerback, where both of last year's starters, Coleman and Gaddis, must be replaced. The two players who appear to have first crack, based on their experience, are Chris Chancellor, a 5-9, 170-pound sophomore who had 288 plays last season, and Crezdon Butler, a 6-0, 185-pound sophomore who played 248 snaps and intercepted three passes.

Both will have to perform well in August to repel the challenge of Haydrian Lewis, a 5-11, 185-pound junior who played in eight games last season, and Byron Maxwell, a 6-0, 195-pound freshman who redshirted in 2006.

Bowden does not seem concerned about his defense, which a season ago ranked No. 13 in the nation under the command of Defensive Coordinator Vic Koenning.

RECRUITING REPORT

The Tigers reloaded the talent pool on both sides of the ball with their incoming recruiting class.

On offense, Coach Tommy Bowden and his staff received an early commitment from in-state quarterback Willy Korn (6-2, 200), a prep All-American from nationally ranked James F. Byrnes High of Duncan, S.C. Korn passed for 3,485 yards and 39 touchdowns while running for 14 scores as a senior in the Rebels' spread offense.

Rangy wide receiver Xavier Dye (6-4, 195) from Greenwood, S.C., will be a big target, as will tight end Brian Linthicum (6-4, 227) from St. Anne's-Belfield School in Charlottesville, Va.

But defense is what the Tigers focused on in this recruiting class.

Starting with shutdown cornerback Marcus Gilchrist (5-11, 175) and safety DeAndre McDaniel (6-1, 190), the future of the secondary should be in good hands. Gilchrist hails from High Point, N.C., and McDaniel comes from Hargrave Military Academy, a Virginia prep school.

Arriving from the Virginia high school ranks is Andre Branch (6-4, 235), a candidate for outside linebacker or defensive end.

Possible impact linebackers include in-state product Scotty Cooper (6-0, 206) and Brandon Maye (6-2, 225), who hails from Alabama. Defensive end Rennie Moore (6-5, 260) is a touted Georgia prep product.

Other key recruits include tight end Chad Diehl (6-2, 235), a prep teammate of Korn; defensive tackle Jarvis Jenkins (6-4, 295); offensive linemen Wilson Norris (6-5, 320) and David Smith (6-5, 255); plus Landon Walker (6-6, 275), who could be tested on either side of the ball.

Warning: Coming off ACC championship, Deacs believe they're just starting to peak

After a decade of riding the stormiest seas of college football, Wake Forest's ship finally came in last season.

Unbeknownst to most, it actually hit port a year earlier than expected.

Only those who have followed the program closely over Jim Grobe's six years as coach know that the target season for accomplishing something really special was 2007.

They expected the Deacons to be good in 2006—good enough to have a winning season and return to a bowl game for the first time since 2002.

But the real payday for Grobe's patient, tackle-by-tackle, linebacker-by-linebacker approach to building a football team—the year the Deacons, given the right breaks, might actually contend for an ACC championship—was supposed to be 2007.

"Everybody thought that," defensive end Matt Robinson says. "It came a little earlier. We've just got to keep it rolling."

Truth be told, the 2007 Deacons have every reason to believe they'll be deeper, more experienced and more talented than the team that a season ago set a school record with 11 victories, won the ACC championship and played in the Orange Bowl.

Having redshirted his freshmen en masse, Grobe built last year's team around fourth-year juniors and third-year sophomores. This season, the Deacons could open at Boston College with as many as 10 fifth-year seniors (or 11 if they start with two tight ends) and 10 fourth-year juniors among their top 22.

Another player almost certain to start is Jeremy Thompson, a senior defensive end who did not redshirt.

Put another way, there are 27 players on the roster who have started at least one game and 17 who have started at least 10 games.

One who has started 21 games is Robinson, who is back in the picture after missing last season with a broken kneecap.

"On both sides of the ball, there are a lot of old guys," Robinson says. "I can think back [when] we were all starting as freshmen. The whole [defensive] line was almost all freshmen and sophomores, and the linebackers were almost all freshmen and sophomores.

"It's looking like now like it's all juniors and seniors. We knew it was coming. We talked about how the day was going to come. It's here where you'd better watch out when we're out there."

A year ago, the Deacons survived misfortunes that would have scuttled lesser teams.

Ben Mauk, the starting quarterback, was sidelined for the season by a broken arm suffered in the first game. Riley Skinner, a little-known freshman who had never played, was thrust into the breach.

Micah Andrews, the starting tailback, was sidelined for the season by a torn knee ligament suffered in the third game. A game of musical chairs ensued that ended with a wide receiver, Kenneth Moore, being moved to tailback while the Deacs, for the first time in Grobe's tenure, struggled to establish a reliable ground game.

In Grobe's previous five seasons, the Deacons had never averaged less than 197.5 rushing yards a game. In 2006, they produced 149.9

And Robinson, who led the Deacons with 4.5 sacks in 2005, was expected to return by midseason, but never did.

All of those issues have been resolved. Mauk left the program with intentions to play at the University of Cincinnati after Skinner emerged to become ACC Rookie of the Year and the second-team All-ACC quarterback. Andrews missed spring practice, but is expected to be recovered by fall. And Robinson participated in all 14 practices during the spring and played well in the spring scrimmage.

The four players the Deacons will miss most are tackle Steve Vallos, safeties Josh Gattis and Patrick Ghee and linebacker Jon Abbate. Vallos was the leader of the offensive line, Gattis and Ghee were two of the ACC's most experienced and best defensive backs, and Abbate was a defensive force who chose to enter the NFL Draft after leading the Deacons in tackles all three seasons he played.

Steve Justice, a first-team All-ACC center, will assume Vallos' role on the offensive line, while linebacker, according to Grobe, remains the Deacons' deepest position even without Abbate. Grobe was worried enough about his safeties that he moved Kevin Patterson, who has started 18 games at cornerback, there during the spring. By the end of spring, Grobe said he was much more confident about filling the cleats of Gattis and Ghee.

A much greater concern is the mental approach the Deacons take into the season. For whatever reason, be it the size of the school (around 4,000 undergraduates) or the lack of a successful tradition, Wake Forest has rarely excelled in a favorite's role.

For the Deacons to succeed in 2007, they'll have to.

"The biggest danger for us is we've got to realize what got us to the Orange Bowl and an ACC championship," Grobe says. "That was lots of hard work and playing hard on Saturday.

"It's nice to get some attention. I feel good for our football team. They deserve it. But at the same time I think the hardest thing to do is to have the kind of season we just had and come back the next season and have another good football team again. Getting there is kind of fun, but staying there is the toughest part."

Andrews, whose father, William Andrews, was a star running back with the Atlanta Falcons in the 1980s, was the heir apparent to Chris Barclay, who graduated after the 2005 season having set the school's all-time rushing and scoring records. Andrews gained 618 yards as a backup to Barclay in 2005 and 256 in less than three games last season.

He'll have to regain confidence in his knee, which was surgically repaired last October. At any rate, he will likely share the position, at least early, with Kevin Harris, De'Angelo Bryant, Josh Adams and Lucas Caparelli. Harris is a sophomore who gained 393 yards on 78 carries last season, while Bryant is a senior who gained 336 yards on 84 carries. Adams and Caparelli are highly regarded freshmen who sat out last season as redshirts.

Moore, who led the team last season with 507 yards on 105 carries, has returned to wide receiver. Grobe says he will experiment with various ways of getting him the football.

THE NEXT BIG THING

» ERIC BERRY, LB

A big man to fill some big shoes. Berry is the reason the Deacons didn't anguish over the loss of departed star Jon Abbate.

The offensive line was a disappointment through most of last season. The unit should be stronger in 2007, especially if Justice remains healthy; if Chris DeGeare, a 362-pound junior guard, emerges as the next star; and if Jeff Griffin, a sophomore pressed into action last season at tackle, progresses as expected.

The return of Robinson should make one of the deepest defensive lines in Wake Forest history that much deeper. Even with the loss of Abbate, the Deacons have never had as many good linebackers. The best is probably Aaron Curry, a junior who should contend for All-ACC honors after finishing second on the team last season with 83 tackles.

In the secondary, cornerback Alphonso Smith recovered from a dismal first half in 2006 to play well down the stretch. He'll be a team leader this season. At the other corner, the move of Patterson to safety was a vote of confidence to several young cornerbacks, among them junior Kerry Major, sophomores Channing Schofield and Brandon Ghee and redshirt freshman Marcus Williams.

Sam Swank, the All-ACC placekicker and honorable mention All-ACC punter last season, had surgery in April to repair a hernia that he first noticed warming up for the Orange Bowl. The most indispensable player on the team, Swank is expected to be fully recovered by the first game.

"There's no one in the country that can come out on the field and beat us," Robinson says. "But we also realize that there's no one that we can't get beat by. So as long as we keep that in our heads—that we can be beaten by anybody or we can beat anybody—we'll be all right."

RECRUITING REPORT

The Demon Deacons' coaching staff went to Ohio to land a versatile athlete in Skylar Jones (6-1, 186) from Middletown. Jones can be utilized at several positions and looks as if he could be next in line at quarterback after Riley Skinner graduates.

A rangy wide receiver who could play early is Danny Dembry (6-2, 173). Other promising first-year pass catchers in this class are Florida-bred Jordan Williams (6-3, 180) and Cameron Ford (6-4, 212), a South Carolina product who could play either wide receiver or tight end. All should give Skinner plenty of options.

The offense also received a boost with the signing of running back Brandon Pendergrass (5-9, 196) of Royal Palm Beach (Fla.) High.

On defense, in-state product John Stamper (6-0, 185) is a touted defensive back from Winston-Salem.

The offensive-line newcomers include Texas prep product Ryan Britt (6-4, 290), Michael Hoag (6-6, 290) from Tennessee and in-state talent Doug Weaver (6-8, 290).

The Deacons landed recruits from eight states, identifying skill-position athletes as a priority to fit into the tricky offense utilized by Grobe and staff.

Bowden looking for coaching carousel to spin him some more wins in Seminole country

The most predictable moment in one of the most unpredictable games in ACC football history arrived a nanosecond—if that—after the final horn sounded on Wake Forest's 30-0 victory over Florida State last November at Doak Campbell Stadium.

The switch was thrown that turned the scoreboard off. If you have a photograph that shows a scoreboard reading "Wake Forest 30, FSU 0" with 0:00 on the clock, cherish it. There can't be many.

Before the scoreboard could go dark, however, the realization had already come to light throughout the ACC. The world as we knew it, the one in which FSU dominated the conference in football, had changed.

Yes, Wake Forest was experiencing the greatest season in its history. Yes, FSU had a bad night.

But the Seminoles don't get shut out at home by anybody, least of all Wake Forest. At least they never had before in Bobby Bowden's 31 years as head coach.

Significant changes to a program that won or shared 12 championships in its first 14 ACC seasons were afoot, and would be announced after the Seminoles beat UCLA in the Emerald Bowl to salvage a 7-6 record—thus avoiding FSU's first losing season since 1976, Bowden's first year on the job.

Five assistants were shown the door; five new ones arrived. Those exiting included Bowden's son, Jeff, the Seminoles' offensive coordinator the last six seasons. Those arriving included Jimbo Fisher, who left LSU to replace Jeff.

Three other coaches were hired to help Fisher retool an offense that finished 2006 last in the ACC in rushing offense and fourth in total offense. And Bowden, who turned 77 the same month his team was skunked at home by Wake Forest, says he will let Fisher and his new coaches have at it.

"Especially on the offensive side, when you replace four of five coaches, you are not going to ask them to come in and do the same thing you were doing before," Bowden says. "You are going to ask your new coordinator to come in and put the offense he thinks is best, that he knows the best and he thinks fits our personnel the best.

"That's going to be interesting to see. Our offensive staff, with Jimbo heading it up, they will be in complete control of that offense."

Fisher and company will have plenty to work with. The Seminoles have six offensive starters returning, including Greg Carr, a 6-6 wide receiver who caught 34 passes last season for 619 yards and 12 touchdowns. And though one of the departing players was Lorenzo Booker, last season's leading rusher, there's sufficient evidence to suspect that his replacement, junior Antone Smith, may be every bit as good, if not better.

Job one for Fisher and the offensive staff will be deciding between juniors Drew Weatherford and Xavier Lee at quarterback. Weatherford started 10 games last season, which he ended in impressive fashion by completing 21 of 43 passes for 325 yards in a 44-27 victory against UCLA in the Emerald Bowl. But his overall body of work, which included 11 interceptions on 318 passes, was erratic enough that Lee remained an option.

Lee, for the season, completed 62 of 121 passes, while throwing five interceptions.

Bowden says the decision on who starts belongs to Fisher. "I haven't said one thing to Jimbo about the quarterbacks," Bowden says. "I wanted him to have an unbiased opinion."

The Seminoles have eight returning starters on defense, including Andre Fluellen and Myron Rolle. Fluellen made second-team All-ACC last season as a nose tackle and Rolle was named a first-team Freshman All-American at safety by Sporting News.

Jagodzinski has talent in place to keep BC bowl streak alive

Offensive tackle Gosder Cherilus returned to Boston College this season to complete some unfinished business.

"Now it's my class' turn to pick up the slack and help us get to the next level, which is the ACC championship," Cherilus told the Boston Herald, explaining why he had put off entering the NFL Draft until his eligibility at BC expires.

Coach Tom O'Brien, on the other hand, intimated that he had done about all he felt he could do at BC. That's how he explained his reasons for leaving the Eagles to become the new coach at N.C. State.

"At BC, nine or 10 wins was about as good as you could do," O'Brien said. "The sky is the limit [at N.C. State]. We're not here to win nine or 10 a year. We're here to win more."

So who's right: the offensive tackle or the coach? This is the year we should all find out.

Jeff Jagodzinski, hired off the staff of the Green Bay Packers to replace O'Brien, is walking into a situation much better than that of most first-year coaches. Usually a coaching change is made because the previous coach couldn't get the job done. O'Brien got the job done, winning at least eight games in each of his final six seasons at BC and leaving with a streak of eight straight bowl games.

And upon departing for Raleigh, O'Brien left behind a BC roster chock-full of proven players. Seven starters return on offense, including Cherilus, running back L.V. Whitworth and Matt Ryan, last year's first-team All-ACC quarterback. Nine starters are back on defense, including the entire front seven—assuming senior linebacker Brian Toal returns from shoulder surgery last winter.

The most significant changes, then, will be the coaching staff and the system it plans to implement. Seven of Jagodzinski's nine coaches are new, including Steve Logan, the former head coach at East Carolina who was hired as the Eagles' offensive coordinator. Jagodzinski, who served as offensive coordinator at Green Bay last season, and Logan have installed an offense that relies more heavily on zone blocking. The Eagles have traditionally had the largest offensive linemen in the ACC. This year, Cherilus and company have been asked to lose weight in order to gain more mobility and agility.

The requisite talent certainly appears to be on hand. Ryan, a 6-5, 218-pound senior, completed 263 of 427 passes last year for 2,942 yards and 15 touchdowns, despite playing most of the season on a broken foot. He threw 10 interceptions.

Ryan's main targets are expected to be senior Kevin Challenger, who caught 47 passes for 543 yards and five touchdowns last year, and junior Brandon Robinson (36 catches, 490 yards).

Whitworth, a 5-11, 216-pound senior, gained 791 yards on 174 carries, while Andre Callender, a 5-11, 204-pound senior, picked up 633 on 146 tries.

The Eagles should have a similar look defensively after ranking fourth in the ACC last season in scoring defense and seventh in total defense. Frank Spaziani returns for his 11th season as a BC assistant and his ninth as defensive coordinator. After O'Brien's departure, Spaziani coached the Eagles to a 25-24 victory over Navy in the Meineke Car Care Bowl.

Spaziani has reason to be optimistic this season. He'll have even more reason if Toal, who doubles as a short-yardage back, can return 100 percent from shoulder surgery. But with or without Toal, the BC defense is loaded with experience, depth and talent.

B.J. Raji, a 6-1, 340-pound senior, made second-team All-ACC last season at defensive tackle. Cornerback DeJuan Tribble was second-team All-ACC.

THE NEXT BIG THING

» BRANDON ROBINSON, WR

Should evolve from solid starter into No. 1 target for QB Matt Ryan. Gives Eagles downfield speed to stretch defenses.

#5 » MARYLAND TERRAPINS

PRESEASON RANK

The case can be made that it's ridiculous to pick Maryland fifth. Another case is being made here that there are four other teams in the division that, based on what they lost and have coming back, should finish higher.

That says more about the strength of the ACC's Atlantic Division than it does the weaknesses of a team with 14 starters returning from a 9-4 season coached by a man who's as good at what he does as Ralph Friedgen.

The Terps actually played for the division championship last year, but lost at home to Wake Forest 38-24 in the showdown game. One big reason for Maryland's success last season was that—unlike several other notable teams in the ACC—it received solid-to-first-rate play at quarterback.

The quarterback the last two seasons, Sam Hollenbach, was lost to spent eligibility. He was better as a senior than as a junior, which probably came as no surprise to Friedgen.

The only quarterback on the roster with any experience is junior Jordan Steffy, Hollenbach's backup last season. Among the cast of contenders is Josh Portis, a former high school sensation who transferred two years ago from the University of Florida and sat out last season. Portis played only a handful of plays for the Gators in 2005 as a first-year freshman.

Whoever plays quarterback will have to do so without the protection Stephon Heyer provided last season at left tackle. Three starters return on the offensive line, but right tackle Jared Gaither's was held out of spring practice to concentrate on academics and his status was uncertain at press time.

The Terps do have two proven running backs in Lance Ball and Keon Lattimore.

Friedgen likes his depth on defense, but will have to replace three starters on the defensive line and two starting linebackers.

#6 » N.C. STATE WOLFPACK

PRESEASON RANK

The first time quarterback Daniel Evans of N.C. State ever met Tom O'Brien was on the field after Evans had thrown a touchdown pass to beat O'Brien's team from Boston College.

When Evans got to know O'Brien better—after N.C. State introduced him as the Wolfpack's new football coach—there were no surprises.

"He's exactly what you think he is—straight-laced, disciplined, a former Marine," Evans told the Raleigh News & Observer.

If "straight-laced and disciplined" sounds like a radical departure from Chuck Amato, the Wolfpack coach for the past seven years, that's probably no coincidence. Amato rubbed many in Raleigh the wrong way, often as much for his brash, flamboyant personality as his 25-31 ACC record that included three straight losses to rival North Carolina.

O'Brien, not exactly the warm-and-fuzzy type, was difficult for some BC fans to warm up to as well. But after seven years of Amato, the anti-Chuck should play well in Raleigh.

That's if the Wolfpack plays well. If he can get solid play at quarterback from Evans, redshirt freshman Justin Burke or sophomore Harrison Beck, a transfer from Nebraska, then O'Brien could launch one of the real surprises of the 2007 ACC season.

N.C. State has 13 starters returning from a 3-9 team. Eight return on offense, including two of the ACC's most talented running backs in Andre Brown and Toney Baker.

The defense is anybody's guess. Because most of O'Brien's practices are closed, it will remain that way at least until the opener against Central Florida. Senior DeMario Pressley, who has started 24 games at defensive tackle, is one of five starters returning from a unit that finished eighth in the ACC in total defense.

Responding to tragedy, Beamer determined that Hokies will make this a special season for Tech

For a long time now, football has meant a whole lot to a whole lot of people at Virginia Tech.

Come the 2007 football season, it promises to mean even more.

If Coach Frank Beamer knows his school, the Virginia Tech community will rally around the football team as fans, faculty and students try to make sense of the senseless tragedy that blindsided the university in April. Although a sad, twisted gunman may have been aiming for the heart of Virginia Tech when he went on the rampage that killed 33—including himself—Beamer says that by September it will be obvious the shooter missed his mark.

"I think when we open up against East Carolina in Lane Stadium next fall, there will be a togetherness in that stadium that we've never seen before," Beamer says. "And it's been a very together place. There have been a lot of exciting moments and a lot of great fan support, great alumni support, great student support and great faculty support that has helped us win a lot of football games in that stadium.

"But if I know Hokie people, it will be tighter than ever next fall."

Football season is always highly anticipated in Blacksburg, where the Hokies have won no fewer than eight games since 1997. But this season had the makings of a special one even before insanity intruded on the university community tucked away in a mountainous corner of southwest Virginia.

The Hokies were good in 2006 when they finished 10-3 and won at least 10 games for the fifth time in six seasons. This year, with 16 starters returning, they should be even better.

Eight players are back from a defense that a year ago could lay claim to the distinction of college football's best. The Hokies led NCAA Division I football last season in total defense and scoring defense, giving up just 219.5 yards and a meager 11 points a game.

And among the eight back on offense are a first-team All-ACC running back (Branden Ore), a second-team all-conference tackle (Duane Brown) and a quarterback (Sean Glennon) who should be even better in his second year as a starter. Glennon, a 6-4, 221-pound junior, completed 170 of 302 passes for 2,191 yards last season. An emphasis this year is to improve his touchdown-to-interception ratio after he threw for 11 of each in 2006.

But starting with the defense—as it always does at Virginia Tech—the Hokies have a chance to be even tougher to score against this season than last. Two returning starters on defense, linebacker Vince Hall and cornerback Brandon Flowers, made first-team All-ACC last season. Another linebacker, Xavier Adibi, made the second team.

"We've got eight guys returning as starters from last year, but we can't be complacent," Foster says. "We've got to continue to improve.

"The overall mood is to continue to grow and develop as a unit. We need to develop as a unit and, obviously with it being a new year, we need to develop our chemistry as a unit."

The most experienced position group on defense is the line, where Chris Ellis, Carlton Powell and Barry Booker—three fifth-year seniors—have combined for 247 tackles, 49.5 tackles for loss and 18 sacks in their careers. Ellis missed spring practice while recovering from shoulder surgery, but is expected back.

The two biggest questions for Foster up front are who will replace the one player lost to spent eligibility (defensive end Noland Burchette) and whether Kory Robertson's time has finally arrived. Junior Orion Martin is battling it out with sophomore Nekos Brown and redshirt freshman Jason Adjepong for the starting end position opposite Ellis. Robertson, who had only 16 tackles last season, is a 6-2, 335-pound fifth-year senior who, according to Defensive Line Coach Charley Wiles, is the best NFL prospect on the Hokies' defensive front.

The return of Hall and Adibi all but guarantees the Hokies will be as talented at linebacker as any team in the conference. Foster describes Hall, who led the Hokies with 128 tackles last season, as the best linebacker he has coached in his 20 years at Virginia Tech. And Adibi, who finished second on the team with 82 tackles, isn't too shabby either.

The hope is that someone will emerge as a front-line player at the position vacated by outside linebacker Brenden Hill. Senior Corey Gordon, Hill's backup last season, gets the first shot, but is being pressed by sophomores Cody Grimm and Cam Martin and redshirt freshman Steven Friday.

Foster says the Hokies also need to develop depth from that group.

Both starting cornerbacks, Flowers and Victor "Macho" Harris, return. Flowers, a junior, was named a third-team All-American by the Associated Press last season after leading the ACC with 21 passes defended. Harris, a junior, led the Hokies with four interceptions.

D.J. Parker returns after starting last season at free safety, leaving the rover position vacated by Aaron Rouse and Cary Wade as the only hole to fill. Dorian Porch, a sophomore, emerged from spring practice as the starter at rover, but the Hokie coaches are excited about the potential of Kam Chancellor, a sophomore who was moved there from cornerback after the departure of Rouse and Wade.

The Hokies were inconsistent last season at quarterback and on the offensive line, and as a result ranked eighth in the ACC in rushing offense and ninth in total offense.

Three starters return on the offensive line, but two are playing new positions. Brown, a 6-5, 290-pound senior, has been moved from right tackle to left tackle, while Ryan Shuman, a 6-3, 318-pound junior, has been moved from left guard to center. Sergio Render, a 6-3, 320-pound sophomore, returns at right guard.

Tight end was an area of concern much of last season, but should be improved with the experience gained by sophomores Sam Wheeler and Greg Boone. Both are being pushed by Andre Smith, a 6-4, 238-pound freshman who sat out last season as a redshirt.

Ore, a 5-11, 202-pound junior, gained 1,137 yards on 241 carries and scored 16 touchdowns last season. He's strong and hard-nosed enough to gain tough yards inside but is also a touchdown threat every time he gets the ball.

Virginia Tech should have more depth at running back with the continued development of Kenny Lewis, a sophomore who gained 215 yards last season on 54 carries. Billy Hite, the Hokies' longtime running backs coach, says Lewis is among the hardest-working players he has ever coached.

But for Ore or Lewis to have a productive season, the Hokies will need to find a fullback who blocked as well as the departed Jesse Allen. Carlton Weatherford, a former walk-on, emerged from spring practice as the starter, but Kenny Jefferson, a redshirt sophomore, was known for his blocking ability in high school.

The Hokies, for a long time now, have been talented and they've been successful. This season they will also be inspired.

"I'll tell you one thing," Beamer says. "We absolutely will not give in to one person coming in here and causing all this pain and suffering. We're too proud of a group of people."

THE NEXT BIG THING

» KOREY ROBERTSON, DT

Described by his position coach as the best NFL prospect on the Hokies' defensive front. Should improve on his 16 tackles of last season.

RECRUITING REPORT

Two high school All-America offensive players (Tyrod Taylor and Darren Evans) highlight the Hokies' recruiting class, which includes 25 scholarship recipients.

Taylor (6-2, 185), a quarterback from the talent-rich Tidewater area of Hampton, Va., was a major in-state coup for Coach Frank Beamer and his staff. Taylor reminds some observers of former Virginia Tech quarterbacks Michael Vick and Bryan Randall, as he is a threat with his arm and legs. As a starter, Taylor passed for 5,144 yards and 44 touchdowns and rushed for 2,546 yards and 56 scores in his prep career.

Joining Taylor in the backfield is fullback Evans (6-1, 217), who hails from nationally ranked Warren Central High in Indianapolis. Evans not only helped Warren Central to four Class 5A state titles, but he also set a state record with 61 rushing touchdowns his senior year while gaining 2,806 rushing yards. For his efforts, he was named the 2006 EA Sports National Player of the Year.

Other key offensive players are linemen Blake DeChristopher (6-6, 310) and Will Alvarez (6-5, 315), a pair of touted in-state prospects, plus tight end Greg Nosal (6-5, 255), who could be converted to tackle.

Another running back with quality credentials is North Carolinian Josh Oglesby (6-0, 205).

Tech had the nation's No. 1 defense last season and hopes to carry on the tradition with defensive backs Davon Morgan (6-2, 190) and Cris Hill (5-11, 190).

Linebacker recruits include Florida-bred Hunter Ovens (6-2, 220) and in-state product Quillie Odom (6-2, 205).

Yellow Jackets may have even more of a Ball on offense with a QB not named Reggie

Georgia Tech had a Ball in 2006, when it won the ACC's Coastal Division and was invited to play in a bowl for the 10th straight season.

And now that quarterback Reggie Ball is gone, the Yellow Jackets could have even more fun in 2007.

In what may well be the classic example of addition by subtraction, Georgia Tech promises to be more potent offensively this season than last. Losing Calvin Johnson, the ACC's Player of the Year, will hurt, but the blow might be softened by the simultaneous departure of Ball.

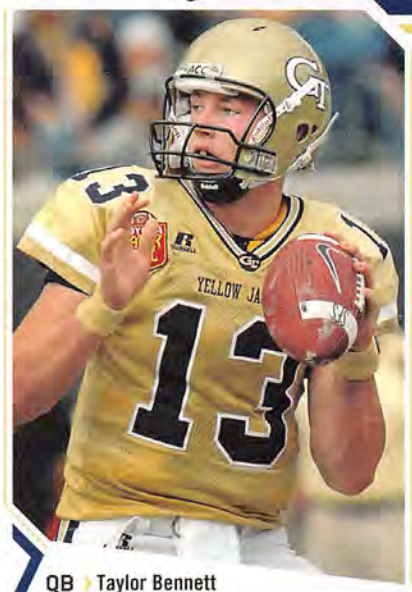
Though he started 49 games at Georgia Tech, including all 13 last season before being ruled academically ineligible for the Gator Bowl, Ball remained a controversial figure along Bobby Dodd Way. He was quick and elusive enough to make big plays, but erratic enough to throw 55 interceptions over his four years as a starter.

Ball's career ended badly. In his final two games against Georgia in the regular-season finale and Wake Forest in the ACC championship, Ball completed 15 of 51 passes while throwing four interceptions. And that was as good an explanation as any for why an offense that featured Johnson and running back Tashard Choice, the ACC's leading rusher, managed only 12 points against Georgia and six against Wake Forest.

Coach Chan Gailey's support for Ball remained steadfast, a position that wasn't exactly strengthened by the Yellow Jackets' performance against West Virginia in the Gator Bowl. Although Georgia Tech lost to the Mountaineers 38-35, Taylor Bennett, filling in for Ball, completed 19 of 29 passes for three touchdowns. His 326 yards passing were more than Bell's final three starts combined (293 yards).

"We know Taylor can get the job done," Choice says.

Bennett, a junior from St. Louis, is expected to win the job outright for this season. With consistent quarterback play from Bennett or one of the others competing to replace Ball (a list that includes freshman Steven Threet and redshirt freshman Byron Ingram), the Jackets could be potent offensively.



QB » Taylor Bennett

DENNIS HUBBARD

Choice, a 6-1, 205-pound senior, averaged 105.2 yards a game last season and scored 12 touchdowns. Fullback Mike Cox, an accomplished blocker who missed spring practices while recovering from shoulder surgery, returns as a senior. Junior James Johnson, the "Other Johnson" in the Yellow Jackets' receiving corps last season, caught 39 passes for 608 yards and seven touchdowns.

And four starters return on the offensive line—junior Andrew Gardner at tackle, seniors Matt Rhodes and Nate McManus at guard and senior Kevin Tuminello at center. Although Gardner is the most decorated of the group, all are experienced. The quartet has combined for 113 career starts.

John Bond, who has spent the last three seasons at Northern Illinois, replaced Patrick Nix as Georgia Tech's offensive coordinator after Nix left for an assistant's job at Miami. Bond's first-season priorities will be finding a right tackle, a tight end and a couple of receivers.

"We are keeping the same terminology and a lot of the same characteristics of our offense," Gailey says. "We'll be using a lot of the same formations and personnel groupings."

Junior A.J. Smith and sophomore Cord Howard are battling it out at tackle, though Howard missed spring practices because of shoulder surgery. Colin Peek, who was redshirted last season as a sophomore, is expected to

In 2006, the Yellow Jackets ranked sixth in the ACC in total defense, fifth in rushing defense, second in pass-efficiency defense and seventh in scoring defense. With three defensive linemen, two linebackers, two safeties and a cornerback returning from last year's starting lineup, the defense has a chance to be better.

Jon Tenuta, in his sixth season as Georgia Tech's defensive coordinator, will rely on two proven veterans at linebacker in seniors Philip Wheeler and Gary Guyton. Wheeler, who plays in the middle, was second on the Yellow Jackets with 89 tackles last season, and led the team with nine sacks and 14.5 tackles for loss. Guyton had 29 tackles, eight for losses, and returned a fumble for a touchdown in a victory over Virginia Tech.

"We have two returning linebackers who are very good players in Philip Wheeler and Gary Guyton," Gailey says. "We've got to find out who's going to fill that other spot, and we've got to find backups for all those guys."

Sophomore Shane Bowen, who played in 13 games last season, has the first crack at one outside-linebacker position. His main rival is Anthony Barnes, who redshirted last season as a freshman.

Both starting safeties, Jamal Lewis and Djay Jones, return this season, although Jones missed spring practice while recovering from a shoulder surgery. Lewis is the leader of the secondary after making first-team All-ACC last season with three interceptions and 74 tackles.

The hope is that junior Jahi Word-Daniels can get the job done at the cornerback spot opposite senior Avery Roberson (seven starts in '06), with help from senior Pat Clark. Word-Daniels started six games last year, including the Gator Bowl against West Virginia, and had two interceptions and 13 passes broken up.

The defensive line should be talented and deep. The leader is Adamm Oliver, a senior defensive end who made second-team All-ACC last season with 70 tackles, 11 of them for losses. On the other side, senior Darrell Robertson is expected to be a mainstay after starting four games in 2006.

Junior Michael Johnson, who played mostly on passing downs last season, provides quality depth on the corner.

The main issue will be who replaces Joe Anoai, a three-year starter at defensive tackle. Darryl Richard, a junior who started 13 games in 2006, is solid at one spot, and juniors Vance Walker and Elris Anyaibe are vying for playing time at the other.

"Probably the strongest area of our football team is our defensive line, with guys who have played quite a few plays," Gailey says. "You can never have too many defensive linemen. We've got some great speed up front, and we've got some bigger bodies than we've had in the past.

"We're looking forward to seeing how that all meshes together."

Georgia Tech's special teams are as special as any in the ACC. Punter Durant Brooks led the nation last season with 45.52 yards per punt and ranked second with a net of 40.67 yards. And kicker Travis Bell, who made 12 of 18 field-goal attempts last year, has successfully kicked 38 for his career. He ranks third in school history with 215 points.

Tech's experience should serve it well early. It opens at Notre Dame Sept. 1.

THE NEXT BIG THING

» TAYLOR BENNETT, QB

Proved by passing for 326 yards and three touchdowns in the Gator Bowl that he's ready to take over for the departed Reggie Ball.

RECRUITING REPORT

Coach Chan Gailey and his staff are all smiles after landing arguably the top Tech recruiting class in the last decade.

First-year Yellow Jackets include Georgia's Class 5A Offensive Player of the Year in running back Jonathan Dwyer (6-0, 197) from Kell High in Marietta, as well as defensive end Derrick Morgan (6-4, 275) from Coatesville, Pa., who enrolled in the spring, and safety Morgan Burnett (6-1, 182) from North Clayton High in College Park, Ga.

Replacing All-America wide receiver Calvin Johnson will be a tough task, but Texas product Tyler Melton (6-0, 182) could be the go-to guy of the future. If not, look for in-state product D.J. Donley (6-4, 218) to step forward. Both received high marks among recruiting analysts.

Quarterback Reggie Ball is also gone and his replacement could either be Steven Threet (6-5, 230) of Michigan or in-state recruit Josh Nesbitt (6-1, 204).

In an aggressive haul on defense, Tech landed end Jason Peters (6-4, 270) from Louisiana; defensive backs Mario Butler (6-2, 180) of Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla., and Jerrard Tarrant (6-0, 187) of Carrollton, Ga.; and linebacker Brad Jefferson (6-2, 215) from Johnson County (Ga.) High, the alma mater of Heisman-winning former Georgia running back Herschel Walker.

Tech made the most out of the 20-scholarship limitation this recruiting season.

With one of their own as coach, 'Canes look to recapture glory

Success, as the football programs of Duke and Miami reminded us last season, is a relative term.

At Duke, where the Blue Devils finished 0-12 and ran their conference losing streak to 17, Coach Ted Roof was retained. At Miami, where the Hurricanes finished 7-6, Coach Larry Coker was fired.

This was the same Larry Coker whose record in six seasons at Miami was 60-15. This was the same Larry Coker whose Hurricanes won the national title in 2001 and played for the championship again in 2002. This was the same Larry Coker with three years remaining on his contract, one that paid him a reported $2 million a season.

But in making the announcement that Coker's services would no longer be required, Athletics Director Paul Dee made it clear the decision was related to the Hurricanes' 12 losses in the past three years. Miami, which won its first 25 games with Coker as coach, was 9-3 in both 2004 and 2005.

So it all comes now to Randy Shannon, a four-year letterman at Miami who played linebacker for the 1987 national champions. For the past six seasons, Shannon has been the Hurricanes' defensive coordinator, and has performed so well in that role that his defense has been ranked in the top seven in the nation five times.

If the recruiting rankings over Coker's tenure at Miami are to be believed, the requisite talent appears to be on hand to win. The Hurricanes have nine starters returning on offense, including receiver Lance Leggett and running back Javarris James. They have eight starters back on defense, led by defensive end Calais Campbell and safety Kenny Phillips.

Leggett caught 38 passes last year for 584 yards. James, in his first season of college football, gained 802 yards on 175 carries. Campbell ranked No. 15 in Division I-A with 10.5 sacks, while Phillips had 71 tackles and four interceptions despite missing three games with a broken thumb.

There are five new coaches on staff, including Patrick Nix, the former Auburn quarterback. As offensive coordinator, the position he held the past two seasons at Georgia Tech, Nix spent the spring judging the quarterback battle between Kyle Wright and Kirby Freeman.

Wright started the first nine games in 2006, completing 152 of 250 passes for 1,655 yards. He threw seven interceptions—not bad for so many attempts—but only eight touchdown passes. Freeman started the final four games, which Wright missed because of a broken thumb. Freeman completed 59 of 108 passes for 872 yards, but threw eight interceptions and just seven touchdowns.

Either choice would benefit from increased production in the ground game. The Hurricanes were sixth in the ACC last season in total offense, despite finishing third in passing. James has been favorably compared with his cousin, Edgerrin James, the former Miami rushing star and current Arizona Cardinal. One year removed from high school, Javarris gained 148 yards against Houston, 111 against North Carolina and 113 against Georgia Tech.

The offensive line should be more experienced, with four starters returning. And if Sam Shields can improve on his performance as a true freshman, when he caught 37 passes for 501 yards, then he and Leggett could give the Hurricanes the best receiving combo in the ACC.

For all of their disappointments a year ago, the Hurricanes still ranked No. 7 in the country in total defense and No. 13 in scoring defense. Eight starters return on that side of the ball—two linemen, two linebackers and the entire secondary.

#4 VIRGINIA CAVALIERS

PRESEASON RANK

2006 Record: 5-7 » ACC: 4-4

Charlottesville Stadium: Scott Stadium (61,500) Tickets: 800-542-UVA1

Al Groh will walk the line in Charlottesville with the help of a massive one

Coming off of last season's 5-7 record, Coach Al Groh of Virginia has a lot on the line.

He has experience, talent and uncommon depth—and that's just the offensive line. The defensive line looks pretty stout as well.

If football games are won up front, as the adage goes, then the Cavaliers should close the 2007 season with a return to bowl play. No team in the league has more players back along the offensive and defensive lines.

On offense, returning starting tackles Will Barker and Eugene Monroe, hold-over starting guards Branden Albert and Ian-Yates Cunningham and returning center Jordy Lipsey will be blocking for quarterback Jameel Sewell, who should be better as a sophomore than he was in nine starts as a freshman.

In those nine starts, Sewell was good enough to complete 57.9 percent of his passes for 1,342 yards, throw just six interceptions on 247 attempts and rank second among ACC quarterbacks with 200 yards rushing. Sewell had offseason surgery on his right throwing wrist, but was still able to participate in spring practices.

On defense, ends Chris Long and Jeffrey Fitzgerald and nose tackle Allen Billyk should occupy enough blockers to free the four starters returning at linebacker and two at safety for clean lanes to the runner. Long, who made second-team All-ACC last year, is a candidate for all the major postseason awards.

Depth on the offensive line will be provided by tackle Zak Stair, who started seven games in 2006. Depth on the D-line will come from Nate Collins, the only first-year freshman to play for the Cavaliers last season.

Fans disappointed by last year's performance, which included a home loss to Western Michigan and a road loss at East Carolina, could see better days ahead. Almost every starter is expected back, with the exception of cornerback Marcus Hamilton, running back Jason Snelling and wide receivers Fontel Mines and Kevin Ogletree. Ogletree was only a junior last year when he caught 52 passes for 582 yards, but will most likely have to sit out a season after tearing a knee ligament in the spring.

So it's not like Groh is without his concerns. He'll enter this season with no proven receivers. Unless Andrew Pearman returns after withdrawing from school last December, the Cavaliers won't have a receiver with more than six catches.

Pearman, whose 2006 season was ended by a knee injury, caught seven passes for 34 yards in four games. Junior Maurice Covington caught six for 45 yards in 12 games. The lack of experience might give incoming freshman Kris Burd a chance to play immediately. Burd had 958 receiving yards and 10 touchdowns last season as a Virginia prep star.

Playing last season with a rookie quarterback, the Cavaliers ranked last in the ACC with 254.6 yards a game and 11th with an average of 15.1 points per game. Snelling led Virginia with a respectable-enough 772 yards on 183 carries, but had his biggest games against the weaker teams—Duke (92 yards), East Carolina (103), North Carolina (131) and N.C. State (99). In the Cavaliers' final three games against Florida State, Miami and Virginia Tech, Snelling averaged 46 yards a game and 2.6 yards a carry.

Two years ago, Virginia ranked sixth in the ACC in rushing and as recently as 2004 the Cavaliers led the league and ranked ninth nationally with 242.8 rushing yards a game. For Groh to get that kind of ground production again, the line will have to develop and a featured back will have to emerge.

The NCAA allows each Division I football team to practice 15 times in the spring.

Jim Grobe, heading into his seventh season at Wake Forest, was satisfied with 14.

Butch Davis, heading into his first season at North Carolina, used all 15 and was anxious for more.

Davis recognizes the enormity of the challenge of restoring the tradition of North Carolina football, which hasn't enjoyed a winning season since 2001. But to grow on the fan base again, the Tar Heels will first have to grow up.

When they staged a spring game in April, there were only three seniors on the first-team defense and one on the starting offense. There are only 10 scholarship seniors on the roster.

In lieu of experience, Davis hopes to beat teams with speed. That's his focus on the current roster, and his focus in recruiting. He'll sacrifice size and strength for speed, if necessary.

Davis, coming out of spring, had yet to settle on a starting quarterback. In fact, he hadn't settled on a starter at many positions, hoping to keep the competition raging right up through August drills.

One player not likely to start at quarterback is senior Joe Dailey, who shared the position last season with Cameron Sexton. Dailey has been moved to wide receiver, leaving sophomore Sexton to battle it out with redshirt freshmen T.J. Yates and B.J. Phillips and incoming freshman Mike Paulus, a high school All-American and brother of Duke basketball point guard Greg Paulus.

Dailey is just one of several Tar Heels who will be playing new positions next season as Davis and his staff plot to put their best 22 players on the field. Junior Joey Bozich has been moved from fullback to linebacker, while junior Nick Starcevic has been moved from fullback to defensive end.

Fred Goldsmith, the last man to coach Duke to a winning record, has since been a color analyst for Western Carolina University football games, coached a high school tucked away in the North Carolina mountains to five very successful seasons and been hired as the new football coach at Division II Lenoir-Rhyne in Hickory, N.C.

A lot can happen in 13 years.

The problem for Duke, though, is nothing appears to be happening with its football program—or at least nothing worth text-messaging home about.

A "football summit," as it was called, was held in January. Former players and longtime supporters were invited to ask Coach Ted Roof about the direction of the program and what it was going to take to break the string of 12 straight losing seasons, four of them winless. The gathering was not open to the media, but those who attended declared themselves satisfied with Roof's responses.

But when the name of your school becomes synonymous with college football futility, any plan for improvement is going to take time and patience and great fortune to implement.

Of the 11 starters returning on offense, the one whose status is in the most jeopardy may be sophomore quarterback Thaddeus Lewis. He threw 16 interceptions last year in 11 starts, but had enough bright moments to complete 180 of 340 passes for 2,134 yards.

Lewis was impressive early, completing 15 of 24 passes for 148 yards against Richmond and 21 of 32 throws for 305 yards against Wake Forest. He enters this season in a battle with Zack Asack, who started six games in 2005 but was suspended last season for plagiarism. Helping Roof make the decision will be Peter Vaas, Duke's new offensive coordinator who was recently QB coach at Notre Dame.

BIG EAST

www.bigeast.org

Four years after ACC raid, Big East football is now a beast and, of all things, overexposed

By PETE WILLIAMS Street & Smith's correspondent

Just two years ago, some college football observers believed the Big East didn't deserve an automatic BCS bowl bid. After last season, some wonder if one is enough.

With West Virginia and Louisville now perennial national powers and Rutgers and South Florida among the nation's top upstart teams, nobody wants to face the Big East. The eight teams went 32-8 in regular-season non-conference games last season, including 5-0 in bowls.

The Big East's television deal with ESPN, which runs through 2013, is a brilliant marketing tool since it all but ensures that football fans will be focused on the conference Thursday and Friday nights in the fall. The Big East had 29 games on ABC, ESPN or ESPN2 last year—way more than the league's minimum guarantee of 17.

This season, Louisville plays six games on Thursday or Friday nights. Rutgers will play before Saturday five times and West Virginia on three occasions.

West Virginia and Louisville again look like the class of the conference, with their explosive, high-powered offenses. The Mountaineers will again unleash their spread-option attack featuring QB Patrick White and tailback Steve Slaton. The Cardinals lost Coach Bobby Petrino and Michael Bush to the NFL, but with QB Brian Brohm back, Louisville again looks like a top-10 power.

Greg Schiano stunned many when he turned down a coaching job at Miami in favor of staying at Rutgers, where he has built the most unlikely success story in college football. The Scarlet Knights lost several key figures from last season's team, but tailback Ray Rice should keep the program on the winning track.

South Florida could be this year's breakout program after a 9-4 season that included an upset of West Virginia and the Bulls' first bowl victory. Cincinnati was a surprise in 2006, grabbing the fifth Big East bowl bid, and a return to the postseason is likely. Pittsburgh Coach Dave Wannstedt has recruited too much talent not to contend in 2007, even with some key losses.

Syracuse Coach Greg Robinson's West Coast offense may be a year away from effectiveness, but should be fun to watch. As for Connecticut, there's no way the Huskies can endure more adversity than last season. But they might be hard-pressed to avoid the conference cellar.

RECRUITING ROUNDUP

1. WEST VIRGINIA ▸ Late pickup of Florida running back Noel Devine vaults Mountaineers to the top. Added other RBs and QBs to groom behind Steve Slaton and Patrick White.

2. PITTSBURGH ▸ Another stellar haul for Coach Dave Wannstedt, headed by Pennsylvania products QB Pat Bostick, OG Chris Jacobson and WR Maurice Williams. Bostick and RB LeSean McCoy could start immediately.

3. RUTGERS ▸ The Scarlet Knights' success means New Jersey talent is no longer fleeing the state. Linebacker Manny Abreu could play right away. Offensive tackle Anthony Davis is also a big score.

4. SOUTH FLORIDA ▸ FSU, Miami and Florida might have landed top-25 classes, but the Bulls continue to make inroads in the Sunshine State. Top signees include QB Alton Voss, center Sampson Genus and LB Calvin Sutton.

5. LOUISVILLE ▸ Bobby Petrino's departure might have hurt the class. The Cards added a pair of running backs in hometown product Victor Anderson and Dale Martin of Bolingbrook, Ill.

6. CONNECTICUT ▸ Bolstered weak passing attack with TE Yianni Apostolakos. Defensive tackle Danny Russell and DB Jonathan Jean-Louis will also contribute early.

7. SYRACUSE ▸ Passing offense gets a boost with WR Da'Mon Merkerson and QB Cody Catalina. Defensive tackle Bud Tribbey and safety Max Suter should also help.

8. CINCINNATI ▸ Bearcats signed mostly second-tier players, but might have found the QB of the future in Chazz Anderson, along with a big WR weapon in Adrien Robinson.

FOUR FEARLESS FORECASTS

1. The 2007 Heisman Trophy winner will come out of the Big East from this pool: Louisville's Brian Brohm, Rutgers' Ray Rice and West Virginia's Patrick White and Steve Slaton.
2. Just as South Florida shocked Louisville in 2005 and West Virginia in 2006, the Bulls will stun a top-20 opponent again this season. Only this time it will be out of conference (Auburn, Sept. 8).
3. The Big East will lead the nation in impact transfers, including Cincinnati quarterback Ben Mauk (Wake Forest), USF linebacker Tyrone McKenzie (Iowa State) and Pitt punter Dave Brytus (Purdue).
4. Andrew Robinson (Syracuse) and Pat Bostick (Pitt) will continue the Big East's recent trend of young quarterbacks making an immediate impact.

Dynamic backfield duo has Rodriguez 'Neer place in national championship game

Everything looked to be in place for the Mountaineers in 2006. But a season that began 7-0 crumbled quickly after a tough loss at Louisville on Nov. 2. Then three weeks later, West Virginia lost at home to South Florida and finished the year without at least a share of the Big East championship for the first time since 2002.

The Mountaineers handled that adversity by keeping Rutgers from winning the Big East title in a triple-overtime regular-season finale and winning their first Gator Bowl in six tries over a Georgia Tech team that won the ACC Coastal Division.

It speaks volumes about how far Coach Rich Rodriguez has taken his alma mater in six years that an 11-win season, a final top-10 national ranking and an elusive Gator Bowl victory now is viewed as a disappointment in Morgantown.

"There should be expectations when you've worked to build a program up and have had some success," Rodriguez says.

Still, it's not like fans are complaining. The team's 30 wins over the last three seasons is the best three-year stretch in school history. And despite all the talk of parity in the Big East and upstarts such as USF and Rutgers, the Mountaineers remain the team to beat heading into 2007, even though they must deal with significant losses at safety, linebacker, wide receiver and offensive line. The team also avoided a huge loss when Rodriguez turned down overtures from Alabama and signed a contract extension through 2014 that reportedly will pay close to $2 million a year. School officials promised Rodriguez that they would upgrade the facilities to keep up with the college football arms race.

The Mountaineers will rank among the preseason favorites to win the national title because their roster includes the best quarterback/tailback tandem in the country in juniors Patrick White and Steve Slaton, both Heisman Trophy front-runners.

After just 17 starts, White already owns the conference career rushing record for a quarterback (2,171 yards), running for 1,219 yards and 18 touchdowns last season. He added 1,655 yards and 13 TDs through the air to become the Big East Offensive Player of the Year. Despite playing through an assortment of injuries, he led the Mountaineers from a 35-17 deficit to a victory over Georgia Tech in the Gator Bowl.

The Mountaineers are 40-for-43 in the red zone under White, whose pass efficiency rating of 159.73 last season would have ranked him among the top 12 in the nation had he made just one more attempt. White also was seventh in the nation in scoring and 24th in total offense.

In 2006, Slaton finished fourth in Heisman Trophy balloting and was named first-team All-America after rushing for a school-record 1,744 yards—this despite playing with an ailing right wrist. Slaton wasn't scheduled to participate in spring contact drills, but is expected to be ready for August practice.

If this proves to be Slaton's last season in the college ranks, West Virginia will be in good shape, having landed top recruit Noel Devine out of Fort Myers, Fla. Bruising fullback Owen Schmitt, a senior, gives Rodriguez another powerful weapon. Schmitt rushed 65 times for 351 yards (5.4 average) and seven touchdowns, including 109 yards in the Gator Bowl. Schmitt is also expected to line up as a tight end in some formations this season.

On the offensive line, the Mountaineers must find a way to replace center Dan Mozes and guard Jeremy Sheffey.

THE NEXT BIG THING

» DOUG SLAVONIC, DE

Highly regarded end missed most of 2006 with injuries. Should make a big impact as a junior in 2007.

Greg Frey, a former South Florida assistant, takes over for Offensive Line Coach Rick Trickett, who left for Florida State. Given the success Trickett had operating within Rodriguez's increasingly popular spread offense, there might not be much drop-off, especially with the return of three starters: second-team all-conference tackle Ryan Stanchek, tackle Jake Figner and guard Greg Isdaner, a freshman All-American. Mike Dent, who came to West Virginia as a highly regarded defensive end, is expected to succeed Mozes.

Given the run-first philosophy of the spread and the success of Slaton and White, the team's deep corps of receivers often gets overlooked. Though the Mountaineers haven't had a big-time standout at the position since Chris Henry departed for the NFL in 2005, senior Darius Reynaud (39 catches, 520 yards) shows such promise. He headlines a talented if inexperienced group who sometimes line up in sets featuring three and even four receivers. A group of receivers featuring not a single player with 10 catches in 2006 must replace Brandon Myles (36 catches, 522 yards, 8 TDs).

Adam Bednarik, the Mountaineers' starting quarterback as recently as 2005, will possibly make the move to wide receiver after enduring two shoulder surgeries. There's always a chance he could line up back at quarterback given Rodriguez's penchant for trick plays.

Because of the flashy offense, Defensive Coordinator Jeff Casteel's unit often got overlooked in recent years. In 2005, it ranked in the top 20 nationally in total yards allowed, points allowed and rushing yards. Last season, the defense allowed an average of 21.7 points per game. Rodriguez plans to stick with his unusual 3-3-5 "Odd Stack" configuration, which features three safeties, including a strong safety who acts as a hybrid outside linebacker. Any of the back eight can blitz or cover.

All-conference defensive tackle Keilen Dykes (32 tackles) anchors an experienced defensive line that includes fellow senior Johnny Dingle, junior Doug Slavonic and sophomore Thor Merrow. Slavonic was expected to step in as a full-time starter last year, but was hampered by ankle injuries.

Senior Bobby Hathaway is the only returning starting linebacker. Gone are Jay Henry and Kevin "Boo" McLee and his 79 tackles. Senior Marc Magro and junior Reed Williams are the leading candidates to replace them.

The secondary was a big concern entering 2006 and the inexperienced unit was exposed in the losses to Louisville and South Florida. The Mountaineers gave up 243.3 passing yards per game and it appears only fifth-year senior safety Eric Wicks (73 tackles) is assured of a starting job. Free safety Quinton Andrews, a Freshman All-American who led the team in tackles, figures to start, as does senior Ridwan Malik. The Mountaineers have experience at the corners with seniors Antonio Lewis and Vaughn Rivers.

Lewis and Rivers are also the team's top two return men, giving the Mountaineers one of the nation's most potent special teams. Rivers earned second-team all-conference honors as a returner last season, averaging 22.5 yards per kickoff. Reliable kicker Pat McAfee is now a junior.

RECRUITING REPORT

The Mountaineers saved their best recruit for last when national top-10 running back prospect Noel Devine committed in the spring. The 5-8, 170-pound speedster from North Fort Myers, Fla., gives last year's Gator Bowl champions a speed back in the mold of current All-American Steve Slaton.

Devine, however, isn't the only highly rated prospect in the 2007 class. A big running back with major credentials from Frederick, Md., is Terence Kerns (6-1, 230), who is a power runner with quickness.

The quarterback of the future in West Virginia's option offense could be Virginia prep product Bradley Starks (6-4, 190), who passed for 70 career touchdowns as a high schooler. Another Virginia signee is athlete Brandon Hogan (6-0, 175), who passed for 2,539 yards and rushed for 1,735 last season.

The top defensive recruit is junior-college transfer Ellis Lankster (5-10, 200), who was an All-America return man at Jones County (Miss.) Junior College.

Other recruits for the secondary include prospects from four different states: Florida's Eain Smith (6-0, 190), Evan Rodriguez (6-3, 210) of North Bergen, N.J., Michigan's Derek Knight (6-0, 195) and Sidney Glover (5-11, 215) of Warren, Ohio.

A touted linebacker is Will Johnson (6-2, 200), an active defender from Centerville (Ohio) High.

Key newcomers to the offensive line are in-state product Chad Snodgrass (6-3, 290), plus Gino Gradkowski (6-2, 280) and Don Barclay (6-4, 285) from neighboring Pennsylvania. A defensive-end prospect is Julian Miller (6-5, 220) of Columbus, Ohio.

Besides Snodgrass, the top in-state recruit was defensive lineman Junius Lewis (6-2, 250), who played at Morgantown High near the WVU campus.

#2 LOUISVILLE CARDINALS

PRESEASON RANK

2006 Record: 12-1 » Big East: 6-1 (beat Wake Forest in the Orange Bowl, 24-13)

Louisville, Ky. Stadium: Papa John's Cardinal Stadium (42,000) Tickets: 800-633-7105

Led by Heisman candidate Brohm, Cards will continue to deal winning hand under new Coach Steve Kragthorpe

For a team that just lost a head coach who put the program on the map and one of the most talented running backs in school history, the Louisville football program looks remarkably stable heading into 2007.

Former Tulsa Coach Steve Kragthorpe replaces Bobby Petrino (41-9 in four seasons), as Petrino takes his high-octane offense to the Atlanta Falcons. The Cardinals were 12-1 last season, losing only to Rutgers by a field goal on Nov. 9. The team finished at No. 6 in the nation following an Orange Bowl win over Wake Forest, and should again challenge for the Big East title, if not a national championship.

Kragthorpe inherited a Tulsa program that had won just two games in the two years before he was hired in December 2002. He took the Golden Hurricane to three bowl games in four years and should bring stability to a Louisville program that seemed to deal annually with Petrino's flirtations with other jobs. Like all coaches upon taking a new job, Kragthorpe says he is committed to Louisville for the long term, and not just because he has a lucrative five-year deal. It helps that he and Athletic Director Tom Jurich have a history that dates back to 1990, when Jurich was the Northern Arizona athletic director and Kragthorpe was hired as the school's quarterbacks coach.

At Louisville, Kragthorpe takes over a loaded roster led by an All-American some scouts believe will be a more reliable NFL quarterback than Michael Vick, now Petrino's signal-caller with the Falcons. Heisman Trophy front-runner Brian Brohm, back for his senior season, leads an offense that dominated in 2006 even after explosive running back Michael Bush suffered a season-ending broken leg in the first game.

Seven players who made All-Big East first or second team return from last season's conference champions, though Kragthrope must replace three all-league performers on defense: star defensive end Amobi Okoye, cornerback William Gay and safety Brandon Sharp.

The offense remains loaded. Brohm, who might have been the top quarterback selected in the 2007 NFL Draft, draws comparisons with Brett Favre, though he's not nearly as durable. Brohm has thrown for 6,751 yards and 41 touchdowns in three seasons, but must prove that he can stay healthy after enduring knee, thumb and shoulder injuries over the last two years. Brohm, who owns an 18-3 record as a starter, is coming off an MVP performance in the Orange Bowl, throwing for 311 yards.

Backup Hunter Cantwell, who would start at many other schools, is a reliable insurance policy against another Brohm injury. Matt Simms, brother of Tampa Bay Buccaneers quarterback Chris and son of Phil, the former New York Giants star, is not expected to play as a true freshman.

Bush's injury last season forced the Cardinals into a rusher-by-committee approach, which they might follow again this season. Then again, Anthony Allen rushed for 406 yards and a team-high 13 touchdowns in 2006, including one of the team's two fourth-quarter scores in the Orange Bowl. Junior George Stripling (459 yards, 5 TDs) also figures to get significant carries.

The Cardinals have arguably the deepest and most talented receiving corps in the country. Like Brohm, Harry Douglas and Mario Urrutia resisted overtures from the NFL. The 5-11 Douglas, a senior, led the Cardinals with a career-best 70 catches for a school-record 1,265 yards, catching 10 balls for 165 yards in the Orange Bowl. Urrutia, a 6-6 junior, caught 58 passes for 973 yards and six touchdowns last year.

Louisville had not thrown much to its tight ends in recent years until last season, when Gary Barnidge hauled in a career-best 31 catches for 511 yards and four touchdowns. Fellow senior Scott Kuhn is an effective blocker.

The Cardinals' offensive line was dominant last season, with four players earning first- or second-team all-conference honors. First-team left tackle George Bussey returns, as does center Eric Wood, a second-team pick. At right tackle, senior Breno Giacomini is the front-runner to replace all-conference Renardo Foster, though Giacomini will be pushed by redshirt freshman Jeff Adams. Senior Marcel Benson, who split time last season at tackle, will man Kurt Quarterman's vacated right-guard position. Daniel Barlowe has solidified the left-guard spot after starting 11 games there in 2006.

WOODNY TURENNE, CB

Although Okoye is still younger than much of the Louisville roster, he used up his eligibility and the Cardinals will have to find a replacement for both him and defensive end Zach Anderson. Juniors Adrian Grady and Earl Heyman are the projected starters at nose tackle and defensive tackle, respectively.

Peanut Whitehead, the sophomore with an unforgettable name, should take over as the starting left end after recording four sacks as a freshman. Senior Brandon Cox has battled some personal issues, but should be back at right end. Then there's the infamous Willie Williams, whose troubled past dates back to his time as a high-profile recruit at Miami. The linebacker is one of several junior-college players who should contribute immediately on defense.

Senior Malik Jackson is the lone returnee among the linebackers, having turned down an early start to his NFL career. A second-team all-conference selection in 2006, Jackson led the team with 16 tackles for loss and nine sacks from the strongside position. Hard-hitting junior Lamar Myles is the leader to replace Nate Harris at middle linebacker. Preston Smith, a senior who started at times last season, projects as the starting weakside 'backer. Sophomores Stephen Garr and Darius Mann and redshirt freshman Eugene Sowell also will compete for playing time.

The Cardinals must replace three starters in the secondary: Gay, Sharp and Gavin Smart. Safety, a weak link for the Cardinals at times last season, is a position where there's now quality depth. Senior Jon Russell has quietly had a solid career at Louisville, recording three interceptions in 2006. Latarrius Thomas, who started as a true freshman last year, joins Russell. Thomas will compete with junior Richard Raglin for the starting job at free safety.

Junior Rod Council lost his cornerback job to Smart last season after suffering an ankle injury. Council started the Orange Bowl and, with Smart gone, projects as the starter, along with junior Bobby Buchanan. They'll be pushed by Woodny Turenne and Chaz Thompson, two highly regarded junior-college transfers expecting to play right away.

Art Carmody is the best placekicker in the country, having won the Lou Groza Award last season as a junior. Carmody owns the Louisville record book, having connected on 47 of 56 field goals in his career. Sophomore Corey Goettsche and senior Todd Flannery will compete at punter.

JaJuan Spillman, who should be a bigger part of the wideout rotation this season, emerged as one of the nation's best kickoff-return men in 2006, averaging 26.5 yards and returning a kick 100 yards against Rutgers.

Louisville plays just three conference games at home, but a light non-conference schedule should prove to be a good warm-up for a stretch run against West Virginia and USF on the road and a season finale at home against Rutgers. With six nationally televised games on Thursday and Friday nights, the Cardinals could become a popular team. If Brohm can stay healthy for a full season, a national title is within reach.

RECRUITING REPORT

First-year Coach Steve Kragthorpe welcomes a recruiting class that includes the nation's top-rated junior-college prospect in defensive back Woodny Turenne (6-1, 190), who played at the College of the Sequoias in Visalia, Calif. He is expected to start immediately for the Cardinals.

While the defense will be bolstered by the presence of Turenne, the offense also has been improved through the signing of other highly rated recruits.

At quarterback, the Cardinals landed New Jersey star Matt Simms (6-3, 195), the son of ex-NFL signal-caller Phil and brother of Tampa Bay Buccaneers QB Chris. The pro-style recruit is expected to fill the void under center when starter Brian Brohm departs for the next level.

Also in the incoming class are three promising running backs: Louisville prep star Victor Anderson (5-9, 175), Bolingbrook, Ill., product Dale Martin (6-0, 190) and Bilal Powell (6-0, 200) from Lakeland, Fla.

Another local standout who signed with the Cards is Doug Beaumont (5-9, 180), who is expected to contend for a spot at wide receiver.

On defense, former prep All-America linebacker Willie Williams (6-3, 225), who originally signed with the University of Miami before getting into trouble there, arrives from the juco ranks and West Los Angeles Community College.

Another heralded defensive recruit is safety C.J. Peake (6-2, 210) of Trotwood, Ohio.

The offensive-line recruits are led by New Jersey product Greg Tomczyk (6-6, 290) and in-state signee Zach Kiernan (6-6, 240) of Cold Springs, Ky.

#3 RUTGERS SCARLET KNIGHTS

TOP 25 SELECTION

PRESEASON RANK

2006 Record: 11-2 » Big East: 5-2 (beat Kansas State in the Texas Bowl, 37-10)

Stadium: Rutgers Stadium (42,000) Tickets: 866-445-GORU New Brunswick, N.J.

Scarlet fever will keep heating up NCAA as long as Rice continues to cook

It wasn't that long ago when a preview of a Rutgers football season included talk of one to two wins and whether the Scarlet Knights could field a team of legitimate I-A players.

After an 11-2 season that saw Rutgers in position to contend for a national title in November, nobody takes this program lightly anymore. Indeed, the word "powerhouse" is even whispered after a year in which the Knights finished ranked 12th in the nation and won the Texas Bowl, their first postseason win in 137 seasons of football.

Most importantly, they kept their leader, as consensus national Coach-of-the-Year Greg Schiano resisted overtures from the University of Miami and signed a four-year contract extension that runs through the 2016 season.

Rutgers tied a school mark with 11 wins and won a record five Big East games in 2006, joining Wake Forest as one of the most unlikely success stories in college football last season. The Knights finished fourth nationally in total defense, fifth in sacks and tackles for loss and eighth in scoring defense. The offensive line allowed the fewest sacks (8) in the nation.

After a punishing schedule last season, Rutgers plays its first five games at home and just one conference road game (Louisville) against a team that did not finish 1-6 in the Big East in 2006.

This time, however, Rutgers won't sneak up on anyone and must compete without a number of departed seniors who sparked the program's resurgence under Schiano, including fullback Brian Leonard, tight end Clark Harris and defensive tackle Ramel Meekins.

Speedy tailback Ray Rice gives Rutgers fans hope that the magical ride will continue. One of seven returning starters on offense, he is coming off a Big East single-season record of 1,794 yards rushing. Both of Rice's offensive tackles—first-team all-conference Jeremy Zuttah and second-teamer Pedro Sosa—return, along with starting left guard Mike Fladell.

Junior quarterback Mike Teel won't be mentioned in the same breath as Louisville's Brian Brohm or West Virginia's Patrick White, but perhaps he should be. The whipping boy for Rutgers detractors all last year has lost just three of his 15 starts.

Rutgers returns both of its starting receivers from the Texas Bowl in sophomores Kenny Britt and Tim Brown. Britt finished the year with 29 catches for 440 yards and two TDs, while Brown made a statement in the final two games with seven receptions and three TDs against West Virginia and Kansas State.

Tight end is wide-open after the loss of Harris, a three-time All-Big East performer. Junior Kevin Brock is the lone tight end on the roster with game experience, but has zero career catches.

Rutgers returns six starters on defense, including first-team All-Big East defensive tackle Eric Foster. Junior defensive end Jamaal Westerman, a second-team all-conference selection, is the returning team leader in sacks (8).

At linebacker, Rutgers must replace second-team All-Big East pick Devraun Thompson at middle linebacker and Quintero Frierson on the outside. Former walk-on Brandon Renkart returns to lead the inexperienced group.

Considered the best safety tandem in the league, second-team All-Big East selections Courtney Greene and Ron Girault return. Greene, a junior, was second on the team with 82 tackles and recorded a team-high four picks.

Senior kicker Jeremy Ito already is the school's all-time scoring leader with 280 points and would probably get more attention if not for Louisville's Art Carmody.

Look for USF program to continue to build momentum under Leavitt in 2007

In just 10 seasons, Coach Jim Leavitt has taken the USF Bulls from a start-up operation to arguably a Top 25 team. The only team in the Sunshine State that fared better last season won the national championship.

That might be a tall order for the Bulls in 2007, though after a 9-4 record (4-3 in the Big East) last season and a first-ever bowl victory, over East Carolina in the PapaJohns.com Bowl, expectations are high at the commuter school in north Tampa.

Leavitt and his staff, who for years were forced to operate out of a flotilla of doublewide trailers, now have a sparkling new football facility to attract recruits. And in perhaps the surest sign that the program is becoming big-time, Leavitt lost assistants Rod Smith and Greg Frey to conference rival West Virginia.

Perhaps it's payback time. After knocking off West Virginia in Morgantown last season and a narrow loss to Rutgers, 22-20, the Bulls won't be taken lightly by opponents this season. USF plays both opponents on nationally televised weeknight games on ESPN, part of a schedule that includes early-season matchups at Auburn and at home against North Carolina.

USF might need to show the resilience it exhibited last season, when a disappointing loss to Cincinnati in late October left the Bulls 1-2 in conference play. But they rebounded to go 3-1 in November and earn a second consecutive bowl bid.

The reasons for USF's rise are many—Leavitt's determination and a deep Florida recruiting base to name two—but none more important than Matt Grothe, who as a redshirt freshman in 2006 threw for 2,576 yards and 15 touchdowns, rushed for 622 yards and nine more scores in winning Big East Rookie-of-the-Year honors. Grothe led the team in rushing, but Leavitt hopes to provide him with more protection this year, both from the offensive line and by having the tailbacks shoulder more of the load.

Freshman running back Mike Ford and redshirt freshman Aston Samuels will challenge former walk-on Benjamin Williams, USF's MVP in the PapaJohns.com Bowl. Ford was one of the top running backs coming out of the state of Florida in 2005, but only enrolled in USF this spring after originally signing with Alabama and winding up in junior college the past year and a half. Whoever ends up the primary ball-carrier will benefit from last year's offensive line returning intact.

The Bulls must replace two wide receivers—S.J. Green and Ean Randolph—who started last season, but that shouldn't be a problem. Junior Taurus Johnson (37 catches, 494 yards) returns and should replace Randolph both at receiver and as the primary return man.

Though Grothe generated most of the publicity last season, it was arguably the defense that took USF up a notch, ranking 25th nationally in total defense. Louisville was the only opponent to score more than 30 points on the Bulls, who held three teams to less than 10.

LOWER-TIER BOWL

#5 » CINCINNATI BEARCATS

PRESEASON RANK

Coach Brian Kelly doesn't have to deal with many of the issues of a typical first-year coach. He inherited an upstart team that went 8-5 last year under Mark Dantonio (now at Michigan State) and even got the getting-acquainted transition period out of the way by coaching his new team to a win over Western Michigan in the first International Bowl.

Kelly, who took Central Michigan to a MAC championship in his third season there, will have to face the same challenge Dantonio did in putting Bearcats football on the radar screen in Cincinnati.

Last season helped. Cincinnati won four of its last five games to finish the regular season 7-5 (4-3 Big East), including an upset of No. 7 Rutgers. The Bearcats beat South Florida on national television in October and thrived despite a rigorous schedule.

Kelly has installed a new no-huddle spread offense, which will go over well with a deep, talented receiving corps. Junior Dominick Goodman, the team leader with 40 receptions in 2006, hauled in seven catches for 109 yards and two touchdowns in the spread offense during the International Bowl. Junior Derrick Stewart racked up a team-high 675 receiving yards and senior Earnest Jackson has 68 career catches.

Dustin Grutza is back for his third season at quarterback. However, he'll be pushed by transfer Ben Mauk, who went down with a shoulder injury in last year's opening game playing for Wake Forest. Grandfathered in under a now-invalid rule that allows graduate-student transfers to play right away, Mauk could be one of the team's more intriguing stories.

#6 » PITTSBURGH PANTHERS

PRESEASON RANK

Few teams were as disappointing last season as Pittsburgh, which squandered a 6-1 start and likely bowl bid with an epic five-game collapse in Dave Wannstedt's second season as head coach at his alma mater.

Wannstedt signed his second consecutive top-25 recruiting class and will have to employ a number of newcomers immediately after losing longtime pillars such as quarterback Tyler Palko, linebackers H.B. Blades and Clint Session and cornerback Darrelle Revis. With Tommie Campbell suspended and unlikely to return, the Panthers will need to replace all three starters at linebacker.

The defensive losses sting since the Panthers gave up 139 points in their last three games and face a brutal schedule that includes non-conference games at Michigan State and Virginia and conference road battles against Louisville, Rutgers and West Virginia.

Wannstedt, 11-12 in his two seasons at Pitt, has a few veteran building blocks. Wide receiver Derek Kinder caught 57 passes for 847 yards and six touchdowns as a junior and made the All-Big East first team. Running mate Oderick Turner hauled in 44 catches for 660 yards and tied West Virginia's Brandon Myles for the conference lead with eight TDs. Defensive end Joe Clermond is the leader of a defense that includes returning cornerback Kennard Cox (51 tackles). Kicker Conor Lee, who made 85.7 percent of his field goals last year, went overlooked in a conference deep in kicking talent.

After that, the rebuilding begins. There will be a three-way battle to become Palko's successor among junior Bill Stull, redshirt freshman Kevan Smith and true freshman Pat Bostick, Pennsylvania's Gatorade Player of the Year in 2006. Another true freshman, LeSean McCoy, could emerge as the starting tailback.

Coach Greg Robinson spent the first two years of his Syracuse tenure trying to implement a West Coast offense with mismatched personnel. This year, with promising quarterback Andrew Robinson behind center, he hopes to properly unveil his weapons.

Syracuse has nowhere to go but up. The team improved from 1-10 in 2005 to 4-8 last season, albeit with just one conference win that came late in the year against Connecticut. With perennial underachiever Perry Patterson at quarterback, Syracuse ranked 103rd out of 119 Division I-A teams in passing offense last year and 86th in passing efficiency. The Orange are one of just six teams to rank 100th or worst in scoring in each of the past two seasons.

If Robinson develops early, the offense could be dangerous. Sophomore Delone Carter and junior Curtis Brinkley are one of the Big East's more talented duos at running back. Carter rushed for 713 yards and four touchdowns as a true freshman last season, while Brinkley accounted for 1,110 combined rushing, receiving and returning yards.

Syracuse has a deep receiving corps that includes senior Rice Moss, along with sophomores Mike Williams and Lavar Lobdell. Senior Taj Smith returns after suffering a season-ending broken collarbone in Game Four of last season. Syracuse also returns three starters on the offensive line: guards Carroll Madison and Ryan Durand and center Marvin McCall.

Jameel McClain thrived at defensive end last season after moving from linebacker during spring practice in 2006. He recorded a conference-best 9.5 sacks, was named All-Big East second team and will be the leader of this year's unit. Only three other defensive starters return: tackle Tony Jenkins and safeties Dowayne Davis and Joe Fields, all seniors.

It wasn't that long ago that Connecticut was one of the more remarkable stories in college football, winning 23 games in its first three seasons (2002-04) of full Division I-A competition.

That seems like the distant past now. The Huskies have won just three Big East games over the last two seasons. After starting the 2006 campaign 3-3, the team lost five of its last six games to finish with a 4-8 mark, 1-6 in conference. It was the team's worst showing since 2001 and it might be hard-pressed to improve in 2007, Coach Randy Edsall's ninth season.

In 2006, Connecticut's rushing defense ranked 105th in the country, while the passing game was No. 110. The kicking game was a constant struggle and multiple players were dismissed from the program. Even Terry Caulley, the star running back, endured an injury-plagued season.

If nothing else, Caulley's absence opened the door for Donald Brown, who rushed for 896 yards on 161 carries and became the only freshman to earn All-Big East honors last year. Brown rushed for 205 yards against Pitt and 199 against Rutgers, becoming the first runner in two years to run for 100 or more against the Scarlet Knights.

At the start of spring practice, 13 of the 22 starting positions were unsettled, including quarterback. Junior-college transfer Tyler Lorenzen, a wide receiver at Iowa State for two seasons before transferring to Palomar College in San Marcos, Calif., is considered the favorite after passing for 2,960 yards and 26 touchdowns last year. D.J. Hernandez, last year's primary starting quarterback, has moved to wide receiver. Edsall does have building blocks for 2007, including linebackers Danny Lansanah and Ryan Henegan, cornerbacks Tyvon Branch and Darius Butler and wideout Brad Kanuch.

Badgers and Wolverines will battle it out in two-way race

By JACK EBLING
Street & Smith's correspondent

It had the No. 1 and No. 2 teams in the country for six weeks last October and November. And it became the first BCS conference to have three teams with 11 or more regular-season wins.

So what if the Big Ten won't be as tough at the top in 2007 as it was last year? The conference might be more competitive from top to bottom and better overall by Christmas Day.

Yes, the Big Ten had seven bowl teams last December and January. But a 2-5 postseason mark, with then-No. 1 Ohio State and No. 3 Michigan losing by a combined 41 points, left a rancid aftertaste.

Wisconsin did its best to erase that stench with a win over Arkansas on New Year's Day, a school-record 12th triumph. The Badgers finished ahead of the Wolverines and behind the Buckeyes in both postseason polls. Meanwhile, the Big Ten and SEC were the only leagues with three Top-10 finishers.

Look for Wisconsin and Michigan to battle for the top spot again. And don't be surprised if Coach Bret Bielema's Badgers avenge last season's lone setback when the teams meet on Nov. 10 in Madison.

Coach Lloyd Carr and the Wolverines should be loaded on offense with a balanced attack, the equal of any in the country. The question is how much they will miss four of the first 23 defensive players taken in the NFL Draft.

If the Big Ten plans to add two teams, not just one, to its record total of 15 BCS bids in the last nine seasons, Wisconsin and Michigan will have to play as well as they did during the seasons of 1997-99. Those teams combined to win three straight Rose Bowls.

Penn State and Purdue could challenge the Badgers and Wolverines and should finish in the upper half of the division this year. Both programs have the big-play performers to pull off a major upset along the way.

Ohio State will have to reload without Heisman Trophy-winning quarterback Troy Smith and seven other draft picks, including first-round draft picks in wide receivers Ted Ginn Jr. and Anthony Gonzalez. If anyone wants to beat the Buckeyes, this may be the best opportunity.

Expect Iowa to bounce back quickly after a rare seven-loss season. And after last season, there's a reason Michigan State will welcome Mark Dantonio and Minnesota will greet Tim Brewster as new coaches. However, it'll be a major surprise if the Spartans and Golden Gophers don't join Northwestern, Indiana and Illinois in the Big Ten's lower tier.

RECRUITING ROUNDUP

1. ILLINOIS ▸ Zook's hooks catch some of the nation's best again.
2. MICHIGAN ▸ Winged helmets never have a bad recruiting year.
3. OHIO STATE ▸ Plenty of opportunity this year for offensive players.
4. PENN STATE ▸ Even at age 80, Coach Joe Paterno's charm still there for parents.
5. IOWA ▸ Hawkeyes know what they need and how to get it.
6. WISCONSIN ▸ "Bret who?" won't be an issue after Coach Bielema's recruiting class this season.
7. MICHIGAN STATE ▸ Late start for Coach Mark Dantonio's staff but some solid results.
9. MINNESOTA ▸ New Coach Tim Brewster got the latest start but showed he could finish.
10. PURDUE ▸ Boilermakers have proven it isn't about the rankings.

FOUR FEARLESS FORECASTS

1. Bret Bielema will have the best first two seasons in Big Ten history when he leads Wisconsin to the 2007 conference crown. He already has the winningest record with a 12-1 debut.

2. Michigan's offense is good enough to deliver wins until the defense develops. Left tackle Jake Long can be better than Wisconsin great Joe Thomas (who went third overall in the 2007 NFL Draft) in what could be Coach Lloyd Carr's last year.

3. Penn State and Purdue will each win one game you wouldn't expect but will both come up short for a title bid. Still, the Nittany Lions and Boilermakers should have enough to finish near the top.

4. The future will be bright for the second division, especially Northwestern in 2008 and Illinois a little further down the line. Coach Ron Zook's aggressive recruiting with the Illini is sure to inspire jealousy and ridicule.

Stellar defense, Hill's rushing make Badgers team to beat

When Barry Alvarez stepped down as Wisconsin's head coach after 118 victories (including three Rose Bowl titles), he wasn't finished contributing. One of his wisest moves in Madison was naming former Badgers Defensive Coordinator Bret Bielema to replace him.

Bielema, the second-youngest leader in Division I-A football at age 37, had a near-perfect debut last season. He led the Badgers to a 7-1 Big Ten mark and a 12-1 overall record, becoming just the third rookie coach to produce 12 wins.

The 2006 Big Ten Coach of the Year was one of five finalists for the Bear Bryant Award as National Coach of the Year. And why wouldn't he be? The Badgers overachieved and finished first in the nation in pass defense, second to only Virginia Tech in points permitted (12.1 per game) and fifth in yards allowed (253.1).

Wisconsin won't be the same team without All-America offensive tackle Joe Thomas, the third player taken in the NFL Draft, and dependable quarterback John Stocco. The Badgers could miss their top two tacklers, linebacker Mark Zalewski and safety Joe Stellmacher, almost as much.

Thomas was a once-in-a-generation lineman for Wisconsin and should be a major star with the often-clueless Cleveland Browns. It's a fair proposition to say the Badgers will win more games in 13 chances this season than the Browns will in 32 tries over the next two years.

The Badgers' consistency suggests that could happen. Wisconsin is one of just nine Division I-A schools to win at least nine games in each of the past three seasons, joining Auburn, Boise State, Boston College, LSU, Louisville, USC, Texas and Virginia Tech.

Or to put it another way, the Badgers' 31-7 mark the past three seasons is tops in the Big Ten and sixth best in the country behind USC, Texas, Auburn, Boise State and Louisville. And Wisconsin's nine-game winning streak is the third-longest in the nation behind Boise State (13) and BYU (10).

No one expected that level of consistency with a new coach and the second-youngest team in the conference last year. Only Indiana had more eligibility left in its two-deep lineup. But the Hoosiers' losses weren't nearly as important as the Badgers' departures, including five NFL selections in 2006.

Bielema began last season with a redshirt freshman at tailback and a group of receivers with just one combined career catch. But that tailback, P.J. Hill, became the Big Ten's top rusher and a third-team All-American with 1,569 yards on the ground. And those receivers—tight end Travis Beckum and wideouts Paul Hubbard and Luke Swan—combined for 134 grabs.

Barring the sophomore jinx, Hill should be one of the league's three best ball-carriers in 2007. At 5-foot-11 and 222 pounds, he showed great durability last season with 311 carries. He scored 16 total touchdowns and became just the fifth freshman in NCAA history to run for at least 1,000 yards in his first seven games.

If he wasn't quite Ron Dayne, Wisconsin's second-ever Heisman winner, Hill was more than most opponents could handle. His 249 rushing yards against Northwestern were the fifth-highest total in the country last season. While Hill sat out the spring to finish rehabbing a surgically repaired shoulder, it gave an opportunity for sophomore Lance Smith to show what he could do.

Beckum was a second-team All-American as a sophomore and a semifinalist for the John Mackey Award as the nation's top tight end. Beckum's 61 catches were the third-highest total in school history, while his 903 receiving yards ranked fifth.

THE NEXT BIG THING

» ALLAN EVRIDGE, QB

The Kansas State transfer might not overtake Tyler Donovan immediately, but he should seize the opportunity when it arises.

Though he only made 10 starts, Beckum had at least one catch in all 13 of the Badgers' games. The former Parade All-America linebacker also saved his best for last with five grabs for 82 yards and a game-winning 13-yard score in the Capital One Bowl. His position also has depth with senior Andy Crooks, who had 19 catches and was solid in two-tight-end formations.

Hubbard was a pleasant surprise as a junior, going from one reception to 38 and four yards to 627 over 2005. The former walk-on and Junior Olympics long jump and triple jump champion also had four catches for 73 yards (including a 22-yard score) against Arkansas in the bowl win.

Swan made his first career grab in the opener against Bowling Green and picked up the pace from there. He finished with 35 catches for 595 yards, five TDs and a team-high average of 17.0 yards per catch. With Beckum and Hubbard drawing so much attention, Swan is a quarterback away from greater success.

That new signal-caller should be Tyler Donovan or junior Allan Evridge, with sophomore Dustin Sherer waiting impatiently. The Badgers' starter won't have to win games the way most do. But he will need a little of Stocco's steadiness.

Donovan threw for 564 yards and four scores with two interceptions, and actually had a better completion percentage than Stocco (63.8 to 59.0) in seven appearances last season. But the question is whether he or Evridge, a Kansas State transfer, can be as productive as Stocco was on the scoreboard. Wisconsin was seventh in the league in passing, fourth in rushing and fifth in total offense, and tied for second in scoring at 29.2 points per game.

It's never easy to lose a player as dominant as Thomas. But don't shed any tears for the Badgers, who should control play with four starting linemen returning. Center Marcus Coleman (6-6, 302), a fifth-year senior, and junior right tackle Eric Vanden Heuvel (6-7, 323) are the best bets for All-Big Ten honors. But juniors Andy Kemp (6-6, 322) and Kraig Urbik (6-6, 330) could be one of the top sets of guards in the country before they leave Camp Randall Stadium.

Wisconsin's blockers are always huge and often bigger than NFL fronts. So if sophomore Jake Bscherer (6-7, 297) and freshman Gabe Carimi (6-8, 292) are comparative lightweights, just wait until they stop growing. Wisconsin should also get help from Bill Rentmeester and Chris Pressley (6-1, 271), both junior fullbacks and lead blockers for Hill and Smith.

The returnees on defense include junior cornerback Jack Ikegwuonu, junior end Matt Shaughnessy and senior tackle Nick Hayden. Ikegwuonu was first-team All-Big Ten last season after making 41 tackles, breaking up 13 passes, intercepting two balls and scoring on a 50-yard fumble recovery. Shaughnessy was second-team all-conference, while Hayden has started 26 straight games.

Also back are junior defensive tackle Jason Chapman, junior linebackers Jonathan Casillas and DeAndre Levy and junior cornerback Allen Langford. Levy had six sacks last season and could become a dominant pass rusher.

But the Badgers' big advantage is their kicking game. Senior Taylor Mehlhaff, a semifinalist for the Lou Groza Award in 2006, was 15-for-20 in field-goal attempts and perfect on 47 extra points last season. Fifth-year punter Ken DeBauche, a second-team All-American in 2005, can do better than last year's 41.8-yard average. And the Badgers can improve on a 7-1 conference record if the right players stay healthy.

RECRUITING REPORT

Wisconsin signed a small but solid class of 19 prospects, including two national in-state recruits: offensive lineman Josh Oglesby (6-7, 315) and running back John Clay (6-0, 220). Oglesby was ranked by some services as the top offensive-line prospect in the land and was an early commitment—and major catch—for the Badgers. Oglesby injured a knee in the fourth game of his senior season and didn't play again, but has recovered and expects to be at full strength when he reports to school.

Clay, who was the Student Sports magazine National Junior of the Year, was compared to state legend Alan Ameche by some veteran local media members and is regarded as one of the top prep running backs in state history. Last season, Clay nursed a sprained ankle much of the time and didn't post the same numbers that he had as a junior (12.2 yards per carry). Clay did average 8.1 yards a carry, but had some fumble problems.

Touted newcomers include two quarterbacks—Michigan product James Stallions (6-6, 180) and Kansas State transfer Allan Evridge (6-1, 210)—and wide receivers Nick Toon (6-3, 175) and Kyle Jefferson (6-5, 195). Toon, the son of former Wisconsin and New York Jets great Al Toon, is an in-state product. Jefferson played at Cleveland's Glenville High, which recently produced Ohio's State Troy Smith and Ted Ginn Jr.

Led by Henne, powerful offense will pace Wolverines

The winningest program in college football history was 10-0 and No. 2 in the polls the morning of Nov. 17, 2006. All seemed right with the world in Ann Arbor—or as right as life could be for Lloyd Carr, his staff and the Wolverines a day before the game with top-ranked Ohio State in Columbus.

Suddenly, the news began to circulate. Coaching icon Bo Schembechler had died after another heart attack, nearly 37 years after his first episode. A pall fell over the Maize and Blue. And despite a "Win One for Bo" mantra, Michigan was riddled through the air in a 42-39 loss to the Buckeyes and a 32-18 no-show against USC in the Rose Bowl.

The Wolverines finished 7-1 in the league and 11-2 overall, and were eighth and ninth in the respective final polls. For most teams, those numbers would mean a sweet celebration and a happy offseason. But for Michigan, they only brought three maddening questions: Why is Carr 1-5 against OSU Coach Jim Tressel? Why are the Wolverines 1-5 in their last six bowl games? Why haven't the they won a late-season game that matters since November 2003?

If offense wins in the 21st century, those late-season problems could vanish. Michigan's rushing and passing games could be as good as any in the nation. And if Defensive Coordinator Ron English can find replacements for five outstanding players, Carr could enjoy 2007 as much as when he won a national title 10 years earlier.

The fun starts with senior running back Mike Hart, who gains more yards after contact than any player his size (5-9, 196) in the country. A fifth-place finisher in the 2006 Heisman balloting, Hart rushed for 1,562 yards and 14 touchdowns (seven yards and one TD less than Wisconsin's P.J. Hill) last season, and was the only back in the country to run for at least 90 yards in every game.

With 3,679 yards in three years, Hart is the nation's top active rusher, while his average of 111.5 yards per game is tops in Michigan football history. With 175 more carries and 794 yards, Hart will break Anthony Thompson's career marks of 924 attempts and 4,472 yards. Expect that to happen in mid-October.

Junior Kevin Grady, Hart's backup the past two years, tore an ACL in spring drills and has plenty of tough work ahead. But sophomore Brandon Minor is a more explosive runner than Grady and actually had a better average per carry than Hart (5.7 to 4.9).

The player carrying the greatest responsibility will be senior quarterback Chad Henne, a rocket-armed fourth-year starter who's a combined 0-6 against the Buckeyes and bowl opponents. Last year's numbers (203-for-328 for 2,508 yards and 22 TDs with eight interceptions) were more than good enough. The last two performances of the season weren't.

This year's challenge is simple. With records and honors well within reach, Henne has to play more like Michigan's championship-winning QB Brian Griese (a consummate leader) than former Wolverine Drew Henson (a better passer). Henne also needs to help groom his successor, incoming Parade All-American Ryan Mallett (6-6, 247), who took part in spring ball.

Henne-watchers and numerologists will love this one. No. 7 has thrown for 7,777 yards and 70 touchdowns in his first three seasons. Now, if only he can just put another seven points on the scoreboard against OSU. But long before that, Henne should break John Navarre's Michigan career marks of 765 completions for 9,254 yards, needing just 100 more connections and 1,478 yards. And don't be surprised if that happens in the same game when Hart becomes the Wolverines' No. 1 rusher.

Both players will benefit greatly from the team's best pro prospect, senior left tackle Jake Long, the 2006 Big Ten

STEVE BEYER

THE NEXT BIG THING

GREG MATHEWS, WR

A spring star, the sophomore will replace Steve Breaston and perhaps Adrian Arrington. Most defenses will fear Mario Manningham first.

Offensive Lineman of the Year. Long is a devastating drive-blocker and a mountain of a pass protector. When Hart runs stretch plays to Long's side, it's almost unfair.

Versatile fifth-year left guard Adam Kraus, another first-team All-Big Ten choice, would be the best lineman in a lot of programs. So would senior right guard Alex Mitchell. But in Ann Arbor, they can only be second and third, respectively, provided sophomore center Justin Boren doesn't overtake them.

Henne's top target is junior wide receiver Mario Manningham, yet another All-Big Ten returnee. "Super Mario" had 38 catches for 703 yards and nine TDs in an injury-plagued season, though it seemed that he had twice that production from some omnipresent replays. Manningham can make cornerbacks look downright silly with sucker moves on deep routes.

Just ask Notre Dame, as Manningham has burned the Irish for four scores in two matchups. He also beat Penn State with a last-snap TD as a freshman. And 14 of his 15 career scores have come from outside the red zone. When secondaries cheat up to help against Hart, play-action passes to Manningham usually mean a call for the extra-point team.

Senior Adrian Arrington was suspended by Carr for spring ball after domestic violence charges were dropped last December. He actually caught two more passes than Manningham last season and scored eight times. But even if Arrington is reinstated, he could lose playing time to sophomore wideout Greg Mathews, one of the spring's standouts.

The stars of Michigan's 2006 defense had good springs, too. Four of them were selected in the NFL Draft by the middle of the second round. And aside from the Wolverines' final two games last season, cornerback Leon Hall, tackle Alan Branch, end LaMarr Woodley and inside linebacker David Harris certainly deserved that.

The defense hasn't lost all its stars, though. It just hasn't identified them yet. That should change with the emergence of junior defensive tackle Terrance Taylor, fifth-year outside linebacker Shawn Crable, senior safety Jamar Adams and senior cornerback Morgan Trent.

Taylor has amazing quickness and just needs to harness that potential. Crable, who was offered transfer papers by Carr a few years back, could be set for a special farewell. Adams should be solid at safety, while Trent has the speed and experience to be a No. 1 cornerback. Still, there's this lingering vision of Ohio State and USC receivers running free in the secondary.

With just four starters back, Michigan might be a much better defense in its three November games than its five September contests. Fortunately, the Wolverines will play their first four games at home, including visits by Oregon, Notre Dame and Penn State in successive weeks.

Carr always has talent on defense. That means some little-known players will soon be "Big House"-hold names wherever the winged helmet is worshipped. Top candidates include senior tackle Will Johnson and senior linebacker John Thompson, though the latter could be pushed by junior Austin Panter, a junior-college transfer, and sophomore Obi Ezeh.

The secondary has several candidates to join Adams and Trent in the starting lineup. Fifth-year safety Brandent Englemon, senior safety Charles Stewart and sophomore safety Stevie Brown all expect to play. Junior cornerback Doug Dutch was once a promising wideout.

Junior punter Zoltan Mesko could become one of the Wolverines' best after averaging 41.6 yards per punt last year. The placekicking remains uncertain. Sophomore Bryan Wright and seniors Jason Gingell and K.C. Lopata will vie to replace Garrett Rivas. And Michigan is sure to miss Steve Breaston, one of the best kick returners in Big Ten history. Carr just hopes his team returns more punts than kickoffs.

RECRUITING REPORT

With Texas prep All-America quarterback Ryan Mallett (6-6, 247) being the top name, the Wolverines posted the No. 1 recruiting class in the Big Ten.

The strong-armed Mallett, from Texarkana, was a major national recruit who passed for 2,591 yards and 27 touchdowns last season. He could be the offensive leader to replace current signal-caller Chad Henne.

While Mallett leads the list, there's much more to support any claims why the Wolverine class is rated No. 11 nationally by Street & Smith's.

The Michigan coaching staff went to California to land two touted defensive backs—Donovan Warren (6-0, 185) from famed football factory Long Beach Poly and Michael Williams (5-11, 190) of St. Bonaventure in Ventura. Warren, who impressed at a postseason All-American game in Texas, could play soon. Other promising defensive backs include Artis Chambers (6-2, 185) from Indiana and Troy Woolfork (5-11, 175) of Texas. In-state, the Wolverines landed athlete Kelvin Grady (5-10, 165), brother of current running back Kevin Grady. —Doug Huff

If life begins at 40, what begins at 80? Well, Joe Paterno's 42nd season as the coach in Happy Valley, for one thing.

It doesn't matter that JoePa is 11 years older than Wisconsin's Bret Bielema and Northwestern's Pat Fitzgerald combined. What matters most is that Penn State should compete for another league title this fall in its 15th season of Big Ten play. And if the Nittany Lions can win another bowl game, Paterno will have an NCAA-record 23 postseason triumphs, five more than Michigan has had since its first appearance in 1902.

Paterno is 16-6 in January, counting last season's 20-10 Outback Bowl win over Tennessee, and 12-4 in games that constitute the Bowl Championship Series. Both totals could grow in 2008. The only coach with victories in all four major bowls has a team that could wind up smelling like roses.

Only a fool would put that past the second-winningest coach in Division I-A history. He was supposed to be finished years ago. But with 11 wins in 2005 and nine more last season, Paterno's career mark stands at 363-121-3. If that number seems surreal, try this one—there have been almost as many coaching changes since he took over for his mentor, Rip Engle.

A few things have changed in the shadow of Mount Nittany. No, Paterno hasn't decided to slap decals on the side of a classic, clean helmet. And he hasn't traded his trademark glasses for contact lenses and an earring. But Paterno has changed enough aspects of his program to go from the endangered species list to a Lion with some mighty roars left.

Penn State is 12-4 in conference play the past two years and should be 6-2 or better again if quarterback Anthony Morelli and linebacker Dan Connor have big senior seasons, as expected. The Nittany Lions have balance and a great blend of experience and youthful exuberance.

Part of that excitement is winning five of the last six games and not allowing more than 13 points since a 17-10 loss to Michigan. Another is seeing 71,000 people in the stands for your final spring scrimmage.

Paterno saw enough in the spring to think Morelli can be excellent as a passer and leader in his final opportunity. He can certainly complete more than 53.9 percent of his passes for 2,424 yards and 11 touchdowns. Look for close to 60-percent accuracy, 3,000 yards and 20 TDs if Morelli and his teammates stay reasonably healthy.

Carrying the burden of high expectations, he wasn't the equal of Michael Robinson. But that's an unfair comparison style-wise. Morelli is more of a Kerry Collins-type. And in Collins' final season, Penn State thought it was robbed of a national title.

Morelli's top four receivers are as good as any group in the conference, if not the country. Junior wideouts Deon Butler, Jordan Norwood and Derrick Williams play a lot bigger than they look, and sophomore tight end Andrew Quarless has a chance to be as good as he wants.

Butler, a former walk-on, was Morelli's No. 1 target with 48 catches for 637 yards last season, but just two TDs. To describe him as Mr. Dependable is probably another slight. Norwood added 45 catches for 472 yards and two scores—great numbers for someone who sits in most two-wideout sets.

But it's Williams, one of the nation's top recruits two years ago, who has the ability to rewrite the Nittany Lions' record book. He caught 40 balls for just 440 yards and one score in 2006 and ran for another 145 yards and a TD. However,

THE NEXT BIG THING

MAURICE EVANS, DE

The sophomore has gained size and strength since January and could be a terrific pass rusher, based on his strong spring performance.

Williams could use improvement on last year's averages of 11.0 yards a catch and 4.0 yards a carry. He needs to be an impact player at all times, including kick returns.

Quarless had 21 receptions for 288 yards and two scores in his first opportunity. That he averaged 2.7 more yards per catch than Williams and had one more TD grab speaks to Penn State's problems and its untapped potential in the passing game.

The Nittany Lions will miss running back Tony Hunt's combined totals last year of 1,645 yards. But don't expect a huge falloff, just more job-sharing than fans are used to seeing. Seniors Austin Scott and Rodney Kinlaw (5-9, 201) could be a surprising tandem running behind underrated senior fullback Matt Hahn. Scott just has to stay healthy. Kinlaw was the team's No. 2 rusher last season with 199 yards and had a better average than Hunt (5.1 to 5.0).

The offensive line is sure to miss left tackle Levi Brown, who should start for the Arizona Cardinals for the next 10 years, and left guard Robert Price. The Lions could have used right guard Elijah Robinson too, but won't have him after a career-ending spinal condition was diagnosed.

That means the line will need big years from three returning starters—junior center A.Q. Shipley (6-1, 293), junior guard Rich Ohrnberger (6-2, 289) and senior guard John Shaw (6-4, 303). Others who could play key roles include sophomore Dennis Landolt (6-4, 294), junior Gerald Cadogan (6-5, 313) and redshirt freshman Lou Eliades (6-4, 305).

The defense returns six starters but will have to replace tackle machine Paul Posluszny, considered the best linebacker in school history by NFL Hall-of-Famer Jack Ham. Linemen Jay Alford and Tim Shaw will also be missed, especially early in the year. But help is on the way for junior end Josh Gaines, the lone returning starter up front.

Sophomore end Maurice Evans had a great spring and finally has the size to go with his exceptional quickness. Fellow sophomore Jared Odrick, a converted end, also added weight and strength and should help at tackle. Competition on the line could be a great motivator or a sign that holes have yet to be plugged.

Connor, the Nittany Lions' top defender, will move to middle linebacker. If he isn't Posluszny's equal, Connor should be pretty close after making 113 stops on the outside. Paterno thinks Connor is finally at his natural position. Don't be surprised if he's a first-team All-American and Butkus Award candidate.

Junior Sean Lee had 90 stops last season at the other outside linebacker spot. That means sophomore Jerome Hayes, junior Tyrell Sales and redshirt freshman Navorro Bowman have opportunities to be part of the best unit in the country.

The secondary should be excellent with juniors Tony Davis and Justin King returning along with Anthony Scirrotto, last season's fourth-leading tackler. However, Scirrotto is facing multiple charges after a fight and burglary at an apartment near campus.

Junior Kevin Kelly is one of the nation's smallest players. But he could be one of the best placekickers if Kelly's consistency ever matches his range. He can do much better than 22-for-34. Sophomore punter Jeremy Boone performed well under pressure all spring. Williams can be one of the best punt and kick returners Paterno has seen. And it's safe to say he has seen a few.

RECRUITING REPORT

The Nittany Lions continued their reputation as Linebacker U. by landing three touted 'backers in this year's recruiting class: Chris Colasanti (6-2, 215) from Michigan, Andrew Dailey (6-3, 215) of Ohio and Nate Stupar (6-3, 230) from State College High near the Penn State campus.

Besides the linebackers, the Lions concentrated on offensive linemen and appeared to do well in that area.

The blocking prospects include two junior-college transfers for the first time in nearly two decades at Penn State—Ako Poti (6-5, 300) from California and Nerraw McCormick (6-6, 295) of New York.

Other promising line recruits include in-state talent Josh Marks (6-5, 290) and Stefen Wisniewski (6-3, 280), plus Quinn Barham (6-4, 280) from North Carolina. Another O-line prospect is Delaware product Andrew Szczerba (6-7, 265), who played tight end and defensive end in high school.

One of the most intriguing newcomers is defensive lineman Chimaeze Okoli (6-5, 275) of Virginia Beach, Va. A late bloomer with upside, Okoli has played organized football for only two years.

Another heralded defender is lineman Devon Still (6-6, 260), who earned state Player-of-the-Year honors in Delaware.

Others expected to contribute in the near future include defensive back Chaz Powell (6-1, 190), tight end Jon Ditto (6-4, 230), wide receiver Derek Moye (6-5, 200) and athlete Nick Sukay (6-2, 200) from Pennsylvania; defensive end Kevion Latham (6-3, 240) of North Carolina; and offensive lineman J.B. Walton Jr. (6-4, 295) from New York.

Massive losses on offense will have Tressel's Buckeyes relying on 'D' more than usual

Just when we were set to say that The Ohio State University was the premier program of a young century, its coronation was canceled—or at least postponed indefinitely.

The final score of the 2007 BCS Championship Game, in case you missed it (as the Buckeyes did): Florida 41, Ohio State 14. That horrible noise you heard was one last shriek from the banks of the Olentangy.

And to think what might have been. In less than six seasons, Coach Jim Tressel had reached near-deity status. He is half "Woody" and half "goody-goody." And almost as good as a BCS championship in January 2003, the Buckeyes have five wins over Michigan in six tries under Tressel. Seldom had so many prayers been answered in one state.

Thus, one can imagine the shock in Ohio when we all were reminded of the difference between "unbeaten" and "unbeatable." No one could have guessed that when Buckeye blur Ted Ginn Jr. returned the opening kickoff for a 7-0 lead. The Gators ruled the rest of the game 41-7.

Don't expect any team to score 41 against OSU this year. Though Michigan and Florida combined for 83 in the Buckeyes' last two games, no other foe in 2006 got more than 17. And nine teams were held to 10 or less. That could be the case again with five defenders who range from starter to star.

Let's start with junior linebacker James Laurinaitis, who answered the question, "Is there life after A.J. Hawk?" with the answer, "Sure, with a Nagurski Award winner as the nation's top defender." Laurinaitis made 115 stops and was arguably the season's biggest surprise.

He should have plenty of help from junior lineman Vernon Gholston, a second-team All-Big Ten choice, and junior cornerback Malcolm Jenkins, a first-team all-conference pick. Gholston led OSU with 8.5 sacks and 15 tackles for loss last season, while Jenkins averaged 24.8 yards on four interceptions, one shy of Laurinaitis' total.

Junior linebacker Marcus Freeman and junior strong safety Jamario O'Neal are back from a unit that allowed a combined 17 points in four games last October. But for the Buckeyes to be a dominant defense, six spots must be filled. And as always in Columbus, there's no shortage of candidates.

Sophomores Todd Denlinger and Doug Worthington are possibilities on the defensive front, where tackles Quinn Pitcock and David Patterson were unsung heroes last year. Senior linebacker Larry Grant was a star in the spring game, replacing John Kerr. Look for sophomore cornerback Donald Washington and junior free safety Nick Patterson to take over for Antonio Smith and Brandon Mitchell, respectively.

However, it's the OSU offense that has everyone wondering how a team can survive the loss of a Heisman quarterback (Troy Smith), a pair of NFL first-round receivers (Ginn Jr. and Anthony Gonzalez), a 1,000-plus-yard rusher (Antonio Pittman) and two first-team All-Big Ten blockers (center Doug Datish and guard T.J. Downing).

The answer is simple. It can't. No team in Big Ten history has lost more of its attack at once. But if the Buckeyes don't average 34.6 points per game as they did last season, it's not the end of the program. If the offense protects the ball, 24 points per game might be

CHRIS WELLS, RB

The sophomore nicknamed "Beanie" is much bigger than Antonio Pittman. And he should make a transition season easier for spoiled fans to swallow.

The reconstruction starts with three returning linemen. Fifth-year tackle Kirk Barton (6-6, 310) could improve after a second-team all-conference selection last year. And the left side should be fine with massive Steve Rehring (6-8, 329) and tackle Alex Boone (6-8, 325), both juniors. If sophomore center Jim Cordle (6-4, 280) and junior right guard Ben Person (6-4, 315) deliver, the Buckeyes could be better than expected at the skill positions.

Of course, that all depends on capable quarterback play. Junior Todd Boeckman has waited four years for his opportunity. His first goal should be to keep redshirt freshman Antonio Henton and sophomore Rob Schoenhoft on the bench until mop-up time.

OSU should be fine at tailback. All's Wells that ends well, as sophomore Chris Wells (6-1, 225) and junior Maurice Wells (5-10, 190) plan to prove. Chris rushed for 576 yards, a 5.5-yard average and seven scores as Pittman's backup last year and was much more than a short-yardage specialist. Maurice, no relation, added 171 yards in spot duty but is slippery enough to share carries behind senior fullback Dionte Johnson (6-0, 234), a bruising blocker.

Junior Rory Nicol is back at tight end, where he caught 13 balls for 151 yards and three TDs in 2006. And junior split end Brian Robiskie should double his 29 grabs for 383 yards and five scores. Sophomores Brian Hartline and Ray Small will also see the ball more.

Tressel knows the importance of special teams. If he ever forgets it, all that has to be done is pop in a highlight video of Ginn. But the kicking should be fine with sophomore Aaron Pettrey handling extra points and field goals of all distances and junior A.J. Trapasso improving on a 40.6-yard punting average.

RECRUITING REPORT

The headliners of the Buckeyes' class are two members of last year's Street & Smith's High School All-America Top 50—running back Brandon Saine and defensive back Eugene Clifford.

The two in-state prospects lived up to their preseason billing. Saine (6-1, 205), from Piqua, was selected Ohio's Mr. Football, while Clifford (6-2, 190) of Colerain High in Cincinnati was a first-team All-State pick.

Saine, also a standout sprinter in track, displayed his inside-running toughness and pass-catching skills enough for the Buckeyes to consider using him in a number of ways.

He led Piqua to a Division 2 state title with 2,242 rushing yards and 31 rushing touchdowns last season.

Clifford charted 105 tackles and returned three of his pass interceptions for touchdowns last season.

As usual, Ohio State concentrated on top in-state prospects and signed 10 Ohioans among its small class of 15 newcomers.

Other in-state recruits who could get serious early looks include wide receiver/safety Dane Sanzenbacher (5-11, 175); safeties Nate Oliver (6-0, 195), Rocco Pentello (6-0, 195) and Devon Torrence (6-1, 190); cornerback Donnie Evege (5-11, 185); linebacker Jermale Hines (6-2, 205); and defensive end Solomon Thomas (6-5, 225).

The only offensive lineman is Pennsylvania product Evan Blankenship (6-3, 300), who impressed at the Buckeyes' summer camp.

It was a small class for the Buckeyes, but many of their recruits were multiple-sport performers in high school, so it's a versatile, athletic group.

With 20 starters back, Boilers could be dark-horse choice

A little more than a decade ago, things weren't just bad in West Lafayette, Ind. They were so putrid that a once-proud program had become a Big Ten P.H.O.—a perfect Homecoming opponent.

In 12 seasons from 1985-96, Purdue had engineered exactly one winning season. Or to put it another way, the Boilermakers hadn't played in a bowl game in three presidential terms—Ronald Reagan's second and the firsts of George H.W. Bush and Bill Clinton.

Enter the old fly fisherman himself, Joe Tiller. Since he was hired as Purdue's head coach on Nov. 22, 1996, Tiller has taken nine of his 10 teams to postseason play, including a Rose Bowl appearance in Year Four. And the change from chumps to champs wasn't just fast. It was tons of fun for anyone in Old Gold and Black.

Last season was one of the most enjoyable rides. Coming off a huge disappointment and Tiller's only non-bowl season in 2005, Purdue was relegated to the conference's lower half by critics who forgot one critical thing—what often happens to good programs after bad seasons.

The Boilermakers reminded us all of that fact by going 5-3 in conference play and 8-6 overall. Though the party ended with a 24-7 loss to Maryland in the Champs Sports Bowl, Tiller fooled a lot of prognosticators again, the same way he did the day he was introduced.

THE NEXT BIG THING

Heygood has switched from running back to run-stuffer as well as anyone could have hoped. Joe Tiller sees tremendous upside this season in the senior.

A finish among the Big Ten's leaders won't shock anyone this year, not with 20 starters returning. Purdue and Michigan should have the Big Ten's two best offenses. But if the Boilermakers play decent defense and the special teams are OK, a January date looms likely. This could be a special season.

Purdue got a major break last fall by not having to face Ohio State or Michigan. It gets another boost this year with Wisconsin off the slate. And don't be surprised if the Buckeyes suffer more than the Boilermakers do from an Oct. 6 game in Ross-Ade Stadium.

The main reason for Purdue's optimism is the return of senior quarterback Curtis Painter, who led the Big Ten in passing yards last season with 284.6 per game and in total offense with a 292.3-yard average—81.1 more than Ohio State's Troy Smith and 105.8 more than Michigan's Chad Henne. Remember those numbers the next time someone says, "Curtis who?"

Painter can be the Big Ten's MVP if he cuts last year's league-high 19 interceptions to nine. His 59.4-percent accuracy was good enough, and 3,985 yards through the air set a Big Ten season record, breaking the mark of Boilermakers great Drew Brees by two yards.

It's scary to think where Painter's numbers could be in two years. If he stays coachable and confident, there's no reason to think Painter won't be a strong candidate for national honors—even in a program that has never produced a Heisman winner. He plays with a champion's swagger and knows what to do for his team. Now, Painter just has to learn what he can't do.

Painter's favorite brushstroke is a throw to slick senior Dorien Bryant, one of the best receivers in the nation. Bryant has long been a bear for cornerbacks and safeties to cover. He led the conference in catches per game for the second straight year and finished with 87 receptions, 23 more than anyone else in the league. Bryant's grabs netted 1,068 yards, 287 more than the Ohio State's Ted Ginn Jr. and 334 more than Ginn's teammate, Anthony Gonzalez.

Purdue has nine of 11 starters back on defense, which should help a troubled unit that ranked last in the league last season.

Hawkeyes look to bounce back from second-half '06 free-fall

There was a time when any bowl appearance, let alone the sixth in a row, would have been saluted in Iowa City. And we're not just talking about two decades of football hell B.F. (Before Fry). When Kirk Ferentz took over for Hayden following the 1998 season and debuted with a 1-10 mark, some wondered how the Hawkeyes ever played in three Rose Bowls during the span of 10 years.

Ferentz knew the answer to that question as a former Fry assistant. With a reconstruction matched only by Fry and Wisconsin's Barry Alvarez in the past 30 years, Iowa rose to the top again and had three seasons with double-digit wins in the span of four years. If you think that's easy, consider that Michigan State, a school with multiple national titles, has had exactly two seasons with 10 or more wins in its history.

Thus, it had to be a serious downer when a team with a charismatic senior quarterback, one that was supposed to play in January, finished 6-7 with a 26-24 loss to Texas in the Alamo Bowl. Much worse, the Hawkeyes dropped their last five league games and tied for eighth in the conference with a 2-6 record.

Iowa started 5-1, losing only to top-ranked Ohio State in a battle of the 'eyes. But after a 47-17 win over Purdue on Oct. 7, the Hawkeyes won just one more game—a 24-14 non-league decision over Northern Illinois. Three of those setbacks were by three points or less and none by more than two touchdowns. Still, it wasn't the way resourceful leader Drew Tate and nine other regulars planned to go out.

The good news is that 14 starters return in 2007, including standout linebacker Mike Klinkenborg, the Big Ten's No. 2 tackler (129 stops in 12 games), plus seven other defenders. The other plus—at least it would be in most years—is that Michigan and OSU are off the Iowa schedule in 2007 and 2008.

But let's start with the biggest question, the quarterback position, which won't be filled by Tate for the first time in four years. Sophomore Jake Christensen is the only returnee with any collegiate game experience. He started the Northern Illinois game, and was 23-for-35 for 285 yards and two touchdowns in five appearances. If Christensen struggles, redshirt freshmen Arvell Nelson and Richard Stanzi are waiting for their chance.

Though massive tight end Scott Chandler and his 46 catches will be missed, the Hawkeyes return both starting wideouts in sophomore Dominique Douglas and junior Andy Brodell. Douglas led the nation's true freshmen last year with 49 catches and was second with 654 receiving yards. Brodell had 39 grabs for 724 yards and an 18.6-yard average. He had six catches for 159 yards and two scores in the Alamo Bowl.

The running backs are another perceived strength, and it's hard to see how that wouldn't be the case. Seniors Albert Young and Damian Sims combined to rush for 1,443 yards and 13 TDs last season. And senior fullback Tom Busch does all the heavy lifting.

Battling injuries for much of the year, Young still netted 779 yards and seven scores on the ground, giving him 2,205 career yards. He also caught 30 passes for 225 yards. Sims provided an excellent change of pace and rushed for 664 yards, a 5.0 average and six TDs. Meanwhile, Busch stretched his string of consecutive starts to 26.

The offensive line needs three new starters, not counting a tight end.

The defensive line returns intact, though position coach Ron Aiken has moved to the NFL.

Tough, low-key Dantonio may be cure for what ails Spartans

The season always lasted a little too long for John L. Smith in East Lansing. But last year's 4-8 free-fall should have ended after the third quarter of the fourth game. In many ways it did, since the Spartans never recovered from a 40-37 giveaway to Notre Dame on Sept. 23, a surreal slap in the face on a dark, stormy night.

Thus, Smith is living back in Louisville and enjoying life much more than he ever did last fall. And the Spartans have a new head coach, actually an old assistant, in ex-Cincinnati leader Mark Dantonio. The former aide to Nick Saban at MSU and Jim Tressel at Ohio State is as solid as Smith was squirrelly.

In three seasons with the Bearcats, Dantonio led a downtrodden program to three bowls. His team was 7-5 last year and 4-3 in the Big East, including a 30-11 win over No. 7 Rutgers, the highest-ranked team Cincinnati had ever beaten.

Meanwhile, the Spartans dropped eight of their last nine games and tied for 10th at 1-7 in the conference, thanks only to the biggest comeback in NCAA history, a rally from 35 down to win 41-38 at Northwestern. MSU lost by 25 the following week at Indiana, proving that momentum is never automatic.

The Spartans will welcome 13 starters back, six on each side of the ball plus a standout placekicker. But the player they built the program around the past three years, swashbuckling quarterback Drew Stanton, was a second-round pick of the Detroit Lions. At least he'll know how to handle adversity.

The new No. 1 quarterback is junior Brian Hoyer, a capable passer who should fit well in Dantonio's more conventional offense. While Stanton was hurt, Hoyer completed 82 of 144 passes (56.9 percent) for 863 yards and four touchdowns with three interceptions.

The running game should be good with junior Javon Ringer healthy again after a severe knee sprain last year. When at full speed, Ringer is as shifty as they come and a perfect complement to fifth-year bruiser Jehuu Caulcrick.

The running game should find some holes with a fullback in front of them for the first time and four starters returning on the offensive line, plus a big tight end. Tackle Mike Gyetvai and guard Pete Clifford are back on the left side as fifth-year seniors. Guard Roland Martin and tackle Jesse Miller should be better as juniors. And new starting center John Masters will have to come through in his fifth season.

Senior tight end Kellen Davis is a future pro or a problem, depending on the week or the quarter. But gone is the threesome of Kerry Reed, Matt Trannon and Jerramy Scott, who combined for 376 catches at wide receiver in 2006. Sophomore T.J. Williams could be the go-to target, though fifth-year senior Terry Love has the most experience.

The defense is less predictable, especially up front. Senior end Ervin Baldwin is capable of rushing the passer, but disappears for long stretches. Junior Justin Kershaw might be more comfortable as an undersized tackle than a step-slow end. Also in the mix at tackle are senior Ogemdi Nwagbuo, sophomore John Stipek and heralded freshman Antonio Jeremiah. The opposite end could be junior Brandon Long or fifth-year senior Jonal Saint-Dic, though junior-college transfer Michael Jordan could emerge.

Third-year starter Kaleb Thornhill is back for a fifth year at middle linebacker. Junior free safety Otis Wiley is probably the team's best player. But when anyone at that position leads a team with 94 tackles, something is wrong in front of him.

Wildcats on schedule to make potential jump to .500 in '07

If anyone knows how to win football games in Evanston, Ill., it's Pat Fitzgerald, by far the nation's youngest head coach at a mature 32. As a Wildcat player, the former All-America linebacker and two-time winner of the Bronco Nagurski and Chuck Bednarik Awards led Northwestern to the first two of its three Big Ten titles between 1995-2000, a time when even one championship seemed impossible.

Now, Fitzgerald has to transfer that leadership and intelligence off the field. Many believe it's only a matter of time before he does that as well as anyone the Wildcats could have hired after Randy Walker died of a heart attack on June 29, 2006.

Fitzgerald's first year as the boss on the sideline, after five as a trusted assistant to Walker, was a tale of three seasons. Northwestern had a 2-1 start, then dropped six in a row and finished up by winning two of its final three games, including a 21-7 shocker at Iowa. Call that adventure "The Good, the Bad and the Uplifting."

No one at Ryan Field will ever forget the Wildcats' collapse with a five-touchdown lead in a historic Oct. 21 loss to Michigan State. But the next week's scare of mighty Michigan during a 17-3 loss in Ann Arbor is proof of the players' and staff's resiliency and should be remembered just as long.

With steady improvement and some luck staying healthy, Northwestern could crack the Big Ten's upper tier this fall. Seven regulars return on offense, including juniors Tyrell Sutton at running back and C.J. Bachér at quarterback. Eight more starters are back on defense. And the Wildcats have conference-title contenders Wisconsin and Penn State right where they want them—off the schedule.

Northwestern's best shot to contend for the near future will be in two years, when every skill position player in the 2007 starting lineup will be back. Bachér and Sutton should be primed for their fourth seasons of play, with the latter possibly closing in on every Wildcats rushing record.

In one of the best debuts in conference history, Sutton rushed for 1,474 yards two years ago. That makes last season's 1,000 yards seem almost puny by comparison. But don't be fooled. Sutton only carried the ball 189 times, averaged 5.3 yards per try and also caught 34 passes. That means he's on pace to rush for 4,948 yards, catch 168 passes and score 50 touchdowns in his career.

Bachér completed 95 of 161 passes (59.0 percent) for 1,172 yards and six TDs in six games last season. His biggest problem was staying healthy and protecting the football, as seen by eight interceptions. If he fixes that problem, Bachér can be known as Fitzgerald's first outstanding quarterback. If not, he'll feel the heat from sophomore Mike Kafka, a pass/run threat, and redshirt freshman Joe Mauro. Neither came to school with the intention of holding a clipboard.

The receiving corps will miss Shawn Herbert's 47 catches. But juniors Ross Lane, Eric Peterman and Rasheed Ward combined for 75 catches last year. And sophomore Andrew Brewer, who started some at quarterback in 2006, could be a key receiver and special teams player.

The strength of Northwestern's defense should be up front. However, the Wildcats still have questions at linebacker. And, no, Fitzgerald doesn't have eligibility left. Senior Adam Kadela will have to provide leadership in the middle. The secondary includes seniors Deante Battle at cornerback and Reggie McPherson at free safety.

THE NEXT BIG THING

» ANDREW BREWER, WR/KR
A sophomore who started four games at quarterback last year, Brewer has enough size and speed to be an all-purpose threat.

Hoeppner has put the 'hope' back in Hoosier football

To go from where Indiana football was (or more often wasn't) to where the program aspired to be demanded an instant infusion of leadership. Next, it required a supreme commitment by all concerned parties, from the administration to the head coach to his staff to the players and, yes, even to some long-suffering fans.

The Hoosiers took step one when they hired Terry Hoeppner from Miami (Ohio) to make the program as good as it could be. See: Mallory, Bill, if you don't remember the late 1980s with new College Football Hall of Fame electee Anthony Thompson, the best player Indiana has had.

Hoeppner had surgery in December 2005 for what was described as a possible recurrent brain tumor, and missed two games last season for an additional operation. He had to sit out Indiana's spring drills for what was described as "personal health matters."

Fortunately for Indiana, Hoeppner assembled quite a staff, led by Offensive Coordinator Bill Lynch, the former head coach at Ball State and DePauw. It will be his and the rest of the staff's job to steer the ship until Hoeppner returns.

The waters were fairly smooth last season before three straight losses to Minnesota, Michigan and Purdue left the Hoosiers home for the holidays with a 5-7 overall mark and 3-5 record in Big Ten play. It wasn't the outcome that anyone wanted. But there have been worse seasons in Bloomington.

THE NEXT BIG THING

» MARCUS THIGPEN, RB

The junior isn't a new contributor for the Hoosiers, but he could be a completely new ball-carrier if he uses his breathtaking speed better.

Clearly, Indiana is headed in the right direction, even if the standings don't always reflect that. Much of the team's improvement came after the identification and development of quarterback Kellen Lewis (6-1, 177). As a redshirt freshman last year, he completed 190 of 346 throws (54.9 percent) for 2,221 yards and 14 touchdowns with seven interceptions. Lewis also led the team in rushing with 441 yards and added five more scores.

The Hoosiers have some outstanding players. They just need more of them. But as long as the offense has a wide receiver like junior James Hardy, who recorded 51 catches for 722 yards and 10 scores in 10 games last year, it has a chance. Hardy was more consistent as a freshman, when he had 61 grabs for 893 yards. But he's fully capable of being the top target in the Big Ten and one of the nation's best wideouts.

Hardy could have help this season from redshirt freshman Terrance Turner, who burst onto the scene with seven catches for 157 yards and two TDs in the spring game. And former starting quarterback Blake Powers is back for a fifth season, this time at tight end.

Also returning at the skill positions are junior wide receiver James Bailey, who was second on the team last season with 40 grabs for 401 yards, and junior running back Marcus Thigpen, second last year with 387 yards rushing and a 3.9-yard average. Expect significant improvement in 2007 from one of the fastest players in the league, if not all of college football.

Optimism lies in the offense designed by Lewis, which should open things up. Indiana has most of the offensive line back, including five players who started at least five games. Senior guard John Sandberg (6-2, 290) and junior tackle Charlie Emerson (6-5, 266) aren't as big as some right sides. But they did each start 11 games last season. Sophomores Pete Saxon (6-6, 310) and Rodger Saffold (6-5, 275) should be much improved at left guard and tackle, respectively.

Indiana also returns eight starters on defense, including three down linemen and all of last year's starting linebackers. The Hoosiers should have one of the better sets of senior cornerbacks with Leslie Majors and Tracy Porter, a second-team All-Big Ten choice last year.

The Glen Mason era ended after Minnesota appeared in another bowl game. No one cared about the bowl appearance when the Golden Gophers disappeared in the fourth quarter and overtime. By allowing 30 points in just over 15 minutes, they gift-wrapped a game for Texas Tech and triggered a head-coaching search.

Enter Tim Brewster from the Denver Broncos, who has a Big Ten background from his days at Illinois, but a 0-0 mark as a head coach. From all early indications in the Twin Cities, he and his staff have restored the team's confidence and rebuilt a shattered psyche.

Minnesota must find a replacement for three-year starting quarterback Bryan Cupito. Brewster has his first key personnel decision with junior Tony Mortensen and redshirt freshman Adam Weber. Both do roughly the same things, so an injury or a substitution shouldn't mean much to the system.

The best news for either quarterback is the return of senior running back Amir Pinnix, arguably the most overlooked star in the conference. Pinnix rushed for 1,272 yards, a 5.0 average and 10 touchdowns in 2006. He can always run behind senior center Tony Brinkhaus, sophomore guard Nedward Tavale and senior tackle Steve Shidell.

Nine starters return on defense, with the three best players being junior end Willie VanDeSteeg, senior linebacker Mike Sherels and junior cornerback Dominic Jones.

Brewster has been selling himself and his program non-stop since arriving in Minneapolis. Selling is fine. But he needs to buy time.

When Ron Zook arrived at Illinois two years ago, he knew the only way to compete was to get better football players. But actually having the ability to do that has impressed a lot of people and depressed some beaten opponents.

The former Florida coach has long been known as a charmer who could get good players and leave them roughly that way—nothing more. But Illinois is getting better as a team, though the record slipped from 2-9 to 2-10 last season. The Illini were able to win a conference game, celebrating that victory in Spartan Stadium.

Better yet, the program's disposition changed, as seen in a dramatic upgrade in the run game. When was the last time a Big Ten rushing champ finished last in the standings? That would be 2006, as Illinois averaged 188.8 yards per game and 5.2 per carry. And who would ever have guessed that the Illini would finish last through the air?

But that's what happened with freshman quarterback Isiah "Juice" Williams learning the game and scampering for gains. Williams (6-2, 220) is a marvelous athlete, but he has a lot to learn at this level. And 39.5-percent accuracy with the same number of interceptions (nine) than touchdowns won't get it done in any league.

Williams may have to be more of a passer since Illinois lost veteran runners Pierre Thomas and E.B. Halsey. Junior Rashard Mendenhall (5-11, 210) is back with his gaudy 8.2-yard average, however. If he can come within three yards of that this season, the Illini ground game should be fine.

The top three receivers return, including deceptive junior Kyle Hudson, who has led the team in catches the past two seasons. The big news with the wideouts this offseason was the arrival of midyear freshman Arrelious Benn, who wowed the staff in spring drills.

Look for power again to come from the South, but the big surprise may lie up North, where Mizzou could loom large

By BLAIR KERKHOFF
Kansas City Star

The Big 12 suffered a little slippage in 2006. There were no victories over a ranked non-conference opponent and a 3-5 bowl record. No team finished in the final top 10 for the first time in league history. NFL teams selected 28 of its players in the April draft, a total on the lower side compared with previous years.

There were some extenuating circumstances. Oklahoma was robbed of a victory at Oregon and tricked out of another one against Boise State. And Texas had a hard act to follow after its national-championship season of 2005.

And there were some breakthroughs. Nebraska returned to the league title game for the first time since 1999. Texas A&M ended a six-game losing streak to Texas and Kansas State returned to a bowl game for the first time since winning the 2003 league title.

This year looks to continue trends established over the past few seasons.

Defending league champion Oklahoma and Texas appear to be the strongest teams. The Sooners are established up and down the lineup, except at quarterback, where a three-man race will run into fall camp.

Texas returns one of the league's top quarterbacks in Colt McCoy, who established several freshman standards a year ago, but the Longhorns have questions in several other areas such as pass defense and rushing offense.

The South should again be the stronger division, with Oklahoma State poised to make a move, Texas A&M in a pounding mode and Texas Tech flashing its spread offense with several new targets.

The North should come down to Nebraska and Missouri. The nod here goes to the Tigers, seeking a first-place finish for the first time since 1969. One of the Big 12's top offenses, led by QB Chase Daniel and tight ends Martin Rucker and Chase Coffman, will power Mizzou. Defense is the mystery.

One new coach isn't exactly a new face. Iowa State's Gene Chizik, who replaced Dan McCarney, had been Texas' defensive coordinator the previous two years and hopes to recruit some of the Texas-based talent that's helped the South dominate the league so convincingly.

RECRUITING ROUNDUP

3. OKLAHOMA ▸ Quarterback Keith Nichol will battle for the starting job.
4. OKLAHOMA STATE ▸ Cowboys went after and got skill players on both sides.
5. COLORADO ▸ Terrific rebound class led by offensive lineman Ryan Miller.
6. MISSOURI ▸ Fans were happy about 13 signees from inside the Show-Me State.
7. KANSAS STATE ▸ Second-year staff finds athletes, then positions.
8. TEXAS A&M ▸ Coach Dennis Franchione countered fans' gripes about low-rated class with two sleepers he signed at previous stops: Brian Urlacher (New Mexico) and DeMeco Ryans (Alabama).
10. TEXAS TECH ▸ Raiders got their offensive-line targets; the best could be Lonnie Edwards.
11. IOWA STATE ▸ Juco-heavy class led by running back Jamicah Bass.
12. BAYLOR ▸ The bloodlines are there. Five signees are sons of NFL players.

Mighty Mizzou looks to place history aside and fulfill its vast potential with a title

The problem with making Missouri the favorite in the North Division is history.

The Tigers not only haven't won a division title, as last season's second-place tie matched their best finish in 11 years.

The last league championship? That would be 1969.

The Big 12 has operated in cycles like any conference. Some programs are title contenders, some not. But where the league separates itself from others is the number of schools that have actually won divisions.

In 11 years, only three from each side have finished first.

In the North, it has been Nebraska, Kansas State and Colorado.

In the South, Texas, Oklahoma and Texas A&M.

Once, Iowa State matched the Buffs' first-place record, but the Cyclones lost out on a tiebreaker.

Separation lines clearly have been defined, but this may be the year of a breakthrough. Missouri just might have enough talent and momentum to play on the first week of December.

Let's start with the area of most concern: Missouri will be as good as its defense allows.

The bowl game typified the Tigers' woes a year ago. Mizzou had reached the midway point of the fourth quarter with a two-touchdown lead on Oregon State in the Sun Bowl. The Tigers had been flying up and down the field and would amass 561 total yards, averaging nearly nine yards per play. All they needed in the final minutes was a defensive stop.

It didn't happen. The Beavers scored twice, caught everybody by surprise by tacking on a two-point conversion after the second score, and broke Missouri hearts with a 39-38 triumph.

Six starters are gone from that unit, which really was never the same after defensive end Brian Smith went down with a broken hip against Kansas State. Smith was on his way to a Big 12 career sack record and forced opponents to think about which way to run.

But Missouri finished with the second-worst rushing defense in league games.

"There is no question we have to get better against the run," Missouri Coach Gary Pinkel says. "Sorting out the defensive line is the key."

Specifically, the ends. Nose tackle Lorenzo Williams and tackle Evander Hood are returning starters, but junior-college transfer Andy Maples had a spring that was good enough to be part of the rotation, or even move one of the starters to the outside. The Tigers worked with five scholarship ends in the spring and only one, Stryker Sulak, has starting experience.

"We have to get more physical up front," Pinkel says. "We haven't changed our structure in any way, just our approach."

Linebacker is also a rebuilding unit, with Brock Christopher as the only returning starter. Christopher will move to the middle from the strongside and is a good one. Sean Weatherspoon played in all 13 games last season and gets the nod at weakside. Van Alexander, set to start last year before a hip injury cut his season short, is lining up on the strongside.

Freshmen Michael Keck and Luke Lambert, who cut short their senior years of high school to participate in spring drills, are up-and-comers and will play this season, as will converted running back Connell Davis.

The secondary offers much the same story, although the Tigers look solid at cornerback. Darnell Terrell led Missouri with nine pass breakups and earned some all-conference accolades. On the other side is Hardy Ricks, who started eight games as an injury replacement.

William Moore will start at free safety. His 2006 highlight was an interception returned for a touchdown against Texas Tech. Cornelius Brown looks like the starter at strong safety. Del Howard, who played in 12 games as a true frosh, will get a look at safety.

One way for the defense to improve is to keep itself off the field. Missouri's offense was so efficient last year, the Tigers ranked dead last in time of possession in league games, holding the ball for an average of 27:46. This from a team that ranked eighth nationally with 425.6 yards per game.

"I remember going into last season thinking we had some players who could be impact guys," Pinkel says. "And that happened."

In a big way. The Tigers entered last season knowing quarterback Chase Daniel could perform. But for Daniel to statistically surpass in some areas the player he replaced—offensive machine Brad Smith—he went above and beyond.

In his sophomore season, Daniel set school records for passing touchdowns (28), yards (3,527) and total offense (3,906).

He's the guy from Southlake, Texas, that Texas didn't recruit until after Daniel had Missouri's undivided attention. The Longhorns didn't like Daniel's 6-foot frame, but he's proved in his two seasons that height isn't everything.

Daniel's aim this year is to put an even wider gap between touchdown passes and interceptions. Last year, half of his 10 picks came against two foes he'll see this season, Oklahoma and Nebraska.

As he did last year, Daniel will throw often to the tight end, a position that combined for 111 receptions, 1,149 yards and 14 touchdowns in 2006. How is that player not in the NFL? He will be—both of them. Those were the combined totals of Martin Rucker and Chase Coffman, the nation's top tight-end tandem.

Rucker was a first-team all-league pick by the coaches, Coffman by the media. And Pinkel caught heat for not having them on the field at the same time enough last year.

But there are only so many balls to go around and the Tigers' receiving corps needs its fill. Missouri returns about 90 percent of its production at wide receiver, starting with Will Franklin (48 catches, 829 yards). Tommy Saunders (25, 271) is the team's most sure-handed receiver and, despite starting only twice as a freshman, Jared Perry wound up leading Big 12 rookies with 37 receptions for 429 yards.

With all this throwing, do Missouri running backs get lonely? Tony Temple didn't in the Sun Bowl, when he rushed for a school bowl record of 194 yards. Temple went over 1,000 yards for the year that day to complete a breakout season.

Completing the picture is a dependable kicking game. Special-teams woes have at times been an issue at Missouri, but not in 2006. Walk-on Jeff Wolfert won the starting role last fall and became a Lou Groza Award semifinalist with a school-record 18 field goals (20 attempts) and 99 points. Punter Adam Crossett became more adept with his hang time last year, and is on his way to becoming one of the best booters in school history.

Saunders and Woods will likely handle the punt-return chores, while reserve tailback Earl Goldsmith is back as the kick-return specialist.

As it did last year, the schedule sets up nicely for the Tigers. Two of the non-league teams, Illinois and Mississippi, are coming off a combined 6-18 season. There are only three league road contests because the game with Kansas begins a two-year run in Kansas City.

If the defense holds, the Tigers could win a division—and make history.

THE NEXT BIG THING

ANDY MAPLES, DT

Signed from junior college to help improve the defense, he'll get his opportunity. One JC service had Maples listed as the nation's third-best tackle.

RECRUITING REPORT

The Tigers collected signatures from 27 prospects, including eight touted in-state signees.

The most heralded recruit from the Missouri high school ranks is defensive end/linebacker Michael Keck (6-5, 215), who received some All-America recognition and was recruited by several Big 12, Big Ten and SEC schools.

Keck is an aggressive defender with a nonstop motor who could play early. A productive and active athlete, he recorded more than 250 tackles his last two prep seasons.

Two other key in-state recruits are running backs Derrick Washington (6-1, 195), who helped his team win a state championship in 2005, and Carl Gettis (5-10, 185), who rushed for more than 1,200 yards as a high school senior.

Other Missouri prep products who could contribute early are offensive lineman Jayson Palmgren (6-3, 295) and wide receiver Rolandis Woodland (6-5, 185).

Two out-of-state recruits who might make future impacts are linebacker/defensive end George White (6-2, 255) from Michigan, plus athlete Gilbert Moye (6-2, 200) and wide receiver Kendall Irving (5-10, 175) from Texas.

Five junior-college transfers are in this class. The top name could be defensive lineman Andy Maples (6-4, 295), who played at the College of the Sequoias in California.

The Tigers failed to land a quarterback, however, which may come back to haunt them in the future.

Sun Devils' loss is Huskers' gain—transfer Keller gives Callahan his gunslinger

Progress never moves fast enough. Nebraska has taken another step in each season since Coach Bill Callahan's first in Lincoln, when the Cornhuskers finished 5-6. There was 8-4 and a bowl game in 2005 and 9-5 and a division championship last year.

"I think we're getting better and have closed the gap on a lot of people," Callahan says.

Clearly, the 2006 North Division title was significant. Nebraska hadn't played in the Big 12 Championship Game since 1999. Finishing 6-2 in league play (with one of the losses coming at home to Texas on a tough-break fumble) gave the program a true sense of accomplishment.

The Cornhuskers swept their North opponents for the first time in seven years. They had been 10-10 against them in the previous four seasons. When looking to reestablish dominance, it's good to start in the neighborhood.

But with an opportunity to make another statement, Nebraska was silenced in its final two games. The Huskers sought a landmark-type victory in either the Big 12 title game against Oklahoma or the Cotton Bowl against Auburn. Both were top-10 teams.

It didn't happen, so into 2007 Nebraska rides looking to build on its accomplishments without giving up ground.

With 13 returning starters, the Cornhuskers appear good enough to keep moving forward. Some of the optimism is centered on a position where a starter doesn't return, but a drop-off isn't expected.

Last season, quarterback Zac Taylor led an offense that finished No. 14 nationally in total yards. The 414.6 average per game was a 94-yard improvement over 2005. Taylor set several school passing records, even though he was on campus for only two seasons, and was named the league's Offensive Player of the Year.

Tough to replace, right?

Maybe not.

Sam Keller joined the program last fall from Arizona State after a strange turn of events in Tempe. Keller had been named the starter in fall camp before Coach Dirk Koetter (very publicly) switched to Rudy Carpenter the next day after meeting with the team's senior leaders.

Keller checked out and headed for Nebraska and brought along some impressive credentials. He's played in 20 games over three seasons, starting the first seven of the 2005 campaign. His first career start came in the 2004 Sun Bowl and he was named the game's Offensive MVP after throwing for 370 yards and three touchdowns against Purdue.

As the full-time starter for ASU, he averaged 270.6 yards per game and threw 20 touchdowns and nine interceptions. He tossed four touchdown passes in each of the first four games, including a loss to LSU.

"I was on fire that year," Keller recalls.

But a thumb injury ended his season, and a coaching decision ended his Arizona State career.

"They made a business decision to go in a different direction," Keller says.

So did Keller. He landed at a program that runs an NFL-type offense and picked up the schemes quickly in his transfer sit-out year. The Sun Devils suffered through a tumultuous season that culminated in Koetter's dismissal.

Callahan played it smart and didn't name Keller the starter until after spring ball. Keller competed with the capable Joe Ganz, a fourth-year junior who was part of Callahan's first recruiting class. Ganz knows the offense better than anyone outside of the coach's office.

But Keller's been in the fire, and all signs point to a return to the flames this season. Whoever is throwing for Nebraska will have the best set of pass catchers in school history as targets. Remember, the old option Huskers went about a quarter-century without much of a passing offense.

However, these guys are good. Maurice Purify is the playmaker, a large (6-4, 220 pounds), physical wide receiver who caught the game-winner at Texas A&M. Terrence Nunn (42 receptions) led Nebraska in catches last year and Nate Swift, Todd Peterson and Frantz Hardy have proven to be good-hands people. They're all back.

Tight end Matt Herian has moved on, but projected starter J.B. Phillips, a good blocker, combines with touchdown-maker Hunter Teafatiller to give Nebraska choices at the position.

Running backs are frequent targets of dumps and screens, and the

THE NEXT BIG THING

» MAJOR CULBERT, RB

Culbert will play somewhere; he's too good not to take snaps. But in the offensive backfield? The sophomore was groomed as a safety last season but played running back in the spring.

Cornhuskers should have more focus at the position than a year ago when four players battled for playing time.

Brandon Jackson eventually emerged, but he's moved on, leaving Marlon Lucky as the back whose time has come. Lucky was a highly decorated high school player who rushed for 762 yards and six touchdowns last season. The Huskers survived a scare when Lucky was helped off the field late in the spring game with a knee injury. It turned out to be a sprain.

The offensive line mirrors the program as a whole. It bottomed-out a few years ago and has steadily improved. Three full-time starters—center Brett Byford, right guard Mike Huff and right tackle Matt Slauson—are back along with Andy Christensen, who started six games at left guard. Coaches are high on Carl Nicks, a 330-pound senior who steps in at left tackle.

Defensive line is where the replacement action is. The Huskers lost all of their starters, including top-flight ends Adam Carriker and Jay Moore. Whereas end was the line's strength last season, Nebraska will lead with its middle this time.

Nose tackle Ndamukong Suh played in all 14 games last season and eight of his 19 tackles were for losses. He can line up at both tackle positions and the 6-4, 305-pounder can be a dominant player.

Tackle Ty Steinkuhler has the bloodlines. His father, Dean, was an Outland Trophy-winning offensive lineman. Ty Steinkuhler was moved to the interior after opening his career at end.

Stepping in at one end is Barry Turner, who does it all. He's been a sack-master (with six in 2005), a special-teams force by blocking a late field goal against Texas A&M and even a receiver. He caught a touchdown pass off a field-goal formation against Colorado. Zach Potter and Clayton Sievers, a converted tight end, will fight for the other end spot.

Four senior linebackers will form the heart of the defense. Returning starter Bo Ruud moved from the strongside to weakside to take advantage of his coverage skills. Corey McKeon is the unit's emotional leader who battled injuries last season and is eager to return to his sophomore form.

Defensive Coordinator Kevin Cosgrove will find time for Steve Octavien and Lance Brandenburgh, along with sophomore Phillip Dillard, who missed last season with a knee injury.

The secondary received a blow when cornerback Zackary Bowman tore a knee tendon in the spring. Bowman, who had a big freshman season that was capped by several big plays in a bowl victory over Michigan, missed last year with a torn ACL.

The original report said Bowman would miss six months, which, after rehabbing, might mean a return to the field by midseason. But Bowman said at the end of spring practice that he expects to be back sooner.

If so, that would be a huge boost to the Cornhuskers, who return three starters to the secondary in free safety Tierre Green and cornerbacks Cortney Grixby and Andre Jones.

Reliable kicker Jordan Congdon has moved on and, with kickoffs moving back to the 30-yard line this season, Nebraska may turn to strong-legged Alex Henery, a redshirt freshman from Omaha. If not Henery, junior Jake Wesch, who has thrown a touchdown pass from field-goal formation, figures to be the kicker.

Starting punter Dan Titchener returns, but don't count out redshirt freshman Michael Such.

RECRUITING REPORT

The Cornhuskers landed 28 recruits in the 2007 class ranked No. 14 nationally by Street & Smith's.

A blend of high school prospects and junior-college talent will hit campus this fall in Lincoln.

The touted jucos include defensive back Armando Murillo (6-0, 195), linebacker/defensive back Larry Assante (6-1, 205), quarterback Zach Lee (6-2, 205), offensive lineman Shukree Barfield (6-4, 310) and defensive linemen Joseph Townsend (6-4, 295) and Kevin Dixon (6-4, 275). Murillo could emerge as the early impact player among the group.

The high school list is headed by prep All-America wide receiver Niles Paul (6-1, 200) from Omaha. Paul is the nephew of former Cornhusker and current NFL running back Ahman Green.

The top-rated out-of-state players were offensive lineman Javario Burkes (6-4, 320) from Arizona and linebacker Austin Stafford (6-2, 210) of California.

Other prime recruits are defensive lineman Terrence Moore (6-3, 265) from Louisiana, running back Quintin Castille (6-1, 235) of Texas, linebacker Blake Lawrence (6-2, 210) from Kansas, athlete DeAndre West (6-1, 195) from California, defensive lineman William Yancy (6-4, 230) of Arizona and defensive back Latravis Washington (6-3, 205) from Florida. —Doug Huff

Momentum from big Texas win should carry strongly into new campaign for Wildcats

Kansas State entered 2006 without the benefit of the doubt.

That's what happens when the legendary coach gets replaced by an exciting but unproven candidate and the starting quarterback is fresh out of high school.

Despite several returning starters, especially some top defensive personnel, the Wildcats were an easy choice for a bottom-half finish. And the forecast seemed dead on when K-State escaped Illinois State in the season opener and fell at Baylor to begin Big 12 play.

But the Wildcats started to figure things out, much more quickly than a program starting over could be expected. They started picking up some league victories until a triumph at Colorado made them bowl-eligible.

Then came the unforgettable night in Texas. The Wildcats outslugged the mighty Longhorns, handing them their first Big 12 loss in three years, ending a 21-game conference winning streak for Mack Brown's bunch.

Kansas State didn't win again, but no matter. The Wildcats had recaptured a spirit missing in Bill Snyder's final two seasons as coach and would seem to carry momentum into this season, although Coach Ron Prince isn't so sure.

"We had a nice season, but we didn't come close to reaching our goals," Prince says. "Our goal will always be to win the Big 12 North and to compete for the conference championship."

Kansas State faithful love the approach. Prince came to Manhattan to serve as a head coach for the first time. He had been Virginia's offensive coordinator the previous three years and was an offensive line coach for several schools in the East dating to 1992.

But he's a Midwest guy, born and raised in Junction City, Kan., and that endeared him to the fan base.

When Prince really won them over was when he talked the Freeman family out of their son Josh's commitment to Nebraska. Josh Freeman won the starting QB role in the fall and, if not for Texas' Colt McCoy, would have been the league's top offensive newcomer.

Freeman took over the starting role from veteran Dylan Meier after four games, looked like a freshman for a few games, then played like a commander when it mattered most. In the final four contests of the regular season, Freeman completed 64.5 percent of his passes and averaged 231.2 yards per game. K-State won three of those games, including the Texas triumph, to earn the bowl bid.

Any quarterback would feel good about the targets at wide receiver. Kansas State lost a good one in speedster Yamon Figurs, but former walk-on Jordy Nelson, the leading receiver in each of the past two seasons, is back and so are Daniel Gonzalez and Cedric Wilson, who have starting experience.

Also returning are the Wildcats' top two running backs. Leon Patton and James Johnson combined for 1,012 rushing yards and eight touchdowns last year.

Kansas State will sport a new defensive look, a 3-4, operated by new Defensive Cordinator Tim Tibesar. He was the special-teams coordinator last year. The change means new roles for several players, but it won't put an end to defensive end/outside linebacker Ian Campbell's sack ability. Campbell led Big 12 down linemen in tackles for loss (17.5) and was second in the league in sacks with 11.5. Like Nelson, Campbell came to the program as a walk-on and was one of the league's surprise stars of 2006. The secondary, led by yet another former walk-on, safety Marcus Watts, is a strength.

THE NEXT BIG THING

» MATT WYKES, WR

Wykes could be the next in line of impact players who started in the program as walk-ons. Wide receiver Jordy Nelson, safety Marcus Watts and defensive tackle Ian Campbell all began that way. Wykes, a junior, opened eyes with a big spring game.

Mangino looking to hold on to a few more second-half leads to get KU back in bowl groove

Kansas is coming off the ultimate what-if season.

What if the Jayhawks had held on to fourth-quarter leads against Nebraska and Texas A&M?

What if they had put away Oklahoma State after leading 17-0 in the third quarter?

What if they didn't blow an 18-point fourth-quarter lead at Baylor?

All of those conference losses were sharp blows to the solar plexus, but the most painful was the one that started the trend. On a Friday night at Toledo, the Jayhawks managed to snatch defeat from the jaws of victory, somehow falling in overtime. Several times Kansas could have ended it, and instead the Jayhawks bumbled it away.

Kansas held the second-half lead in five of its six losses. Win any one of them and the Jayhawks get to seven victories and are in a bowl game for a successive season for the first time in school history.

Instead, although Kansas finished bowl-eligible at 6-6, there was no postseason spot for the team.

Where does Kansas go from here? The Jayhawks should be as good as last season, if not a little better, with 14 returning starters and a schedule dressed for success.

But a few things need fixing, beginning with pass defense.

Kansas ranked 119th in the nation—dead last—in yards allowed per game (269.1) through the air. The percentage of passes completed against the Jayhawks wasn't that bad (52.8) and the 22 TDs, although on the high side, weren't the most surrendered in the Big 12.

But the defense let down at critical times. Nebraska launched three scoring passes of 75 yards or longer on KU. Louisiana-Monroe put up 377 passing yards.

The contradiction here is Kansas has one of the nation's top cornerbacks in Aqib Talib. He led the nation in passes defended (breakups plus interceptions) and tied for the Big 12 lead with six picks.

Talib's career may be headed on the same path as former Kansas standout Charles Gordon. It was Talib's emergence in the secondary two years ago that allowed Gordon, an excellent corner, to be used at wide receiver.

In last year's season-ending loss to Missouri, Talib lined up at wide receiver, took a short pass and went 42 yards for a touchdown. He worked with the offense, often the No. 1 unit, during spring drills.

An improved defense would help Kansas figure out things on offense. The quarterbacks getting the late-season snaps return, but spring practice didn't determine a starter between Kerry Meier and Todd Reesing. Meier started eight games and averaged 149 yards per game while completing 56.5 percent of his passes. Reesing took off his redshirt in the ninth game and sparked the Jayhawks to a comeback victory over Colorado.

"I would like to have one guy be the No. 1 quarterback," Coach Mark Mangino says. "I think that's the way it will play out."

Although nobody was named the starting quarterback out of spring, the guess is Cody Hawkins will get the job. But not because he's the favorite-son candidate.

Cody is the son of Coach Dan Hawkins, and dad needs a QB. Last year's guy, Bernard Jackson, got better as the year progressed, but the Buffs went 2-10 and Jackson was the starter in nine of the losses.

Colorado didn't have a passing game with Jackson, but his 677 rushing yards were the third-most ever for a Buffs quarterback. Hawkins ran the scout team as a freshman last season and is a superb passer. He's battling transfer Nick Nelson, who passed for 1,910 yards in the California junior-college ranks last season.

Jackson will continue to play. He's too athletic not to. In spring, he lined up at wide receiver, kick-return specialist and running back, as well as quarterback. He's Colorado's newest "Slash."

Hugh Charles returns as the featured running back, and the wide receiver position has many candidates. Riar Geer is a rising star at tight end.

"It's no secret we need to improve in almost every aspect on offense," Hawkins says. "We didn't generate enough big plays, the passing game didn't generate a lot."

Defense kept Colorado in most games last year. The Buffs were especially tough up front and finished fourth in the Big 12 in rushing defense. Tackles George Hypolite and Brandon Nicolas are back, but they'll miss end Abraham Wright and his 11.5 sacks.

The defensive stud is inside linebacker Jordon Dizon, whose 137 tackles last season were the most by a Colorado player in nine years. Dizon will become the first four-year starter in the 18-year career of Colorado Linebackers Coach Brian Cabral. Terrence Wheatley is a returning all-conference cornerback.

One of the nation's top defensive coaches is Iowa State's new head man. Gene Chizik moves to Ames from Texas, where he coordinated the Longhorns' crew the previous two seasons, including the national-title team. Before then, he headed up Auburn's defense that led the nation in fewest points allowed.

He takes over for Dan McCarney, who many believed deserved one more year to put the Cyclones back on track. After all, McCarney's teams went to five bowl games in six years.

Chizik has his hands full, but there are some building blocks. The Cyclones return the league's top quarterback in terms of career yards and touchdowns. Bret Meyer is also the nation's top returning player in career total offense (7,979 yards).

But he's coming off a junior year in which his numbers regressed. His yards per game went from 239 to 212 and his touchdown total fell from 19 to 12. One problem: Meyer was running for his life. He was sacked 38 times last season.

Favorite target Todd Blythe also suffered through a junior slump. He caught nine scoring passes in each of his first two years, but got only eight last season and his 34 receptions were 17 fewer than his sophomore campaign.

Only two offensive linemen, guards Tom Schmeling and Reggie Stephens, have starting experience. At running back, Jason Scales will get the nod, at least until junior-college transfer J.J. Bass arrives in August.

Defense is Chizik's territory, and that's the side that needs more attention, especially up front. Iowa State will have trouble getting a true two-deep, and forget about experienced players. Linebacker Alvin Bowen led the nation in tackles at 12.9 per game. Safety Caleb Berg and cornerback Chris Singleton are solid.

'Plucky bunch' from Norman just needs a quarterback to make things very interesting

Gadget plays on three straight snaps—the final play of regulation, then the overtime touchdown and conversion—and Boise State became the stuff of legend. The Broncos took down mighty Oklahoma in the classic David-versus-Goliath matchup in the Fiesta Bowl.

The game rightfully will take its place among the game's fantastic finishes. It may even be the greatest, but let's remember something about the characters. Boise was a terrific team, undefeated and entirely capable of beating anybody with the possible exception of Florida and Ohio State.

And Oklahoma, while carrying the name and reputation of college football royalty, was actually a plucky bunch that overcame some bad breaks to even reach the bowl game. The Sooners lost their starting quarterback in the preseason to an NCAA scandal, got jobbed in the loss at Oregon and had to battle back in the South Division after falling to Texas.

College football may remember the 2006 Sooners as Boise State's foil. But this is a team that should be fondly recalled, starting with quarterback Paul Thompson.

He waited four years to become the starter, got his chance to open 2005 and promptly lost the job to Rhett Bomar after the Sooners were upset by TCU in the opener. Thompson switched to wide receiver with nary a complaint.

When Bomar and a teammate were caught with their hands in the cookie jar last August, Thompson was asked to return to his original position and he performed admirably.

Then the Sooners lost star running back Adrian Peterson to a broken collarbone after a touchdown dive in the second league game. The Sooners, now without the quarterback and running back on which all the preseason analysis was based, rode a strong defense to the division title. They knocked off Nebraska before a huge Cornhuskers crowd in Kansas City for the Big 12 crown.

Championships don't come more satisfying than that, and it is that accomplishment and not the Fiesta Bowl finish that should propel Oklahoma into this season, one in which the Sooners again are expected to battle Texas for league supremacy.

Here's the difference between Oklahoma and Texas: The Sooners have fewer question marks than the Longhorns at 21 positions. But the 22nd keeps Oklahoma from being an unequivocal favorite.

Quarterback is that uncertain in Norman. Spring practice did not produce a leader among Joey Halzle, Sam Bradford and Keith Nichol.

"I would guess it would be sometime in August," says Coach Bob Stoops about naming a starter. "When I feel a guy has earned it, we'll say so. This isn't new territory for us. We have four Big 12 championships with four different quarterbacks, so we're used to this. Hopefully we'll get back to another one with a different quarterback."

Halzle, a junior who started his career in the California juco ranks at Golden West College, is the only candidate with experience. He completed one of two passes against Middle Tennessee last season and played a few snaps against Iowa State.

Bradford is a redshirt freshman from Oklahoma City who had the best results in the spring game and may have been the sharpest overall in spring workouts.

Nichol is a freshman who missed his final semester at Lowell Senior High in Michigan to enroll early at Oklahoma. Whoever takes snaps for the Sooners this season won't be asked to be all-conference caliber.

"We're not asking them to win games by themselves," Stoops says. "We didn't ask Paul last year to win games by himself. We've shown we can play that way."

There's enough talent around the offense for the Sooners to play a quarterback with developing skills.

JOHN WILLIAMSON

Running back again will be strong, even without Peterson. The Sooners have had practice operating without their injury-plagued running back. Last season, Peterson missed the final seven games of the regular season and Oklahoma rushed for more yards in those games than in the first half of the season.

Allen Patrick, back for his senior season, became the late-season workhorse and finished with 761 yards. Chris Brown got the carries Patrick didn't and wound up with 343 yards and six touchdowns. In his only start, Brown, a true freshman last year, went for 169 against Baylor.

But the talk of the spring was DeMarco Murray, who rushed for 103 yards in the spring game and drew this praise from Stoops: "He's got a lot of tools and a lot of talent."

The wide receivers also will take some heat off the quarterbacks. The top four return, starting with Malcolm Kelly, who caught 62 passes and 10 touchdowns last year. Also back are Manuel Johnson, Juaquin Iglesias and tight end Joe Jon Finley, one of the Big 12's best.

An experienced offensive line completes the cocoon around the quarterback. Four players who started the final seven games, when Oklahoma's running game was at its grinding best, are back. Get to know this group, because it's as good as there is in the Big 12: guards Duke Robinson, Brandon Walker and Brian Simmons; tackles Branndon Braxton, Trent Williams and Phil Loadholt; and center Jon Cooper. Loadholt, a juco transfer, figures to step in for the lone graduate, Chris Messner, at left tackle.

Again, defense will be an Oklahoma calling card. Six starters who helped the Sooners lead the Big 12 in scoring and total defense are back, but the departed ones were excellent, players like linebackers Rufus Alexander and Zach Latimer and linemen Larry Birdine and C.J. Ah You.

The strength starts in the backfield. The deep four seems set with Reggie Smith and Marcus Walker at the corners, D.J. Wolfe at strong safety and Nic Harris at free. Lendy Holmes, who started last year, is also a possibility at corner.

Redshirt freshman Dominque Franks moved from corner to safety in the spring and impressed coaches. He'll see plenty of action.

Linebacker is the unit with the least game experience, and the group took a hit in the spring when projected starter Ryan Reynolds blew out a knee. He should be ready for the season. Junior-college transfer Mike Reed brings a physical presence to the middle. Demarrio Pleasant and Lewis Baker will get looks at strongside, while Curtis Lofton will seek to impress at weakside.

The interior line is solid, with three of four in last year's rotation back. Steven Coleman, DeMarcus Granger and Cory Bennett will be joined by Gerald McCoy, who sat out last year as a redshirt.

Newcomers will fill the end roles. Alonzo Dotson showed promise last season and carried it into spring along with John Williams. But the Sooners are looking for more help.

Oklahoma should be in good shape with one of the biggest rules changes in years: kickoffs from the 30-yard line. Kicker Garrett Hartley, a Lou Groza Award finalist last year, has one of the nation's strongest legs. Return men Iglesias and Smith have brought back kicks for touchdowns and should get even more opportunities this season.

Two players who shared the punting duties, Michael Cohen and Mike Knall, are back, making Oklahoma solid once again in special teams.

Make that solid once again in everything except quarterback. But with the talent surrounding the position, the Sooners are good enough to be considered the Big 12 favorite and a national-championship contender.

THE NEXT BIG THING

PHIL LOADHOLT, OT

Has the perfect name for an offensive lineman. He sat out the second half of spring ball with a toe injury, but the 6-8, 350-pound junior-college transfer figures to make quite an impression.

RECRUITING REPORT

The Sooners closed strong in the final days before the NCAA Signing Day (Feb. 7) and posted the nation's No. 13-ranked recruiting class by Street & Smith's.

There are several headliners, but none any bigger than junior-college linebacker Mike Reed (6-1, 250) from California, who could be in the starting lineup this season. Reed was ranked the No. 1 defensive prospect in the juco ranks last season.

Besides Reed, an intriguing juco transfer is massive offensive lineman Phil Loadholt (6-8, 350).

On the high school front, the Sooners landed quarterback Keith Nichol (6-1, 185), the Michigan Player of the Year, as well as two in-state prep All-Americans in linebacker/safety Austin Box (6-3, 215) and national-record-setting placekicker Jimmy Stevens (5-6, 175).

Other promising in-state recruits are linebacker/defensive end Jontae Bumpus (6-4, 225) and defensive back Ryan Broyles (5-11, 180) from nearby Norman High.

The Sooners recruited Louisiana well and signed defensive end Frank Alexander (6-5, 230), wide receiver Tyler Stradford and offensive lineman Alex Williams (6-6, 285) from the Bayou State.

Lively Colt is the real McCoy, so Longhorns like the all of the possibilities for 2007

The Longhorns finished 10-3 last season, ranked 13th in the wire-service polls, won their bowl game and the fans shrugged.

Texas has reached the point where it should compete for the national championship every year and anything less than Big 12 championships and BCS bowl games brings a tone of disappointment.

It could be argued Texas has always been this kind of place, but it hadn't backed up its ambition with a championship since the days of Darrell Royal. The program was touting its nine-victory seasons and consistent presence in the polls, and all that was nice.

But winning the national championship in 2005 elevated Texas to an exalted status, past Oklahoma as the Big 12's bellcow program. Yes, the Sooners won the league championship last year—but they lost to Texas.

This season, Texas begins the season with more question marks than it did entering 2006. The offensive line lost three studs, the secondary is rebuilt and the running game must be retooled.

But in quarterback Colt McCoy the Longhorns have an exclamation point.

Texas created an offensive environment that gave McCoy every opportunity to succeed as he entered his redshirt-freshman season and McCoy delivered. Here's the short list of accomplishments:

- Big 12 Offensive Freshman and Newcomer of the Year.
- Alamo Bowl Offensive MVP
- Texas freshman-record 10 victories as a starting quarterback.
- Matched the NCAA freshman record with 29 touchdown passes.

"He grasped the offense right away," says McCoy's favorite receiving target, Limas Sweed. "I remember when I was as a redshirt freshman, and he was so far ahead of me."

McCoy wasn't guaranteed starting until beating out Jevan Snead, and he was among the nation's most poked and prodded players entering 2006. How could McCoy possibility fill the shoes of national-title hero Vince Young?

It's not a stretch to declare McCoy was as valuable to the 2006 'Horns as Young was to the 2005 club.

We know this by what happened at Kansas State. McCoy's right shoulder lost a battle with a Wildcats linebacker on a touchdown keeper and the QB was lost for the game. Kansas State pulled off the stunner. In the Longhorns' other two losses, McCoy was starting for the second time against Ohio State and he carried the K-State injury into Texas A&M.

McCoy returns this season bigger and stronger. He finished spring ball at 208 pounds and drew this post-spring praise from Mack Brown.

"He looked as good as I've ever seen him," Brown says. "He's even more accurate in his passing, if that's possible."

Hardly, it seems. McCoy completed 68.2 percent of his throws last year.

"He has a chance to be very special," Brown says.

So do the wide receivers. Sweed passed up a shot at the NFL Draft to become a four-year starter. He carved out an All-Big 12 season with 46 receptions for 801 yards and 12 touchdowns and carries the size (6-5, 219 pounds) to dominate.

Also back are the next three top receivers: Quan Cosby, Billy Pittman and Jermichael Finley, who is coming off the best season for a rookie tight end in school history.

"We believe this is the best group of receivers we have ever had," Brown says.

BRIAN RAY / ICON SMI

Now comes improving the running game. Texas went from a breakaway team with Young and Cedric Benson to a hard-nosed, but limited, attack. In seven of the last nine games—Big 12 action and the bowl game—the Longhorns averaged fewer than four yards per carry.

Texas should be better, if only because it won't split carries. Jamaal Charles will get the bulk of them and he was the team's most productive runner last year with 831 yards and a 5.3 average.

"We want Jamaal to show us he can run tougher, break tackles and be consistent," Brown says.

One sign of Charles' dedication: A champion sprinter, he didn't run indoor track last spring as he did the year before.

The offensive line got plenty of offseason attention with the loss of three players who started at least 26 straight games, including All-America tackle Justin Blalock. A foundation of guard Cedric Dockery and tackles Tony Hills and Adam Ulatoski returns.

Dockery started the first six games before missing the second half of last season with a knee injury. Hills is a converted tight end who started last season at left tackle. Ulatoski was named Freshman All-America.

Gene Chizik is gone as defensive coordinator to try and restore fortunes at Iowa State as the new head coach. And stars like safety Michael Griffin, cornerback Aaron Ross and end Tim Crowder have moved on to the next level.

But the guts of the defense—tackles and linebackers—return, and that's good news for a team that stuffed the run about as well as anybody last year.

Texas surrendered a mere 61.2 rushing yards and 2.3 yards per carry a game and eight total rushing touchdowns a year ago. Tackle Derek Lokey is a name to remember. Texas had 28 sacks in the seven games Lokey played. After he broke his fibula against Nebraska, the sack production dropped to two per game.

Lokey's return takes some pressure off the other starting tackle, Frank Okam, who missed spring drills after January knee surgery.

Linebacker starters Rashad Bobino, Robert Killebrew and Scott Derry were pushed by younger talent in Jared Norton, Sergio Kindle and Rod Muckelroy during the spring.

The defensive backfield got plenty of attention in the spring, and for good reason. For all the individual accolades, pass defense was a weakness last season. Of course, it's not all on the secondary, but the last line of defense gets blamed for having the nation's 99th-ranked pass defense last year.

The lone returning starter is safety Marcus Griffin, Michael's twin brother, but another veteran, Drew Kelson, could start at free safety after spending the previous two years at linebacker.

"In the secondary we have a veteran group and a young group," Brown says. "We could possibly play two-deep in the secondary. ... We'll look at that closely."

Kicker Ryan Bailey had a moment that will live in Texas lore. A walk-on from Austin, the first attempt of his career was a 22-yard game-winner at Nebraska in swirling snow. He went on to have a near-perfect season, missing one extra point. Cosby is one of the nation's most dangerous return specialists.

THE NEXT BIG THING

CURTIS BROWN and BEN WELLS, DBs

Two freshmen who looked good during spring practice and could be part of an eight-player rotation in a secondary that's lost five players to the NFL Draft over the past two seasons.

RECRUITING REPORT

The Longhorns continue to get their pick of much of the high school talent in the Lone Star State.

And the 2007 recruiting class, ranked No. 5 nationally by Street & Smith's, is no different.

Texas had 19 of its 24 recruits in the verbal-commitment hopper before the 2006 season started. Early evaluation has paid off for the Longhorns, especially with the 23 in-state prospects in the current recruiting class.

The lone non-Texas prep recruit is tight end/defensive end Blaine Irby (6-2, 230) from Ventura, Calif.

The in-state crop is led by prep All-America offensive lineman Tray Allen (6-4, 305), who was rated by some analysts as Texas' top overall prospect. Allen is athletic enough to play any of the line positions and could see time as a true freshman.

Two skill-position players also received national attention: defensive back Curtis Brown (6-0, 175) and versatile John Chiles (6-1, 195), who might be tested at multiple positions.

The lone quarterback among the newcomers is G.J. Kinne (6-2, 210), who passed for 3,216 yards and 47 touchdowns as a high school senior.

Two defensive linemen should attract some attention from the coaches this fall: Andre Jones (6-4, 305) and Michael Wilcoxon (6-2, 275). Jones was a prep All-American, while Wilcoxon could be a future player to watch.

The most heralded offensive lineman is All-Stater Michael Huey (6-6, 290).

#3 OKLAHOMA STATE COWBOYS

PRESEASON RANK

2006 Record: 7-6 » Big 12 South: 3-5 (beat Alabama in the Independence Bowl, 34-31)

With offense galore, Cowboys are a defense away from making some noise in South

The difference between a glowing outlook about 2007, which is what Oklahoma State has, and a wait-and-see feeling is three points.

A field goal separated the Cowboys from Alabama in last season's Independence Bowl, specifically Jason Ricks' 27-yarder with eight seconds remaining for a 34-31 triumph.

It was a battle of 6-6 teams, but the win gave Oklahoma State a springboard toward this season. Don't think such bowl victories matter? Ask Texas, which credits beating Michigan in the previous year's Rose Bowl as a launch for the Longhorns' 2005 national championship.

Or Nebraska, which knocked off the same Wolverines a season later, helping provide the Cornhuskers confidence for their first division-title run in seven years.

THE NEXT BIG THING

» KEITH TOSTON, RB

He doesn't get much time behind Dantrell Savage, but Toston rushed for 631 yards as a freshman and the Cowboys won't fall off one yard when he's in the game.

RATING THE RECRUITS

1. Dez Bryant, WR, 6-1, 195 — Touted Texas product could play soon.
2. Richetti Jones, DE, 6-3, 235 — Another Lone Star State standout.
3. William Cole, ATH, 5-11, 170 — Prep quarterback for state champs.

| OFFENSE | 5 |
| DEFENSE | 2 |
| SPECIAL TEAMS | 5 |

The finishing touch to 2006 felt so good because most of the main players are back, and Oklahoma State believes it should have one of the better offenses in the game.

The Cowboys joined Boise State last season as the only programs to average at least 200 yards passing and rushing per game. There's no reason why that shouldn't continue, not with players like running back Dantrell Savage and wide receiver Adarius Bowman.

Injuries got Savage off to a slow start, with 114 yards in his first five games. But he became a beast in the second half of the season and finished with 820 yards and a 6.5-yard average. His 112 rushing yards in the Independence Bowl earned him MVP honors.

And the fortunate thing for the Cowboys is there's another good one right behind him in Keith Toston, who added 631 yards last season.

Bowman could be an All-American. He's a big-play receiver who averaged 19.7 yards on his 60 receptions. To keep defenses honest, a second receiving threat will need to emerge. Look for Jeremy Broadway and Artrell Woods to become those players.

Bobby Reid is back at quarterback. He grew more comfortable in the position last year and wound up with some solid numbers: 2,266 passing yards, 24 touchdowns and 11 interceptions, while rushing for more than 500 yards. The knock on Reid was that he played much better at home than on the road.

If Oklahoma State is going to take the next step, perhaps even become a division contender, the defense must improve. Last year, the Cowboys ranked in the league's bottom half in all major defensive categories. In the program's two best victories—Nebraska and Alabama—OSU had to win by keeping a better scoring pace. Three times opponents racked up at least 500 total yards.

One of the problems was that two freshmen led the team in tackles—cornerback Andre Sexton and linebacker Patrick Lavine. Senior linebacker Jeremy Nethon was the Independence Bowl's defensive MVP with 11 tackles. The Cowboys added strength to the defense by moving former QB Donovan Woods to free safety.

Franchione looking to add some finesse to Aggies' smashmouth offensive arsenal

Can one game change everything? Perhaps. Texas A&M's triumph at Texas to end the regular season didn't put the Aggies in the Big 12 Championship Game, but it kept the Longhorns out of it. It didn't create momentum for a bowl game. The Aggies got crushed by Cal in the Holiday Bowl.

But winning at Austin righted plenty of wrongs, not the least of which was the Aggies' six-game losing streak to Texas.

What it also proved was how good A&M could be if it did the things Coach Dennis Franchione has wanted since arriving four seasons ago. That day, the Aggies used a power running game to roll over a defense leading the nation in rushing defense at the time. On the other side of the ball, they played the brand of defense that made the "Wrecking Crew" famous.

"I was very proud of the way this team responded after last year," Franchione said, referring to the Aggies' 5-6 finish in 2005.

So, if you looked at last season through maroon-colored glasses, forget about the three home defeats, the narrow escapes with Kansas and Army. Beating Texas made things all right.

Now it's time to build and, with 16 starters returning, the Aggies have the goods to take another step.

"We're setting the bar high, and we're excited about our future," junior quarterback Stephen McGee says.

McGee is a good place to start. He guided an offense that developed into a smashmouth, clock-chewing unit and led the Big 12 in time of possession. He threw for nearly 2,300 yards and rushed for 666 last season.

If Franchione has his way, McGee will become a more effective thrower. The numbers were good enough last year, as he completed a school-record 62 percent of his passes with only two interceptions and 12 touchdowns. But the Aggies would like to see McGee not automatically tuck it and run when the first receiver isn't available.

"As he pulls the ball down and moves around in the pocket, he still saw [alternate targets]," Franchione says. "Last year, he pretty much made up his mind to go."

McGee says he feared taking a sack and that he's learning it's possible to buy a little more time in the pocket.

But a better passing game would be a bonus because A&M leads with an NFL-like running attack.

Two powerful backs—Jorvorskie Lane and Mike Goodson—shape the personality of this offense. Lane is a load at 6-foot and 263 pounds. He found the end zone 19 times last season. A&M came up with this stat: Lane produced a touchdown or first down on 26 of his 29 carries on third or fourth down last season. Goodson is the slasher who led the Aggies with 847 yards as a freshman.

Martellus Bennett dropped his pursuit of two sports when he quit basketball and should be one of the league's top tight ends. The Aggies will look to get the ball in the hands of wide receiver Kerry Franks, who averaged 26.5 yards on 10 receptions.

Two offensive linemen who received all-conference honors—center Cody Wallace and guard Kirk Elder—are back, and one of the league's top units should keep the Aggies near the top of the charts in time of possession.

New Defensive Coordinator Gary Darnell made a difference. A&M switched to a 4-2-5 and, now that the transition year is in the books, the Aggies want to add wrinkles to the scheme. Senior linebacker Mark Dodge emerged as one of the team's top playmakers last year. The big news in the spring was the play of cornerback Arkeith Brown and safety Jordan Pugh.

THE NEXT BIG THING

» KERRY FRANKS, WR

A fleet receiver who's even more dangerous as a return specialist. He can build on his league-best 27.7-yard kickoff-return average now that the tee has been moved back to the 30.

#5 » TEXAS TECH RED RAIDERS

PRESEASON RANK

For the minor bowl-game-as-meaningless-exhibitions crowd, we submit Texas Tech's 2006 postseason experience.

The Red Raiders trailed Minnesota by four touchdowns at halftime of the Insight Bowl, then fell behind by 31 early in the third quarter.

But never count out Tech and its spread offense. The Red Raiders scored the final 31 in regulation and won in overtime, sending Tech to a celebration and Minnesota Coach Glen Mason to the unemployment line.

Back from that crazy night are 14 returning starters, including quarterback Graham Harrell. This marks the first season since 2002 that Tech returns its starting quarterback.

Not that it's mattered. Everybody who has taken the spread-formation snap has produced for Coach Mike Leach. Harrell led the Big 12 in passing yards and touchdown passes last year, but he wasn't the most impressive quarterback in Tech's final spring scrimmage. That was Taylor Potts, a redshirt freshman who played well enough to make fall practice interesting.

Other revelations came out of spring ball. Michael Crabtree looks to be the program's next big-play wide receiver, and Shannon Woods, who figured to be the starting tailback, was dropped to second team behind Kobey Lewis.

But the biggest movement was on the coaching staff. Assistant Jack Bicknell Jr., who became Tech's offensive line coach in January and helped land several top-notch recruits, left for Boston College in late April.

Through it all, Tech expects to be back in the bowl picture. The Red Raiders have been bowl-eligible for 14 straight seasons, the most of any Big 12 program.

The defense has improved over the past few years under coordinator Lyle Setencich.

#6 » BAYLOR BEARS

PRESEASON RANK

Everybody would prefer the leaps-and-bounds kind, but improvement at Baylor must be appreciated in smaller measures.

In 2005, the Bears won five games, their high-water mark in league play.

Last season, Baylor won three league games, also a best effort. One of them came at Colorado, giving the program its second road victory as a Big 12 school.

To keep it going, Baylor must make it work with a new quarterback and sixth other new offensive starters.

Running the second-year spread attack will be Kent State transfer Michael Machen, who has had an interesting career.

Machen is 26 and pitched in the Atlanta Braves organization for three years before the Mobile, Ala., native enrolled at Alabama. He didn't play for the Tide and transferred to Coffeyville (Kan.) Community College, where he passed for more than 2,000 yards for a 10-2 team. From there, it was off to Kent State and what looked like a promising Division I-A career when he surpassed 2,000 yards as a sophomore.

But Kent switched to a run-oriented attack, and Machen again looked elsewhere. An NCAA rule allowed Machen to graduate and transfer without losing eligibility, and that's how he wound up in Waco.

One thing's for sure: Machen won't get all of the snaps. Baylor did that last year with Shawn Bell, who set plenty of school records. But when he went down late in the season with an injury, reserve Blake Szymanski didn't have enough game experience to feel comfortable and the Bears lost any chance of a late triumph.

On defense, linebacker Joe Pawelek took full advantage of his playing time as a freshman and led the Bears with 86 tackles. Baylor returns eight of its top 10 tacklers.

The biggest loss is punter Daniel Sepulveda, the nation's best in the past two seasons.

FOUR FEARLESS FORECASTS

1. If Houston's Anthony Alridge gets enough touches—and turns enough into scores—he could wind up as a darkhorse candidate in the Heisman Trophy race. Alridge, moved from receiver to running back during the course of last season, averaged 10.1 yards per rushing attempt. Players from BCS leagues monopolize the Heisman nowadays, but anybody who averages a first down per carry deserves to be in the mix.

2. College football is in the midst of a facilities arms race. Stadium upgrades by UCF and Tulsa will give the (formerly Golden) Knights and Golden Hurricane a legitimate chance to elevate their programs. UCF is breaking in a new stadium this season, while Tulsa announced an $18 million renovation of Skelly Stadium.

3. This year or next, someone from a C-USA team will win the John Mackey Award, presented annually to the nation's best tight end. This is a tight end league. Two years ago, Tulsa's Garrett Mills set NCAA receiving records at the position. Southern Miss' Shawn Nelson and Marshall's Cody Slate have the potential to be great.

4. This is the year the slipper doesn't fit. Each of the last two seasons, a team picked to finish last in a C-USA division reached a bowl game. Tulane and UAB are too far down to make that kind of a jump this season, which means that Green Wave running back Matt Forté may continue to be one of the league's best-kept secrets.

CONFERENCE USA

C-USA has its share of story lines heading into '07

By JIMMIE TRAMEL, Tulsa World

The reconfigured version of Conference USA is in its third year of existence and here's what we know:

▸ When C-USA was being populated with teams from other leagues, it appeared that the balance of power tilted strongly toward the East Division. Five teams went bowling the year before the conference was redone and four hailed from the East. Instead, the West has reigned supreme. Each of the last two C-USA champions (Houston and Tulsa) was from the league's West Division. It goes deeper than that. West Division teams went 11-7 against East Division squads last season.

▸ Want to make a big jump up the Conference USA ladder? Emphasize defense. No C-USA team ranked below 100th nationally in total offense last season. But half of the league's teams ranked below 100 in scoring defense and total defense. Is it any wonder that Southern Miss, which places a premium on defense, is always among the league's best teams?

▸ The league has a revolving door scheduling format and the door will turn for the first time. Teams from the East and West play every team in their respective divisions, as well as three crossover games against teams from the other division. After two years of home-and-home crossover games, the dance partners will switch in 2007. Among first-time C-USA meetings that will occur this year are Tulsa vs. Marshall, Houston vs. East Carolina and Southern Miss vs. UTEP. Defending West Division champ Southern Miss appears to have caught a scheduling break since the Golden Eagles won't have to face either of the last two league champs, Houston and Tulsa.

▸ C-USA had just one coaching change after the 2005 season. Four league teams switched coaches after the 2006 season. Tulsa's new coach, Todd Graham, switched jobs without switching leagues. He was Rice's head coach last season. Other new coaches are UAB's Neil Callaway, Rice's David Bailiff and Tulane's Bob Toledo.

▸ Parity reigns supreme in college football and that's especially true in C-USA. Eleven of the league's 12 teams have gone to bowl games during the last five years and C-USA ranks second nationally among Division I-A leagues in regard to close games. Only the SEC had a smaller margin of defeat in league games.

RECRUITING ROUNDUP

1. UCF ▸ Cornerback Alphonso Bryant, a first-team 6A All-State player in Florida, is the gem of the class.
2. SOUTHERN MISS ▸ Running back Antwain Easterling was among the nation's top-ranked prospects at his position.
3. HOUSTON ▸ Running back Terrance Ganaway ran for 2,464 yards and 33 TDs last season.
4. MARSHALL ▸ The signing of QB Chris Smith bodes well for the future.
5. EAST CAROLINA ▸ Skip Holtz did well at home—21 of 26 signees hail from N.C.—and picked up big defensive lineman Linval Joseph from Florida.
6. MEMPHIS ▸ The Tigers apparently wanted immediate help, signing nine jucos in a lineman-heavy class.
7. UTEP ▸ The Miners raided Texas, California and the juco ranks for help.
8. TULSA ▸ The Golden Hurricane will need players like A.J. Whitmore to help upgrade the receiving corps.
9. RICE ▸ The Owls loaded up on linemen and safeties to flesh out their 4-2-5 defense.
10. SMU ▸ The Mustangs signed 10 players on the Dallas Morning News' list of the top 100 recruits in the Dallas/Fort Worth metroplex.
11. UAB ▸ Versatile Darell Norman of Lincoln County (Ga.) High should help the new Blazer regime.

Is super sophomore Fletcher Golden Eagles' best player since the days of Brett Favre?

Southern Miss Coach Jeff Bower says finding diamonds in the rough is harder than it used to be.

Bower also says winning on a consistent basis is difficult because parity has arrived in college football.

The Golden Eagles beat the odds in both departments last season.

Bower's staff found a diamond in the rough—Damion Fletcher—and the rookie running back helped extend Southern Miss' string of winning seasons to 13 in a row.

The Golden Eagles went 9-5 last season, winning Conference USA's East Division and advancing to a bowl game for the ninth time in the last 10 years.

Same old Southern Miss. But the latest dose of usual was made possible by the unusual. The Golden Eagles hadn't accumulated 2,000 team-rushing yards since 1987 and hadn't had an individual rush for 1,000 yards since 2002.

Both of those plateaus were reached last season.

Bower says he has been searching for a running back ever since Derrick Nix (the team's former running backs coach) graduated.

Bower found his man and it happened to be a player that got a scholarship offer from just one other Division I-A school (Arkansas State).

Fletcher went to a Southern Miss camp prior to his senior year of high school and committed early to the Golden Eagles. Fletcher was a good enough multi-sport athlete that Bower knew the kid could at least play defensive back if he didn't pan out at running back.

Suffice it to say that Fletcher worked out. He came off the bench to run for a team-best 89 yards against eventual national champ Florida in his first collegiate game. Fletcher ran for at least 100 yards in seven other games on the way to 1,388 yards, most ever by a C-USA freshman. He also ranked 11th nationally in rushing.

"You don't expect that out of any freshman, coming in and making an impact the way he did," Bower says. "I think this past year he came in as a very mature freshman. He wasn't fazed by anything. He competed and he set his goals high. He learned fast."

Southern Miss ranked first in the league and 25th nationally in rushing last season. Eight starters return from a defense that allowed the fewest points in C-USA. The combination makes the Golden Eagles a no-brainer pick to be the league's best of the East once again.

Southern Miss returns three interior linemen (Martavius Prince, Sean Merrill, Robert Henderson), two defensive backs (LeVance Richmond, Brandon Sumrall) and all three starting linebackers (James Denley, Gerald McRath, Tokumbo Abanikanda). The only unsettled position is cornerback, where there is ample talent, but competition is so good that coaches haven't settled on starters.

McRath, who logged 104 tackles last season, might be the nation's oldest sophomore. He got hurt his first two years on campus and the NCAA granted him waivers. Bower says McRath will have time to earn multiple degrees before his eligibility expires.

Southern Miss produced a school-record 4,635 yards of total offense last season despite ranking last among C-USA teams in passing yards.

Expect improvement. Quarterback Jeremy Young was bothered by a turf toe injury last season.

Snyder has Herd Nation thundering for a big season

The name of the movie was "We Are Marshall."

The question now is, when will Marshall be Marshall?

Once upon a time, Marshall was Boise State—the little team that struck fear in the hearts of opponents. The Thundering Herd produced 21 consecutive winning seasons (the streak ended in 2005) and exported NFL players such as Randy Moss, Chad Pennington and Byron Leftwich.

Marshall suffered losing seasons in each of the last two years, but could be on the path back to vintage football. The Herd were in the running for bowl eligibility last year until dropping their season finale to Southern Miss and are one of only four C-USA teams to return at least seven starters on both sides.

Mark Snyder, who enters his third season as coach, inherited the program at a time when a recession seemed almost inevitable. Marshall returned only seven starters his first season and gone were 25 seniors, including the entire defensive front seven. Ouch.

Perhaps Marshall will return to prominence this season. After starting 2006 1-5, the Herd went 4-2 to keep bowl hopes alive. A bear of an early-season schedule this year will give Snyder's team an opportunity to get the nation's attention. The first two games are against Miami and West Virginia.

Marshall, located in Huntington, W.Va., will have Herd faithful coming out of the woodwork for the home game against West Virginia on Sept. 8. Two fellows who will be excited about a road game at Miami are Florida natives Albert McClellan and Cody Slate, who just happen to be the Herd's most decorated players.

A junior defensive end from Lakeland, Fla., McClellan came from a very good high school program and perhaps was overlooked by recruiters because he was undersized, according to Snyder.

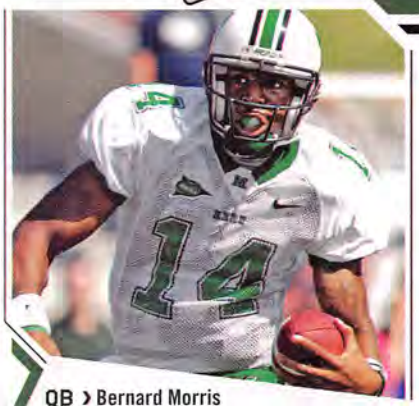
McClellan, blessed with smarts and tremendous speed, led C-USA with 11.5 sacks and 19 tackles for losses last season. He was named co-Defensive Player of the Year in 2006.



QB › Bernard Morris

Sometimes you've got to see McClellan play to know what he's all about. During the spring, he ran across the field to catch a skill player from behind, stripped the ball and then took off running the other direction. Does that sound normal for a defensive lineman?

Slate, a sophomore tight end from Chipley, Fla., came to Marshall by way of Hargrave Military (Va.) Academy. As a Herd rookie, he led all receivers with 43 catches for 685 yards and six touchdowns, becoming the first true freshman to lead the school in receiving since Moss did so in 1996.

If spring performance is any indication, don't expect Slate to fall prey to a sophomore slump. He was dominant in the spring game, catching six passes for 157 yards and a touchdown.

Who will throw passes to Slate, though? That has yet to be determined. Former walk-on Bernard Morris is the incumbent starter and the team's returning leading rusher, but he is fighting to keep his job.

THE NEXT BIG THING

» Darius Passmore, WR

Passmore, a junior-college transfer, is 6-3 with sub-4.4 40-speed and the deep threat the Thundering Herd has lacked in recent seasons. He made an impact during spring drills.

#3 » EAST CAROLINA PIRATES

PRESEASON RANK

In football formation terminology, there is something called an empty backfield. That's also an apt description for East Carolina's predicament in 2007.

Last season, the Pirates won their most games since 2000 and went to a bowl game for the first time since 2001. They return 15 starters and a league-high 54 lettermen from a squad that placed second in C-USA's East Division.

In order to stay among the league's elite teams, East Carolina will have to overcome its empty backfield. The Pirates lost six offensive starters and five of them occupied so-called skill positions. The only returning starters are four offensive linemen and third-team all-conference tight end Davon Drew.

East Carolina must replace career-completions leader James Pinkney and Aundrae Allison, who produced the third-most receiving yards in school history.

The rebooted Pirates are not without weapons, though. Chris Johnson was an all-conference player as a return specialist last season, when he accumulated a team-best 972 all-purpose yards. The senior already owns the school record for most catches and receiving yards by a running back. Redshirt freshman running back Norman Whitley could be a star of the future.

Sophomore Rob Kass separated himself from the other quarterback candidates during the spring game, according to Coach Skip Holtz. Kass threw for 231 yards and two touchdowns in the spring finale.

East Carolina was one of C-USA's worst defensive teams two seasons ago, but ranked among the league's best last year. The Pirates were third in scoring defense, total defense and pass efficiency defense. They gave up their fewest points (20.8 per game) since 2000.

Defensive end Marcus Hands and linebacker Quentin Cotton were third-team all-conference players last season.

#4 » CENTRAL FLORIDA GOLDEN KNIGHTS

PRESEASON RANK

What have we found out about UCF the last few seasons? Expect the unexpected.

UCF was winless in 2004, so expectations were nil in 2005. Then the Knights shocked everyone and got all the way to the C-USA Championship game.

Because UCF returned 19 starters in 2006, great things were expected. The Knights started 2-7, finished 4-8 and never won consecutive league games last season.

UCF returns 19 starters in 2007. It's impossible to know exactly what that means, so let's talk about what we do know.

UCF will play its first game in a new on-campus 45,000-seat stadium Sept. 15. Maybe you've heard of the squad—the Texas Longhorns—that agreed to be the first opponent in Bright House Networks Stadium. ESPN or ESPN2 will televise the christening.

When healthy, running back Kevin Smith is the real deal. Smith, a junior, ran for 2,112 yards in his first two collegiate seasons. He also ranks eighth in the nation among returning juniors in rushing yards and sixth in average yards per game (103.8).

The Knights are due for some good fortune. They ranked last nationally with only two fumble recoveries last season and they tied for last in turnovers gained with 12. The ball has to bounce the other way this year, right?

UCF ranked third among Conference USA teams in total yards on offense last season, but somehow managed to score a league-low 25 touchdowns. Senior quarterback Kyle Israel, who played in nine games last season and completed 65.1 percent of his attempts, will lead the offense.

Defense continues to be a problem. Last season the Knights were 101st nationally in scoring defense, 106th in total defense and 111th in pass defense. The bright spot is Johnell Neal, the first cornerback in school history to lead the team in tackles.

Coach Tommy West shook things up during and after a 2-10 season. He relieved Defensive Coordinator Joe Lee Dunn of coaching duties three games into 2006 and then overhauled the remainder of his staff after the season. Clay Helton, Kenny Ingram and Rick Mallory are the only holdovers from last year.

West apparently was willing to do major housecleaning in an attempt to get his program back on track. From 2003-05, Memphis averaged eight wins and participated in three consecutive bowls for the first time ever in the school's history.

Of course, everyone suspected Memphis might slip a bit after losing star running back DeAngelo Williams to the NFL after the 2005 season. But the fall was far worse than anticipated.

As much as the Tigers missed Williams, they missed having a defense even more. They allowed opponents to convert 49 percent of third downs (only two Division I-A schools fared worse in that department). They also ranked 111th nationally in yards allowed, 103rd in points allowed and 104th against the run.

A little improvement could go a long way since Memphis lost five games last season by six or fewer points.

New Defensive Coordinator Rick Kravitz, a former assistant at N.C. State and South Florida, will inherit a defensive line that West believes could be the best he has had in his six years at Memphis. The three starting linemen are Brandon Douglas, Clinton McDonald and Greg Terrell.

Helton, who tutored the receivers last year, was promoted to offensive coordinator and will have the luxury of coaching an incumbent quarterback. In his first season as the starter, Southeastern Louisiana transfer Martin Hankins completed 59.9 percent of his passes for 2,550 yards and 18 TDs.

Watson Brown spent 12 years as UAB's coach and shepherded the program from Division I-AA to I-A. He even took the Blazers to their first-ever bowl game in 2004. Brown should be commended for helping the program successfully take a step up in class.

But four losing seasons in the last five years exacted a toll and Brown stepped aside to become Tennessee Tech's head coach.

The new coach—only the third in UAB's history—should be familiar to folks who live in Alabama. Neil Callaway played for Bear Bryant at Alabama and served tours of duty as an assistant coach at Alabama and Auburn.

Callaway most recently spent the last six years as offensive coordinator at Georgia and says he is looking forward to building on what exists at UAB "and taking it farther than people can imagine."

Callaway also says his players will start off with a clean slate. That's about the only kind of slate you can have when you take over a squad that returns only four starters on each side of the ball. UAB lost a league-high 30 lettermen.

Maybe starting from scratch isn't such a bad idea when you have an offense that ranked last among C-USA teams in total yards and second worst in scoring.

Returning offensive starters—guard Adam Truitt, center Jake Seitz, running back David Sigler and quarterback Sam Hunt—will be working for new coordinator Kim Helton, the former Houston head coach. Hunt, a senior, split time at QB last year and completed 58.5 percent of his passes. Sophomore quarterback Joseph Webb didn't see action until late in the season and completed 64.7 percent of his attempts.

Defensively, three of the top four tacklers return, including safety Will Dunbar and linebacker Joe Henderson, both third-team All-C-USA picks.

RB › Anthony Alridge

With dynamic player in Alridge back, Houston should have no problem in C-USA

Anthony Alridge began last season as a wide receiver. He finished it as one of the nation's most dynamic running backs, averaging a first down (10.1 yards) per carry.

"He is a guy that if you can create just a little bit of space, he can take it the distance," Coach Art Briles says.

Alridge was recruited as a running back. The Cougars had other capable tailbacks on campus, but Alridge was so talented that coaches wanted to get him on the field somewhere. That sparked a move to receiver. According to Briles, Houston's running game was "not where we needed it" during a three-game losing streak last season.

So the switch back to tailback was made, the ground game took off and so did Houston's season. The Cougars peeled off six consecutive victories en route to a Conference USA championship.

Alridge ran for more than 100 yards in three straight games during the season-turning hot streak, converting minimal touches into gold—nine carries for 131 yards against UCF, 12 for 136 against Tulsa and 13 for 225 against SMU. He finished the season with five runs of at least 50 yards.

Alridge's emergence is a big reason why Houston (which returns 17 starters) is a favorite to win the Western Division despite the loss of C-USA career passing leader Kevin Kolb and UH career receiving leader Vincent Marshall.

Sophomore Blake Joseph (who completed six of his eight pass attempts last season) and redshirt freshman Case Keenum competed for the starting QB job during spring drills. Briles says they are running neck-and-neck and a decision probably won't be made until 10 days prior to the season opener at Oregon. (The Cougars, who apparently don't fear quality competition, also will play a road game at Alabama.)

Regardless of who plays quarterback, UH won't be content just to hand the ball off to Alridge. The Cougars ranked eighth nationally in passing last season and returning receivers Donnie Avery and Jeron Harvey combined for 98 catches in 2006.

Among four starting offensive linemen back is Jeff Akeroyd, who was second-team all-league last season.

Houston ranked fourth among C-USA teams in both scoring defense and total defense last season. During the second halves of games, the Cougars played defense like the 1985 Chicago Bears. In 10 victories over Division I-A opponents, UH allowed opponents to average just 5.6 points after halftime.

Defensive end Phillip Hunt earned all-league honors last season and is one of eight returning defensive starters. Back are three starting linebackers—Trent Allen, Cody Lubojasky and Brendan Pahulu—along with cornerback Kenneth Fontenette, who could have a breakout season. Also returning is safety Rocky Schwartz, an impact hitter who missed most of last season with a knee injury. Keep an eye on defensive tackle Ell Ash, who could blossom into a dominant player.

THE NEXT BIG THING

The sophomore isn't as fast as former UH star Vincent Marshall, but Gilbert should emerge as a playmaker because he makes plays in space and is tough.

Graham must fill large shoes of Kragthorpe for Hurricane to maintain top C-USA status

New Tulsa football Coach Todd Graham has a tough act to follow.

Over the past four seasons, former Coach Steve Kragthorpe led the Golden Hurricane to 30 wins, a conference championship and three bowl games. Consider that in 27 years prior to Kragthorpe's arrival, Tulsa managed just two bowl appearances. Has a coach ever been a team's MVP?

When Kragthorpe departed, Graham had to choose between staying at Rice or returning to Tulsa to coach many players he helped recruit. The decision, Graham says, wasn't about money.

"There is no question in my mind that this is a special situation here because of being in the right place at the right time," he adds, referring to both the state of the program and facility upgrades both current and pending.

"We've got support here like I don't think has ever been here in the past at this level. The administration wants to be a Top 25 team in the country and wants to compete and win championships every year. We've got people putting money behind it. We will have a new stadium here in the very near future that is—no question in my mind—going to put us in position to do those things."

Graham can't be accused of having an inferiority complex. At the end of spring drills, he spoke about winning conference championships and BCS bowl games.

Maintaining the status quo would be a nifty feat. Tulsa has won eight or more games in consecutive seasons for the first time since 1982-83 and has made back-to-back bowl appearances for the first time since 1964-65, when Jerry Rhome and Howard Twilley took turns finishing second in Heisman Trophy races.

The return of quarterback Paul Smith should help Tulsa be a contender in Conference USA's Western Division again. Smith enters his senior season in second place on the school's total offense and passing yardage lists.

Smith is learning a new system because Tulsa is implementing a no-huddle spread offense. Gus Malzahn, who spent last season as Arkansas' offensive coordinator, left the Razorbacks to join Herb Hand as Tulsa's co-coordinator.

Tulsa, which has used a tailback-by-committee approach in recent seasons, returns proven runners in Oklahoma transfer Courtney Tennial and Tarrion Adams, who combined for 1,174 rushing yards last season. Tennial's 16 total touchdowns were the second-most in school history.

The Golden Hurricane has issues to address at offensive line (only one starting lineman returns) and receiver.

Six starters, including all-league linebackers Nelson Coleman and Chris Chamberlain, return to a defense that allowed the fewest yards and second-fewest points in C-USA last season. Graham believes he has the league's best linebacker tandem. Coleman led the Hurricane in tackles each of the last two seasons and has 274 career tackles, sixth-most in school history.

Other starters back are nose guard Terrel Nemons, defensive end Moton Hopkins, strong safety Anthony Germany and cornerback Roy Roberts. Playmakers like Steve Craver and Alain Karatepeyan are among lettermen with substantial experience. Graham wants to turn up the heat in an attempt to force turnovers. His Rice team led the league in takeaways and sacks last year.

THE NEXT BIG THING

» CHRIS CHAMBERLAIN, LB

He may have gotten overlooked while playing next to Nick Bunting and Nelson Coleman the last two seasons, but Chamberlain will enter his senior year with 20 tackles for loss and 9.5 sacks.

#3 » SMU MUSTANGS

PRESEASON RANK

Southern Methodist is the only Conference USA team that hasn't gone to a bowl in any of the last five seasons. The Mustangs were oh-so-close last year.

SMU went 6-6 to become bowl-eligible. But, because there were more bowl-eligible teams than bowl spots, the Mustangs didn't get a date for the prom.

The Mustangs haven't been to a bowl since 1984, with much of the thanks going to a program-crippling NCAA "death penalty." The long road back could finally lead to a postseason destination.

"A bowl game is an absolute possibility," Coach Phil Bennett says.

SMU has improved its victory total each of the last three seasons and is coming off its winningest season in a decade. For the Mustangs to take the next step, they will have to become more consistent. SMU never won (or lost) consecutive league games last season.

The most costly defeat was the last one. SMU was beaten 31-27 by Rice in the regular-season finale. Rice went bowling for the first time since 1961. SMU stayed home.

One problem that has dogged the Mustangs during their bowl drought is instability at quarterback. That doesn't seem to be an issue anymore. Justin Willis was Conference USA's Freshman of the Year last season, when he threw a school-record 26 touchdown passes and was intercepted only six times.

Willis will work behind an offensive line that returns all five starters and can throw to Emmanuel Sanders, who set a school record last season by catching TD passes in six consecutive games.

SMU led the league in rushing defense last season and the defensive line will be rebuilt around Cory Muse, who ranked third in the league with seven sacks despite a nagging knee injury.

#4 » UTEP MINERS

PRESEASON RANK

The big question at UTEP is who will play quarterback now that career-passing leader Jordan Palmer is gone? Nothing sparks offseason football conversion quite like a quarterback race.

But what goes on in front of the quarterback may prove to be a bigger factor in determining whether the Miners can bounce back from their first losing season under Coach Mike Price.

UTEP went 8-4 in each of Price's first two seasons and tumbled to 5-7 last year, despite the nation's fifth-best passing attack. In evaluating what went awry, Price determined that the running game must improve, or else.

UTEP ranked 116th nationally in rushing last season, averaging 2.4 yards per carry and 57.6 yards per game. The Miners were outrushed 1,829 yards to 691. And, for the first time since 1992, no Miner back cracked the 100-yard barrier in a game.

Improvement in the offensive line is high on the priority list. UTEP experienced growing pains in that area last season. Better days should be ahead for blockers like center Robby Felix, third-team all-league last season, and Tyler Ribitzki, an honorable mention all-league selection.

UTEP has players on campus who can turn a crease into yardage. Among them is former Parade All-American Marcus Thomas, who ran for 1,304 yards the last two seasons and set a school record with four consecutive 100-yard games in 2005. Also watch out for Terrell Jackson, an Oregon transfer and a former SuperPrep All-American.

Only four starters return from a defense that ranked 104th nationally, but they include All-America safety Quintin Demps, who has 13 interceptions and 34 career starts on his résumé. He'll try to help UTEP to a bowl game for the third time in four years.

Jarett Dillard hit the lottery last season. When Rice switched from an option to an air-it-out offense, he was the Owl who got to spread his wings.

In 2005, Dillard caught 35 balls for 524 yards. But last season, he exploded for 91 catches, 1,247 yards and set school and Conference USA records with a nation-leading 21 touchdown receptions.

Dillard had the second-most catches in Division I-A last season and helped spark Rice to the nation's second-biggest turnaround. The Owls went from 1-10 in 2005 to 7-6 last season. Only Wake Forest made a bigger leap.

Coach Todd Graham got off to a rough start in his inaugural season. He lost his first four games, but then watched the Owls win six times in a seven-game span to secure their first bowl trip since 1961.

That means Rice should enter 2007 riding a wave of positive energy, right? Well, sort of. The Owls will have to prove they can win without Graham, who bolted to Tulsa.

The new man in charge at Rice is David Bailiff, who was the defensive coordinator at TCU before serving a three-year tour of duty as head coach at Texas State.

Bailiff's defenses ranked among the best in the country when he was at TCU and Rice's unit could use a tune-up. The Owls return five starters from a defense that ranked 112th in scoring and rushing defense and 91st in pass defense last season. How did this team manage a bowl trip with such unflattering statistics? The Owls camouflaged their deficiencies by ranking second among C-USA teams and 21st nationally in turnover margin.

Bailiff will stick with the spread offense used by the previous regime. That should make Dillard (who has TD receptions in 15 consecutive games) and quarterback Chase Clement happy.

The Tulane football program is rebuilding in the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina. The new man in charge of the reconstruction project is Bob Toledo.

Tulane is 6-17 overall and 3-13 in league games since Katrina visited campus. Katrina deserves a share of the blame. The Green Wave didn't get to play a home game in 2005. And it's fair to assume that post-hurricane recruiting was negatively affected because parents wondered if they should send their children to a city that had to be rebooted.

Former Coach Chris Scelfo was dismissed after a 2006 season in which the Green Wave was outscored 400-224. Athletic Director Rick Dickson said he interviewed 16 candidates before hiring Toledo, the former UCLA head coach.

Toledo has ample work to do if he wants to add to a résumé that includes 13 bowl trips. Tulane was a triple-digit team in many NCAA statistical categories last season, ranking 113th in scoring and pass defense, 108th in total defense, 105th in rushing offense and 112th in turnover margin.

Senior running back Matt Forté and sophomore receiver Jeremy Williams (40 catches, 484 yards as a freshman) are the only skill position starters returning. Forté averaged 5.3 yards per carry last season and accumulated 859 rushing yards before missing the last two games due to an injury. He enters his final season as the seventh-leading rusher in school history. Three offensive line starters return, including honorable mention all-league center Michael Parenton.

Eight defensive starters are back. Among them is junior safety David Skehan, a former walk-on who led the Green Wave with 80 tackles last season. Defensive linemen Antonio Harris and Frank Morton, safety Joe Goosby and linebacker Evan Lee were honorable-mention all-conference players in 2006.

Can Pac-10 football get much better? Watch and learn in 2007

By JON WILNER
San Jose Mercury News

The rebirth continues for the Pacific-10 Conference. Just a few months after its best men's basketball showing in years, the league looks poised to build on that success with its finest football season in recent memory.

It starts at the top, of course, with a USC team that returns 18 starters and should be No. 1 in all the preseason polls. But unlike previous years, when the Trojans were the class of a mediocre conference, quality depth is sprouting up throughout the league.

The best of the second-tier teams could be California, which has its sights on the Bowl Championship Series. The Bears return 16 starters from the team that pounded Texas A&M in the Holiday Bowl last year. They won't have to wait long for a chance to avenge their 2006 defeat at Tennessee. The Volunteers visit Berkeley on Sept. 1.

Adding to the Pac-10's quality depth are UCLA and Oregon State, two teams that did last year what Arkansas, Nebraska, Notre Dame and Michigan could not do: they beat USC. The Bruins have 20 starters returning and are a BCS contender. If Oregon State finds a quarterback, then it could overtake both UCLA and Cal.

That's four teams that should win at least eight games this season. If there were a significant drop-off at that point, we wouldn't be talking about the Pac-10's continuing rebirth.

But there is little separating the second tier from Oregon and Arizona State, which has a new coach with a familiar name: Dennis Erickson. And there might be even less separating those teams from Arizona.

The Pac-10 will have plenty of chances to prove itself. Among the opponents this season are Ohio State, Michigan, Wisconsin, Notre Dame, Boise State, Nebraska and Tennessee.

Only once in its history has the league sent seven teams to bowl games. In 2002, USC was in the Orange Bowl and Washington State in the Rose. Don't be surprised if it happens this season.

RECRUITING ROUNDUP

1. USC ▸ If this comes as a surprise, welcome to Earth. The Trojans signed the top player in the country at four positions, along with the No. 2 tailback (Marc Tyler) and the No. 3 quarterback (Aaron Corp).

2. OREGON ▸ Needed to restock on the defensive line and did just that. Myles Wade, who had an offer from Florida, leads the way.

3. CALIFORNIA ▸ Jahvid Best is the latest elite tailback to join Cal's 1,000-yard-season caravan. Shane Vereen is also well regarded, but could switch to cornerback.

4. UCLA ▸ Signed just 10 players, but the quality is high due partly to defensive tackle Brian Price, who picked UCLA over USC.

5. WASHINGTON ▸ Coach Tyrone Willingham needed a solid class to keep his critics quite, and he got one that has quantity and quality. The big name is receiver Anthony Boyles.

6. OREGON STATE ▸ Huge class (more than 30 players) includes several junior-college transfers and prospects who weren't considered top-notch quality. But a program that usually features superb defensive backs got another one in cornerback David Ross.

7. ARIZONA STATE ▸ Dennis Erickson's first class was solid given the circumstances. And here's betting that he'll make a player out of quarterback Chasen Stangel.

9. STANFORD ▸ New Coach Jim Harbaugh got the nation's No. 1 kicker in David Green, but the Cardinal once again failed to land the kind of talent that will turn a program around.

FOUR FEARLESS FORECASTS

1. USC's closest call on the way to an undefeated season will be at Arizona State. The game is sandwiched between showdowns at Cal and against UCLA—perfect time for a letdown.

2. Cal will make the Rose Bowl for the first time since 1959. With USC headed to the BCS Championship Game, the Rose Bowl will gladly give an at-large spot to the Golden Bears.

3. Oregon's Jonathan Stewart will emerge as the league's best player. He's 230 pounds of speed and power, a former mega-recruit who will lead the conference in rushing with more than 1,400 yards.

4. The Stanford Cardinal will win a home game. Stanford lost all five games in its newly renovated stadium in 2006 and hasn't won on campus since October 2005. But the Cardinal will have eight chances this fall, including four in a row to start the season.

Finding flaws with these Trojans is an almost-impossible task

The window, it appears, has closed. It has shut on the rest of the Pac-10 members and possibly the entire nation.

USC, which was vulnerable last season—the Trojans lost two games and did not play for the Bowl Championship Series title—should be close to indestructible in 2007.

That's bad news for West Virginia, Texas, Wisconsin, LSU and anyone else with an eye on the national title.

And it's very, very bad news for Cal, UCLA, Oregon State and any other Pac-10 team hoping to overtake the league's five-time defending champs.

Loaded at every position, the Trojans won't only be better than they were in '06, they could be better than they've ever been under Coach Pete Carroll, who is 59-6 in the past five years, with one down season (6-6) in 2001, his first.

Yes, better than the Reggie Bush-and Matt Leinart-led offensive dynamo in 2005; better than the brilliantly balanced national champs of 2004; better than Carson Palmer's dominating '02 team.

Carroll knows it. He might even want to shout it from the top row of the Los Angeles Coliseum. But that wouldn't be smart, so he says things like, "We have the nucleus [returning] of a very successful team."

And Microsoft makes very successful software.

To a team that won 11 games, pounded Michigan in the Rose Bowl and finished No. 4 in the AP poll last season, the Trojans return 18 starters and 79 lettermen.

A defense that allowed a meager 74 points in its last six games returns 10 starters and several key reserves.

An offense that scored 32 points and gained 439 total yards against Michigan returns seven starters, including a Heisman Trophy candidate at quarterback, one of the top linemen in the nation and the deepest backfield on the planet.

And a program that has played for the national title in three of the past four years welcomes another top-rated recruiting class. (Who signs the No. 1 and 2 rated tailbacks in the country? That kind of thing just shouldn't happen.)

No wonder Dennis Erickson left Idaho. It wasn't because of the opportunity or money at Arizona State. It was because the poor Vandals open the season at USC, and anything less than a 60-point loss would be a victory. (OK, maybe money had something to do with it.)

Speaking of USC's schedule—it's not easy. As they do in odd-numbered years, the Trojans play at Notre Dame, at Oregon and at Cal. USC also visits Nebraska the second week of the season, which the Cornhuskers will be looking to avenge a 28-10 loss last year in the Coliseum. But other than Cal, the teams with the best chance of contending for the Pac-10 title (Oregon State and UCLA) have to visit Trojanland.

Navigating that kind of schedule requires experience, and the Trojans have it where it matters most: at quarterback, on the offensive line and everywhere on defense.

In fact, let's start with the defense, which should be absolutely dominant. Every starter returns but linebacker Dallas Sartz. And there's plenty of depth across the board—five reserves have starting experience. Look for this unit to be as stingy as the 2004 group, which allowed just 13 points per game.

"We expect great things from our defense in 2007," Carroll says. "It should be faster, bigger, stronger and deeper than last year. This should really be the strength of our team."

Not only does the line return intact, it also has back two of the top players at their positions in the country: All-America nose tackle Sedrick Ellis and end Lawrence Jackson (20 career sacks).

KIRBY LEE / WIRE IMAGE.COM

Fili Moala should occupy the other tackle position, with several players competing for playing time at the other end. Brian Cushing, who started there last season, has moved back to his natural position at outside linebacker to replace Sartz.

About those linebackers—they make up the best unit in the country. Cushing and Keith Rivers are on the outside (with their combined 21 tackles for loss last season), and Rey Maualuga is in the middle. The junior from Eureka, Calif., has had off-field troubles during his time at USC, but on the field he's a 250-pound, bone-crushing playmaker and future first-round draft choice.

If any of the above-mentioned trio gets hurt, the Trojans have options, and good ones, too. Senior Thomas Williams can play any position and has 10 career starts. There's also freshman Chris Galippo, who was only the best prep linebacker in the country last season.

"No doubt, this is the best position on the team," Carroll says.

He might get an argument from the secondary. The unit has been hit hard by injuries in recent years, forcing underclassmen into starting roles. Now healthy, there are four returning starters and two backups with starting experience. Taylor Mays and Kevin Ellison form one of the top safety tandems in the country—Josh Pinkard, who started in 2005, is also in the mix—and the same can be said about cornerbacks Cary Harris and Terrell Thomas.

"We have a lot of depth here," Carroll says, "and that's a beautiful thing."

But the deepest position on the team, by far, is tailback, where the Trojans go—we're not kidding here—10 deep. And seven of the 10 are former Parade All-Americans. Put it this way: the Trojans could lose their top seven tailbacks to injury and still have Joe McKnight and Marc Tyler, the top recruits in the county last year, available.

How do you keep them (Chauncey Washington, C.J. Gable, Emmanuel Moody and Hershel Dennis, and all the rest) all happy? Hey, that's why Carroll gets upwards of $3 million annually. Competition is the foundation of his program, and nowhere is that more evident than at tailback.

THE NEXT BIG THING

PATRICK TURNER, WR

Turner is already big. He's 6-5 and 220 pounds, with a long, graceful stride and superb hands. The top receiver in the recruiting class of 2004 and Nashville native shunned Tennessee and signed with the Trojans. He has 41 career catches.

Not even at quarterback, where two former prep All-Americans (sophomore Mark Sanchez and freshman Aaron Corp) will have to watch senior John David Booty try to become the third USC quarterback this decade to win the Heisman Trophy.

Booty, who waited behind Leinart, completed 61.7 percent of his passes last season, with 29 touchdowns and nine interceptions. He became the fourth USC quarterback to throw for more than 3,000 yards, but that was due to an erratic running game. The Trojans averaged just 128 yards per game on the ground, half of their 2005 total (with Bush and LenDale White).

This fall, Carroll and new Offensive Coordinator Steve Sarkisian want them closer to 200 yards a game, and they have the line to make it happen with two-time All-America left tackle Sam Baker and two other returning starters: right guard Chilo Rachal and right tackle Drew Radovich. (Speaking of Sarkisian, he takes full control of the offense after sharing it last season with Lane Kiffin, the new Oakland Raiders head coach. It's not a big loss for USC, as Sarkisian is the more respected offensive mind.)

The least-experienced unit, by far, is receiver, where the Trojans must replace Dwayne Jarrett and Steve Smith, the most productive tandem in school history (63 career touchdowns). Not that there isn't a load of talent waiting for the opportunity. Patrick Turner and Vidal Hazelton were the No. 1 receivers in the recruiting classes of 2004 and '05, respectively. The third wideout is Travon Patterson, who averaged 21 yards on his three catches last season.

"We have a lot of ground to make up," Carroll says. "But I like this group. It's our fastest group since I've been here."

The Trojans are in good shape on special teams, with one exception: They must find a replacement for kicker Mario Danelo, who fell to his death in January.

RECRUITING REPORT

The Trojans followed up Street & Smith's top-ranked recruiting class of 2006 with the No. 2 rating behind the national champion Florida Gators this time around.

There are several headliners, but four earned prep Top 50 All-America honors from Street & Smith's last year: utility back Joe McKnight (6-1, 195) from Louisiana, defensive lineman Everson Griffen (6-4, 265) of Arizona and two prime-time California prospects in linebacker Chris Galippo (6-3, 230) and running back Marc Tyler (6-0, 215). Tyler is expected to return to full strength after suffering a broken leg late last season and could also be tested at linebacker.

If those four standouts aren't enough, add to the mix quarterback Aaron Corp (6-4,195), the CalHiSports.com Player of the Year, touted Michigan defensive back/athlete Ronald Johnson (6-0, 180) and Arizona offensive lineman Kristofer O'Dowd (6-5, 315).

Running back Broderick Green (6-1, 235) of Arkansas and Canadian defensive end Trey Henderson (6-3, 265) will also join the Trojan ranks.

With Tedford back calling the plays, this could be Bears' season for big-time breakout

It was tough to determine which was worse on the final day of Cal's spring practice: the Berkeley weather or the Golden Bears' mood. On a cold, damp day in Strawberry Canyon (Cal's recreation area), everyone was grouchy. OK, maybe not everyone, just anyone affiliated with the offense.

That included Coach Jeff Tedford, who said, "It was a pretty poor day," while receiver Lavelle Hawkins added, "With all the guys we have coming back, we should have looked better."

Then again, it's all relative. Compared with what the Bears were five or 10 years ago—or with 100 other Division I-A teams—Cal looked good, looked sharp.

But these days the Bears consider their peers to be the top 10-15 teams in the nation—the Floridas and Ohio States, the Texases and USCs. And compared with them, yes, Cal might have some work to do before its critical season opener against Tennessee.

"We have got to work hard to get the mistakes out before that first game," Hawkins says. "Everyone knows they [Tennessee] aren't a pushover team. We went over there [last season] and they embarrassed us. We don't want that to happen again."

The Volunteers slapped Cal with a 35-18 loss in the 2006 opener, effectively eliminating the Bears from the national-title hunt. But if they can return the favor and beat Tennessee on Sept. 1 in Berkeley, then all things are possible.

Cal has the talent and experience to contend for a BCS bid and the Pac-10 title, just as it had the talent and experience in 2004 and 2006. During both of those seasons, the Bears' quest for the conference title ended with losses to USC in the Los Angeles Coliseum. This year, the Trojans come to Berkeley (Nov. 10) in what could be the biggest game Cal has played since its last Rose Bowl appearance, all the way back in 1959.

The Bears return eight starters on offense and five on defense. They have loads of depth and speed, thanks to several stellar recruiting classes. They also have a favorable schedule, a veteran quarterback (Nate Longshore) and the league's top playmaker (DeSean Jackson).

In short, Cal has enough talent to compete with the Trojans for a conference title, enough to beat Tennessee, enough to win 10 or more games. What it must do is what it hasn't done in years past—play well in big games.

"I think we have the ability and skill to do some things, but it all comes down to how hard we work and our attention to detail," Tedford says. "I'm confident we can be a good team, but there is a lot of work to be done."

For the first time since 2004, Cal will enter a season with a veteran quarterback. But Longshore, a junior who completed 227 passes last season, has plenty of room to improve—most notably with his mobility and decision-making under pressure. In Cal's three losses last season, he threw two touchdowns and six interceptions. In its 10 wins, he threw 22 and seven.

The other thing Longshore has to do is stay healthy. The backup quarterbacks, Kyle Reed and Kevin Riley, have thrown a combined zero college passes.

If Longshore is available each week, the Bears could surpass last season's averages of 32.8 points and 415.6 yards per game. The only personnel losses on offense are two linemen and one tailback. Granted, it was a pretty good tailback, 1,300-yard runner Marshawn Lynch. But the Bears should be so much better at other positions, especially quarterback, that they'll overcome Lynch's departure.

Lynch's replacement, senior Justin Forsett, averaged 5.3 yards per carry in limited action last season. Forsett does not have Lynch's power, but he's shifty, stronger than he looks at 186 pounds and, Tedford believes, capable of handling a 20-carry-per-game workload. When Forsett needs a break, the Bears will turn to redshirt freshman James Montgomery.

There is plenty of depth at receiver. What the Bears lack in size—no one is taller than 6-foot-2—they make up for with speed and big-play potential. The top playmaker of them all, the best in the Pac-10 and one of the best in the country, is Jackson, a junior from the famed Long Beach Poly program.

A brilliant punt returner, Jackson is similar to Reggie Bush and Ted Ginn Jr.; if given an inch, he can score from anywhere on the field. Last season, he averaged 18 yards per catch and scored a touchdown almost every seven times he touched the ball. He requires so much attention that it opens seams for Hawkins and Robert Jordan, who combined for 92 catches and nine touchdowns last season.

And don't forget about Craig Stevens, who is more than a second-team all-conference tight end. He's the heart, soul and toughness of the Cal offense. "There's a physical presence that he brings to the offense on the edge," Tedford says.

The Bears will continue to incorporate some aspects of the spread offense in 2007, as they did last season, but there is one notable change: Tedford will call the plays, just as he did in his first years in Berkeley. That should please the Cal faithful.

The defense will have the same play-caller as last year in coordinator Bob Gregory, whose unit must replace its three best players—tackle Brandon Mebane, linebacker Desmond Bishop and cornerback Daymeion Hughes.

Gregory is especially concerned about the situation up front. "Losing three starters and a real important guy [Mebane] always makes you nervous," he says. Mika Kane and Derrick Hill will compete for Mebane's job alongside steady senior Matt Malele.

Hughes' departure counts as the single-biggest loss on the roster because of his skill and the importance of the position. Redshirt sophomore Robert Peele emerged from spring practice as the starter, but he'll have plenty of competition for the job in training camp. The other cornerback, redshirt sophomore Syd'Quan Thompson, is a savvy veteran by comparison.

The Bears are in such good shape at safety with Bernard Hicks and Thomas DeCoud that Brandon Hampton is expected to slide over to cornerback.

"We have great candidates—it's just who emerges," Gregory says.

Replacing Bishop in the middle of the defense should not be a problem, as the Bears are loaded at linebacker. Worrell Williams, Justin Moye, Zack Follett, Greg Van Hoesen and Anthony Felder are all proven veterans.

The special teams are also in good shape. Jackson is one of the top punt returners in NCAA history (four touchdowns in 25 returns). Punter Andrew Larson was a second-team all-conference pick in 2006, while kicker Tom Schneider made 15-of-20 field goals, including all eight of his attempts from inside 40 yards.

THE NEXT BIG THING

» SYD'QUAN THOMPSON, CB

When Thompson was last seen on the national stage, he was getting burned by Tennessee's Robert Meachem. But the redshirt sophomore from Sacramento showed promise down the stretch, caused several turnovers and could be the Bears' next elite cornerback.

RECRUITING REPORT

The Golden Bears recruited a solid class that was ranked No. 15 nationally by Street & Smith's. The headliner has to be prep All-America running back Jahvid Best (5-10, 185), the northern California high school phenom who set Bay Area single-season rushing records of 3,325 yards and 48 touchdowns as a senior. He averaged 11.4 yards per carry.

Best is expected to be the next go-to back in the Cal offense, and he enters the program with high expectations.

Home-grown Bryan Anger (6-4, 195) is one of the nation's top punting prospects. He averaged 41.8 yards per punt as a high school senior and placed 11 inside the 20-yard line.

Also plucked from home soil were offensive linemen Matt Summers-Gavin (6-4, 285), Mitchell Schwartz (6-5, 305) and Sam DeMartinis (6-6, 280); wide receiver Alex Lagemann (6-2, 205), running back Shane Vereen (5-9, 175), defensive back Chris Conte (6-2, 185) and junior-college tight end Skylar Curran (6-5, 245).

Defensive ends Cameron Jordan (6-4, 245) of Arizona and Ernest Owusu of New Jersey and juco linebacker Alex Cook of Florida signed from out of state, along with tight end Savai'i Eselu (6-3, 245) of Hawaii.

Dorrell entering all-important fifth year with Bruins expected to produce big-time results

This is it for Bruins Coach Karl Dorrell. This is the year we will find out, once and for all, whether he can get it done in Westwood over the long term. Everything is stacked in favor of the Bruins having a good season—a very good season.

Dorrell is in his fifth year, which means the roster is his. No more Bob Toledo recruits. Dorrell has 10 returning starters on offense and 10 on defense. He has not one, but two, quarterbacks who have proven they can play in the Pac-10. And Dorrell has a schedule that can only be described as custom-made, as the Bruins should be 4-0 heading into a Sept. 29 showdown at Oregon State. Most of their league road games are against lower-echelon teams, and they get Notre Dame, Cal and Oregon at home.

The Bruins won't be the best team in their city, but they could be the second best in their conference and one of the 20 best in the country. If they don't win at least eight games, something's wrong.

"I feel we're at the point where we have the talent and the depth in the program to do something special," Dorrell says. "We have quality experience at virtually every position on both sides of the ball."

In Pac-10 circles, there are those who believe Dorrell is overmatched as a coach, but he has proven himself to be a deft manager. This has manifested itself in his handling of the coaching staff.

When the Bruins struggled offensively in his first years as coach, Dorrell hired Tom Cable, who turned UCLA into a scoring machine before bolting after the 2005 season for an NFL coaching spot. When the Bruins struggled on defense two years ago, Dorrell went out and hired DeWayne Walker, who turned them into one of the stingiest units in the land.

Dorrell made yet another major staff change this offseason. He dismissed Jim Svoboda as offensive coordinator. Svoboda had taken over for Cable and proved to be overmatched as a play-caller. In his place comes Jay Norvell, straight from Bill Callahan's staff at Nebraska. How quickly the Bruins learn Norvell's system—and how well he teaches it—will shape the season.

The defensive unit allowed just 19.9 points and 314.5 yards per game last year, so the Bruins should contain just about everyone they face. If the offense can manage 27-30 points a game—that's not asking a lot in the Pac-10—then UCLA should have a successful season.

But if the offense sputters and the Bruins get dragged into low-scoring affairs in which their margin for error is miniscule, then the losses could mount, and so could the heat on Dorrell.

Remember, he has had just one above-average season in four years at UCLA, in 2005, when Drew Olson and Maurice Jones-Drew powered the Bruins to 10 wins. Otherwise, UCLA has been just above, just below or right at .500, and .500 won't cut it when your sworn enemy across town has averaged 12 wins a year the past four seasons.

Redshirt junior Ben Olson was named the Bruins' starting quarterback after spring drills, beating out classmate Pat Cowan. Olson started last season and played fairly well until he suffered a season-ending knee injury in the fifth game. Cowan took over and started the final eight, throwing for 11 touchdowns and nine interceptions. Essentially, the Bruins have two experienced quarterbacks who have yet to prove they are among the league's elite. One of them must make that jump for UCLA to contend for an upper-division finish. That won't be easy with a new system.

THE NEXT BIG THING

MARCUS EVERETT, WR

Everett started eight games last season and caught 31 passes, five of which went for touchdowns. He enters the 2007 season with a reception in 18 consecutive games.

"Quarterbacks need time to refine their skills and gain experience in the system," Dorrell says. "Both Patrick and Ben did a nice job for us [last year] given the circumstances. ... [But] both players know they must compete at a high level on a daily basis."

They will have plenty of support from the other positions. Tailback Chris Markey is back after rushing for 1,107 yards last season. He also caught a team-high 35 passes. But Markey suffered a stress fracture in his right foot during spring practice. Although he's expected to be 100 percent by the time training camp starts, the foot is a concern.

Granted, Markey's health would be more of a worry if the Bruins weren't bringing back starting receivers Marcus Everett and Brandon Breazell, who combined for 52 catches last season, plus an offensive line that returns 13 of the 14 players listed on last year's Emerald Bowl depth chart.

If the quarterbacks don't have time to throw and if the running backs don't have lanes available, UCLA has no excuses. This should be one of the top offensive lines in the conference. The best of the bunch is right guard Shannon Tevaga, who has started 31 consecutive games. Noah Sutherland, Aleksey Lanis, Brian Abraham and a host of others join Tevaga up front. Chris Joseph, who started at guard last year, is expected to fill the vacant center position.

Say this for the big fellas up front: they won't face many better defensive lines than the one they see in practice each day. The playmaker is senior end Bruce Davis, who had 12.5 sacks last season (fourth nationally). Kevin Brown and Brigham Harwell are run-stopping tackles who, although slightly undersized at 293 and 286 pounds, respectively, are quick on their feet.

UCLA's only concern is filling all-league end Justin Hickman's position. Junior Kenneth Lombard and senior Nikola Dragovic are the leading contenders. If they can hold their own, especially with all the talent and experience around them, there's no reason the Bruins can't duplicate last year's success when they held opponents to 2.8 yards per rush, tops in the conference.

"Our defensive improvement a year ago started up front," Dorrell says. "We played with improved technique, strength and focus."

The back seven returns intact. Middle linebacker Christian Taylor had 83 tackles last year, 11 of them coming in the upset of USC. Taylor is flanked by Aaron Whittington and Reggie Carter, who was named to several Freshman All-America teams. He's probably the most gifted of UCLA's linebackers, but Taylor's leadership is invaluable.

The same is true of strong safety Chris Horton, a second-team all-conference pick in 2006. He led the Bruins in tackles (95) and had three interceptions. There aren't many better defensive backs in Pac-10 than Horton, just as there aren't many better defensive backfields in the league than UCLA's. Free safety Dennis Keyes is a playmaker, and cornerbacks Rodney Van and Trey Brown are first-rate. And did we mention that all four returning starters are seniors? Throw at the Bruins at your own risk.

There are some questions on special teams, however. The Bruins must replace All-America kicker Justin Medlock, who made 28 of his 32 field-goal attempts and both of his tries from 50 yards or more. Redshirt freshman Kai Forbath and junior Jimmy Rotstein will compete for the job, but UCLA's late, close-game security blanket is gone. That's one reason the Bruins need to ramp up the offense and expand their margin for error.

RECRUITING REPORT

The Bruins signed just 10 prospects, but most come with quality tags in the recruiting game.

Two of the most touted were high school teammates at Crenshaw High in Los Angeles. All-purpose back Raymond Carter (5-11, 190) rushed for 2,543 yards over the past two seasons and displayed good pass-catching skills out of the backfield. Brian Price (6-3, 275), a defensive lineman, received high marks from talent evaluators and could be a college star alongside Carter.

Two other Los Angeles prep teammates round out the small class. Pass-rushing defensive end Justin Edison and linebacker/defensive end Akeem Ayers (6-2, 215) played together at Verbum Dei.

The Bears also landed an in-state quarterback who impressed at summer camps. Chris Forcier (6-3, 190) from St. Augustine High in San Diego was highly esteemed entering his senior prep season and could develop into a solid college quarterback.

Another newcomer from San Diego is tight end Nate Chandler (6-5, 225) of Mesa High. Defensive back Glenn Love (6-4, 205) of Arizona and two California prep products—linebacker Steve Sloan (6-3, 225) and offensive lineman Mike Harris (6-4, 310)—could also contribute.

Formerly undisciplined OSU Beavers now living the good life for Riley

It's hard to believe that less than a year ago, Oregon State was floundering and Coach Mike Riley's job security was in question. The Beavers had been stomped at Boise State on national television. They had been humiliated by Cal and shut down by Washington State at home in consecutive weeks. Oregon State was 2-3 and headed downhill fast. Or so it seemed.

Then Riley engineered one of the most remarkable turnarounds in the Pac-10 this decade. The Beavers won eight of their next nine games, shocked USC, edged Oregon, finished third in the conference and beat Missouri in the Sun Bowl on a gutsy two-point conversion call by Riley.

But the turnaround story doesn't end there; it continues to this day. The Beavers return 17 starters and figure to be in the hunt for second place in the conference race. They have everything necessary to challenge USC for the title. Well, everything except a proven quarterback.

The uncertainty at that position—who will take over for Matt Moore?—is the reason the Beavers are picked fourth here and not second. Give them Cal's Nate Longshore or UCLA's Ben Olson, and they'd be slotted for No. 2 in the league.

"At just about every position, we have built depth that is the foundation for this season and future ones," Riley says. "We need to solidify a couple positions, particularly quarterback, but even there I have a lot of confidence in the players competing for the starting job."

And for the first time in several seasons, the OSU faithful have confidence in Riley. It might not last past the first loss, but at least it's there for the season opener against Utah. The lack of discipline on and off the field that plagued the program over the previous five years—Riley personifies the term "players' coach"—disappeared down the stretch last season.

What was left was a simple, yet effective, formula in a very good coach, a senior quarterback and a roster of talented players who were passed over on the recruiting trails by the West Coast powers. Other than the occasional in-state stud, the Beavers must choose from second-tier recruits and junior-college players, then turn them into a team that can compete with the USCs, Oregons and Cals.

That's not easy, which explains why the Beavers were the doormat team in the Pac-10 for decades before gaining respectability under Riley during his first tenure in Corvallis and winning the 2001 Fiesta Bowl under Dennis Erickson. When Erickson bolted for the NFL and Riley returned to Corvallis (from the NFL), the expectations were higher than ever before. Riley's 3-8, 5-6, 8-5, 7-5 and 5-6 seasons did not sit well with fans who had a taste of success and wanted more, immediately.

That's why those two early-season home losses to Cal and Washington State put Riley's job in serious jeopardy. And that's why, fair or not, memories might get very short this fall if the Beavers struggle.

But as long as Oregon State gets decent play from its quarterback, whether it's Sean Canfield or Lyle Moevao, the Beavers will be fine. Both players are sophomores, but that's where the similarities end. Canfield is 6-4, a classic dropback passer in the mold of former Beaver Derek Anderson. Moevao is a tenacious 5-11 scrambler. Canfield is more experienced and the favorite to win the job, as he threw 45 passes last season, but don't be surprised if Riley uses both players.

"The key is to get [Canfield] repetitions and make him feel comfortable with the offense and the personnel around him," Riley says. "He will be a very good quarterback before his career is over."

THE NEXT BIG THING

» SAMMIE STROUGHTER, WR

A senior from Sacramento, Calif., who was not heavily recruited coming out of high school, he's next best to Cal's DeSean Jackson. Stroughter is a receiver/returner who is a threat to score from anywhere on the field.

Canfield (or Moevao) will have very good talent around him. Tailback Yvenson Bernard is one of the best in the league, a 1,300-yard rusher with good hands (43 catches last year) and a knack for finding the end zone (13 total touchdowns).

The offensive line is better than solid, with four returning starters and a first-rate center/guard combination in Kyle DeVan and Jeremy Perry. The only hole to fill is at left tackle, where Tavita Thompson is the favorite to win the job.

With Bernard running behind that line, the Beavers can use their ground game to set up the pass, thus taking the pressure off of the rookie quarterback. And don't be surprised if Bernard wins the Pac-10 rushing title after finishing second to Marshawn Lynch last season. He'll probably get 325 carries, which could translate into 1,500 yards.

"Yvenson has really been the heart and soul of the offense over the last two seasons," Riley says. "We've been able to do a lot of things because of his ability as a runner, receiver and his overlooked blocking. He is one of the best players I have ever coached."

And yet, Bernard might not be the most gifted offensive player on the roster. Receiver Sammie Stroughter is a playmaker on par with Cal's DeSean Jackson. He averaged 17.5 yards per catch last season, caught 74 passes and returned three punts for touchdowns. He earned second-team all-league honors at both positions and should be a first-teamer this fall.

Joining the speedy Stroughter are veteran wideouts Anthony Wheat-Brown and Brandon Powers, who give the Beavers a physical presence on the edge. Both can be counted on to make third-down catches in traffic. And if OSU can control the ball with Bernard and the possession receivers, it'll be tough to stop, for the defense should be one of the league's best.

There are three holes to fill, two on the line and one in the secondary, where OSU must replace first-team all-conference safety Sabby Piscitelli. Bryan Payton and Al Afalava split time at the free-safety spot, and one could slide over. The other candidate for Piscitelli's job is senior Daniel Drayton.

The Beavers are set at cornerback with juniors Keenan Lewis and Brandon Hughes, and they are loaded at linebacker, which is probably the best unit in the league outside of USC.

All three starters return, including second-team all-conference performer Derrick Doggett, who had 14.5 tackles for loss, five sacks and three interceptions last season. Joey LaRocque starts on the weakside, with Alan Darlin in the middle. The trio started every game last season and combined for 257 tackles. And they can all run.

"We call ourselves the West Coast version of 'Linebacker U,' and this group solidifies that motto," Riley says. "If you are an offensive coordinator, you have to take into account our linebackers' abilities to rush the passer, yet drop into coverage."

The defensive front is looking for two starters to join tackle Curtis Coker and end Jeff Van Orsow, the man who tipped John David Booty's last-gasp pass to seal OSU's upset of the Trojans last year. Replacing Ben Siegert, who anchored the line, is Riley's chief concern.

The special teams should be among the Pac-10's best. It only seems like Alexis Serna has been around for a decade. But since his freshman-year flop at LSU, he has developed into a reliable kicker. Last year, Serna connected on 75.9 percent of his field goals, including a 58-yarder against Cal. With Stroughter around, the return units are in good shape.

RECRUITING REPORT

The Beavers landed a solid class anchored by quarterback Jake Gelakoska from Jackson High in Mill Creek, Wash. The 6-foot-3, 210-pound dual-threat signal-caller was a major recruiting target of the Oregon State coaching staff and could be the team's quarterback of the future.

Out of California, safety Cameron Collins (6-2, 195) of Santa Monica and fullback/linebacker Ryan McCants (6-2, 235) of Corona could also make an early impact.

The Beavers went the junior-college route to land a number of players up front, including offensive linemen Michael Cole (6-7, 300), Jon Ioane (6-5, 335) and Una Smiley (6-5, 275) and defensive linemen Lalu Moaia (6-2, 270) and Sioeli Nau (6-2, 295).

One California high school, Mt. Whitney, produced three Bears commitments: defensive end Kyle Bell (6-4, 230), linebacker Keith Pankey (6-2, 215) and linebacker/defensive end Kevin Pankey (6-5, 255).

Two recruits from Hawaii could also contend: linebacker David Pa'aluhi III (6-1, 215) and defensive back Brandon Hardin (6-2, 180).

In-state products who will compete for spots on the two-deep include linebacker Will Darkens (6-2, 220), defensive end/linebacker Kevin Frahm (6-2, 225) and tight end/defensive end Carl Sommer (6-4, 235).

Bellotti to restore Ducks' swagger after bowl debacle

It was the ultimate nightmare for Oregon. Not only did a promising 2006 season go bad, it went bad against the worst possible teams at the worst possible times. A blowout loss against hated USC, an embarrassing home defeat to lowly Arizona, a heartbreaker to archrival Oregon State and a humiliating loss in a bowl game on national television.

So distressed was Ducks Coach Mike Bellotti after the Las Vegas Bowl that he called the first clear-the-air meeting of his tenure.

Months later, Bellotti was still smarting from that 0-4 finish in which his team—once considered a model program—was outscored 140-56 and justly accused of quitting in the postseason loss to BYU.

"I thought we lost our edge, and that edge can be a combination of confidence and mental toughness," says Bellotti, who's entering his 13th season and is the dean of Pac-10 coaches. "We need to develop greater mental toughness. We need to create that through grueling, competitive events."

Sounds like training camp will be more like boot camp for the Ducks. They need it; that's obvious. But at the same time, this isn't a program lacking in talent. Oregon returns 14 starters from a team that was, lest we forget, good enough to win seven of its first nine games in 2006 (with a little help from the replay officials).

If the Ducks stay healthy and get solid play from their quarterback, they could compete with Cal, UCLA and Oregon State for second place in the Pac-10.

No player in green and yellow needs more "mental toughness" than quarterback Dennis Dixon, whose 2006 season mirrored Oregon's. He was efficient and savvy early, skittish and sloppy late. It didn't help matters that the Ducks rotated in pocket passer Brady Leaf with the mobile Dixon; neither player was effective down the stretch.

Dixon figures to be the starter this fall, and he'll be working with a new play-caller. Gary Crowton, the former BYU coach who brought the spread to Eugene in 2005, bolted for LSU. So Bellotti, who has a keen eye for coaching talent, hired Chip Kelly from I-AA New Hampshire. Watch for the Ducks to use the no-huddle attack regularly. It suits Dixon's style and talent, and should make best use of the players around him.

Tailback Jonathan Stewart was a second-team all-league pick last season as a sophomore, when he averaged 5.4 yards per carry. A 1,400-yard season is well within reason for him.

The Ducks are well stocked at receiver, where Jaison Williams (68 catches last year) and Brian Paysinger (34) return. At 6-5 and 240 pounds, Williams is one of the most difficult matchups in the league. His size makes him a stellar possession receiver, but he has the speed to get downfield in a hurry. (Just ask Oklahoma, which Williams burned for 177 yards.)

The offensive line should be solid if the Ducks can find an answer at center, where they must replace two-time all-league selection Enoka Lucas. That won't be easy, given Lucas' talent and the increased demands placed on the center in a no-huddle, spread-formation attack (perhaps with some shotgun mixed in). At least Oregon is in good shape at left tackle, where veteran Max Unger will protect Dixon's blind side. Two other starters return: tackle Geoff Schwartz and guard Josh Tschirgi.

Defensively, the Ducks return seven starters. On the line, end Nick Reed and tackle David Faaeteete return, as well as end Victor Filipe, who missed all of the 2006 season with an elbow injury. The secondary is solid with Jairus Byrd, an honorable-mention all-conference player as a freshman last year, returning.

THE NEXT BIG THING

The son of former NFL cornerback Gill Byrd was thrust into the starting lineup last year as a freshman. Jairus went on to intercept five passes, break up seven and become an honorable-mention all-league pick.

Sun Devils hoping Erickson's loose ship will produce smooth trolling for victories

Rarely has a college football program been managed as poorly as Arizona State was over a nine-month span that began in December 2005.

That's when Athletic Director Lisa Love inexplicably gave Coach Dirk Koetter a contract extension despite a mediocre job performance.

Then Koetter botched the quarterback situation in training camp, naming senior Sam Keller the starter, but soon reversing course and handing the job to sophomore Rudy Carpenter.

Not surprisingly, Keller bailed, transferring to Nebraska, leaving Carpenter as the only experienced quarterback. He wasn't ready for the role, and after a flashy non-conference start, the Sun Devils lost back-to-back games to Cal and Oregon by a combined 97-34.

After another underachieving season, Koetter was cut loose—and because of Love's gaffe, ASU owed him millions.

Luckily for Love, Dennis Erickson was sitting in his office at Idaho with a tiny buyout. Arizona State scooped him up, and one of the most colorful and successful college coaches was back in the Pac-10.

Sure, Erickson is a proven winner, a gifted play-caller and a shrewd recruiter. But as anyone who has followed his career at Miami and Oregon State would attest, the man runs a loose ship.

So Arizona State is providing the football program with all the resources and support—especially academic support—it can muster. If the players stay eligible, healthy and out of trouble, then the Sun Devils could have a good season under Erickson.

They have 10 returning starters on offense, a veteran quarterback, depth at tailback, several playmakers on defense and a hugely favorable schedule: eight home games, including USC and Cal, and a fairly soft non-conference lineup.

The Sun Devils could win eight games, but no one should be surprised if they only win five—for this program has a knack for failing to meet reasonable goals.

Arizona State's success starts, naturally, with Carpenter, who played so well in relief of Keller in 2005, but then struggled last season after being handed the starting job. Yes, he threw 23 touchdowns and had an efficiency rating of 133.68, but the numbers were built on big games against bad opponents. In the crucible of Pac-10 play, he was erratic.

"He's very smart and talented; he's a gym rat," Erickson says. "He can do a lot of what we want to do because he's very athletic."

Carpenter probably won't have to scramble often. Arizona State returns a talented, veteran offensive line that features second-team all-conference center Mike Pollak and five players with starting experience.

Whichever quintet Erickson settles on will be blocking for the deepest set of tailbacks this side of USC. In breaking with their pass-happy ways, the Sun Devils rushed for 2,206 yards last season, the most in a decade. And the primary ball-carriers are back this fall: second-team all-league pick Ryan Torain and the elusive Keegan Herring.

That leaves one offensive unit to address, and it's the one with all the questions: receiver. The most experienced player is Rudy Burgess, but he spent half of last year in the secondary because of gaping holes there. Burgess is expected to be a full-time receiver this season, but is only 5-10 and hasn't proven himself to be among the league's elite.

Then again, it won't really matter how the receivers play if the defense gives up 40-something points every week or two—and that's essentially what happened in 2006. ASU allowed more than 40 points in four of its Pac-10 games and in its bowl game against Hawaii.

THE NEXT BIG THING

» KYLE WILLIAMS, WR

Williams is a major all-purpose talent from Scottsdale who was supposed to redshirt last season as a freshman but was too good to keep out of the lineup. He averaged 21.8 yards on four catches.

RATING THE RECRUITS

1. Luis Vasquez, DE, 6-3, 250
2. Omar Bolden, RB, 5-10, 185
   Californian was highly recruited.
3. Eric Tanner, DE, 6-2, 265

#7 » ARIZONA WILDCATS

PRESEASON RANK

What will be the most scrutinized, examined, protected and prayed-for body part in the Pac-10 this season? Willie Tuitama's cranium, of course.

Tuitama is arguably the most talented quarterback Arizona has ever had, but he suffered a serious concussion last season at LSU that never healed—and neither did the Wildcats.

They need Tuitama to play to his potential so Arizona can reach a bowl game for the first time since 1998, and fourth-year Coach Mike Stoops needs a good year from Tuitama to keep his critics at bay.

Stoops has yet to post a winning season since taking over for John Mackovic. He had a chance last season: the Wildcats were 6-5 entering the finale, and then got thumped by Arizona State.

But, hey, what do you expect with the No. 115 offense in the country? The Wildcats scored 30 points just once—same as Stanford.

To take the next step, Stoops has changed the offense, hiring Sonny Dykes as his play-caller and implementing a version of the spread offense run by Texas Tech. Tuitama could average close to 50 passes per game, which would play to Arizona's strengths—depth and speed at receiver, although there are no proven playmakers—and away from its weakness, the running game, which averaged a whopping 84.2 yards per game last year.

The Wildcats lost graduated receiver Syndric Steptoe, who was the heart and soul of the team and had 55 catches last season. But there are enough incoming and returning players, including Terrell Turner and Terrell Reese, to make the spread offense work.

Problem is, there isn't much time to get it right. The Wildcats open on the road at BYU, then plunge into league play in mid-September with a trip to Cal. Two weeks later, they play Oregon State and USC back-to-back on the road.

#8 » WASHINGTON HUSKIES

PRESEASON RANK

Quarterback Isaiah Stanback's season-ending injury last October did more than derail a promising season for the Huskies. It changed the dynamics for Coach Tyrone Willingham. Had Stanback stayed healthy, the Huskies almost certainly would have reached a bowl game in Willingham's second season—way ahead of schedule. That would have given Willingham a free pass this fall in what should be a rebuilding year.

But Stanback's injury, and Washington's subsequent slide, means the pressure will be on Willingham this year. Not that his job is necessarily on the line, but a sour season would put him on the hot seat for 2008.

And unless a 19-year-old sophomore quarterback plays like a veteran, it could very well be a sour 2007 for the Huskies.

They should be more disciplined, better conditioned and deeper than in Willingham's first two seasons, but the early-season schedule is brutal—arguably the toughest in the country.

Washington opens at Syracuse and faces Boise State, Ohio State, USC and UCLA—all before Oct. 1. It's not difficult to imagine Washington taking an 0-5 record into the desert for a date with Arizona State Oct. 13. Then again, Willingham's teams usually win a game or two that they aren't supposed to.

The Huskies have an option if QB Jake Locker stumbles: senior Carl Bonnell, who started five games last season. But Locker is considered the future of the program.

Washington averaged just 3.8 yards per rush last season. If that number doesn't improve, then defenses will unload on Locker.

The defense is in no position to compensate for a sputtering offense. The line returns intact, but there are many questions at linebacker and in the secondary—far too many to name here.

Not a winter goes by that there isn't a coaching change in the Pac-10, and from the who-will-it-be-this-winter file, may we present Washington State's Bill Doba.

Doba inherited a talented team from Mike Price, and in his four years the Cougars have won 10, five, four and then six games. Doba is well respected and well-liked within league circles, but he could be out of work come December if the Cougars struggle. And there's a good chance of that, beginning with the first game of the season.

One year after opening the season at Auburn, the Cougars head to Wisconsin, and the Badgers figure to be a top-10 team looking to pounce on the overmatched Cougs.

To survive the trip to Madison and have a successful season, WSU needs a big fall from senior quarterback Alex Brink. He should deliver, based on a solid performance in 2006 when he threw for 2,899 yards and was named second-team all-conference.

Brink will work behind an offensive line that returns three starters. He has a playmaker on the perimeter in receiver Michael Bumpus, but the Cougars will be hard-pressed to replace receiver Jason Hill and his 41 catches.

The running game must improve on its average of 128.3 yards per game in 2006. Tailback Dwight Tardy returns, and the Cougars might get a boost from Chris Ivory, who withdrew from school last fall for personal reasons.

The biggest loss, by far, is on the defensive line: end Mkristo Bruce (and his 11 sacks). The rest of the line returns, although a shoulder injury suffered in spring practice could keep Lance Broadus out for several games.

The Cougars should be solid at linebacker despite losing Scott Davis. The real concern is the secondary, which must find three new starters.

Before watching his team practice for the first time, Jim Harbaugh, Stanford's first-year coach, said he wanted to use spring practice to identify the players "that are going to win games for us and ... the players [that] can get you beat. We don't want them on the field."

By that definition, it's amazing Stanford was able to practice at all. The players at Harbaugh's disposal went 1-11 last season and got outscored by 250 points. The man responsible, Walt Harris, was dismissed after the season and replaced by Harbaugh, who has brought with him the energy he used to make the University of San Diego a feared I-AA team.

"It hasn't been as difficult as one might have expected," Harbaugh says of the transition. "We have talented guys. We have experienced guys, guys who have been there before and guys who have a deep desire to win."

Whether they have the talent to win more than two or three games is another matter. The Cardinal return 17 starters and should have one of the best receiving corps in the Pac-10 with Evan Moore, Mark Bradford and Richard Sherman. But there are serious questions about the offensive line, which returns two starters and several reserves from a unit that couldn't block anybody.

What's more, tailbacks Anthony Kimble and Toby Gerhart are not elite playmakers; they need help (i.e., holes to run through). And how will senior quarterback T.C. Ostrander perform as the starter? He's tough and smart, but needs the protection that predecessor Trent Edwards didn't get.

Stanford returns eight starters on defense, which might not be such a good thing considering the unit yielded 31.4 points and 387.5 yards per game last season—and also considering it must replace its best player, linebacker Michael Okwo.

Saban's return gives league fourth coach who's won it all—so who's next?

By SCOTT RABALAIS
The (Baton Rouge, La.) Advocate

Prospective coaches who aspire to work their trade in the SEC should make sure of one thing:

Have a national championship on your resume, or show you're capable of winning one.

If there was any added proof needed of the degree of difficulty in playing football in the SEC, consider this: one-third of its coaches wear national championship rings—South Carolina's Steve Spurrier (1996 at Florida), Tennessee's Phillip Fulmer (1998), Alabama's Nick Saban (2003 at LSU) and Florida's Urban Meyer (2006).

And several others could have—or might.

"What sets the SEC apart is the amount of resources, talent, passion and coaches' abilities that are across the board," Georgia Coach Mark Richt says. "We have four coaches who have won national championships and [Tommy] Tuberville probably should have one on the year he went undefeated."

Certainly good fortune plays a part. Of the four SEC coaches who have won it all, three (Spurrier, Saban and Meyer) had teams that bounced back from a regular-season defeat to claim the big prize. Tuberville, whose Auburn Tigers went 13-0 in 2004 only to finish second in the final polls, wasn't so lucky.

But his team was certainly capable. So were Richt's Georgia Bulldogs in 2002 when they went 13-1, the same record that would lead Saban and LSU to hoist the crystal football from atop the BCS trophy a year later.

"Sometimes you've got to get a little lucky to play for the BCS title in the national championship game," says Saban, who's back in the SEC after two seasons with the Miami Dolphins. "It speaks volumes for the quality of this league from top to bottom."

Quality doesn't stop at the top. LSU's Les Miles has the Tigers again poised at a national-championship run. Arkansas had a chance to get there last season—and this year boasts the 2006 Heisman Trophy runner-up, tailback Darren McFadden. Mississippi State and Kentucky have shown the ability to spring major upsets, as do just about everyone in the conference.

Maybe that's why the winner of the SEC Championship Game in December can feel so thankful for having survived—even on the rare occasion when it doesn't mean a shot at the national championship.

"I don't think any team that wins the SEC is not excited," says Richt, who has won two conference titles.

So often, it has proven to be an opportunity to winning it all.

RECRUITING ROUNDUP

1. FLORIDA ▸ Gators get five prospects to switch earlier verbal commitments.
2. LOUISIANA STATE ▸ Home-grown DB Chad Jones headlines 26 newcomers.
3. TENNESSEE ▸ Nation's top-rated CB, Georgia's Eric Berry, follows father to Knoxville.
4. SOUTH CAROLINA ▸ Gamecocks have best-ever class and boast surprise No. 6 national ranking.
6. GEORGIA ▸ Bulldogs continue strong in-state recruitment and add top Missouri QB Logan Gray.
7. ALABAMA ▸ New coaching staff got late start but signed 24 prospects.
8. MISSISSIPPI ▸ Ole Miss continues to recruit jucos hard, but added key in-state LB Chris Strong.
9. MISSISSIPPI STATE ▸ Bulldogs signed nation's largest class with 34 prospects, including 11 jucos.

FOUR FEARLESS FORECASTS

1. Urban Meyer's Gators won't have an easy encore. Everywhere he's been a head coach, Year Two has been brilliant for Meyer. There's never been a Year Three. This could be a real challenge, with a defense that lost nine starters and an offense that can't fall back on Chris Leak.

2. One of two things will happen in Arkansas: Darren McFadden will win the Heisman or Houston Nutt will lose his job. Take your pick.

3. South Carolina may be ready to join the SEC East elite. With Steve Spurrier's savvy coaching and steadily improving recruiting, the Gamecocks are a trendy dark horse to ride into Atlanta for the SEC Championship Game.

For Gators, living up to standard of 2006 is not impossible, but not probable

At Florida, they really know how to celebrate.

The 2006 season marked the Gators' 100th anniversary as a football program. What did Florida do to throw a party? Just go out and win the national championship, routing previously indomitable Ohio State 41-14 in the inaugural BCS Championship Game.

It's what has become expected at Florida, a.k.a. National Championship U., where winning national titles have evolved into a game of "anything you can do, I can do better."

With the Florida men's basketball team coming off a second straight NCAA championship, the challenge has been passed back to the Gators football team once again.

What will the 101st season of Florida football bring? Another (ho-hum) back-to-back national championship run? Or is this the season the Gators finally suffer a hangover from their high-flying excesses?

Without question, Florida appears to be back as a national player. With another title in their trophy case and superb recruiting classes being stockpiled, the Gators' long-term future is positively dazzling.

But this year, it may be difficult for U of F to produce an encore to last year's 13-1 magnum opus. And no one is more skeptical than the head Gator himself.

"On offense, I feel pretty good," Urban Meyer says. "We have experience and playmakers. On defense, I'm concerned—alarmed, actually. We have 10 seniors and 10 juniors and the rest are freshmen and sophomores.

"We have five [freshmen)] defensive linemen showing up in June and all five are playing. They don't know that yet, but there aren't going to be any redshirts."

While it's his spread offense that has always garnered the splashiest headlines and biggest chunks of airtime, it was defense that was the reason Florida won the national championship last season. A defense that limited super-charged Ohio State and Heisman Trophy-winning quarterback Troy Smith to a meager seven points (the other seven came on a kickoff return) and a BCS-record low of 82 yards in total offense.

Florida kept Ohio State so locked-down because the Gators' defensive front didn't allow Smith time to do virtually anything. It's that same defensive front that is such a concern this season.

Only one starter returns on the front four: junior defensive end Derrick Harvey. He had 35 tackles last season, among them 13 for loss, and 11 sacks. The rest of the line is unproven, especially inside, where sophomore Brandon Antwine, junior Javier Estopinan and senior Clint McMillan were in a tight battle for the two spots coming out of spring. The new end is Jermaine Cunningham (6-3, 230), a lightweight sophomore. Florida signed six defensive linemen in February—John Brown, Torrey Davis, Carlos Dunlap, Jay Howard, Duke Lemmens and Justin Trattou—but none of them were among the nine Gator newcomers who enrolled in January.

The linebacker corps is completely revamped, with the projected starters being a pair of sophomores—Dustin Doe and Brandon Spikes—and freshman A.J. Jones. Doe played every game last season, totaling 22 tackles.

The biggest loss on defense is free safety Reggie Nelson, a first-round NFL pick who made the rest of the secondary better. Senior Kyle Jackson replaces Nelson, joining the only returning starter, senior strong safety Tony Joiner. Joiner is Florida's top returning tackler (59) and had two interceptions. Sophomore Markihe Anderson and junior Markus Manson were the cornerbacks coming out of spring, but highly touted incoming freshman Joe Haden of Maryland is expected to challenge in the fall.

JAY METZ

Florida fans who clamored last season to see more of quarterback Tim Tebow will get their wish. With Chris Leak gone, it's Tebow's offense now, a spread attack that the Gators believe is tailored to his talents.

Tebow completed 22 of 33 passes last season for 358 yards and five touchdowns, but his impact on the offense was enormous. Inserted in short-yardage and goal-line situations, he rushed for a team-high eight touchdowns. With 469 yards on 89 carries, Tebow is Florida's top returning rusher.

Still, it won't be Tebow's job alone. Meyer has expressed an interest in keeping a two-quarterback attack to keep opponents off-balance. Junior-college transfer Bryan Waggener, who broke his foot in spring practice, and freshman Cameron Newton (6-5, 242) are considered the prime candidates.

Versatile sophomore wideout Percy Harvin is the most valuable weapon the Gators have. A runner, a receiver and even a quarterback for a snap or two, Harvin is the prime example of the kind of multiple-threat player now in vogue in college football. Harvin had 34 catches for 427 yards and two touchdowns in 2006 and rushed 41 times for 428 yards and three TDs.

Junior Kestahn Moore is projected as Florida's starting tailback. He had 54 carries for 282 yards and a pair of scores last season.

Despite the loss of wideouts Dallas Baker and Jemalle Cornelius, Florida's receiver corps should still be deep and dangerous. Senior Andre Caldwell leads the way after catching 57 passes for 577 yards and six TDs as a junior. Also expected to see lots of time in Florida's wide-open attack are junior Louis Murphy and sophomore Jarred Fayson, who had bone chips removed from his left knee in April but is expected to recover in time for the season. Senior Tate Casey is back at tight end.

Meyer considers the offensive line the strength of this team. Senior Drew Miller moved from guard to center and has flourished in his new role. Three other starters return: senior left tackle Phil Trautwein, junior left guard Jim Tartt and senior right tackle Carlton Medder. Redshirt freshman Maurice Hurt is the leader at right guard.

At the completion of spring drills, the battle at placekicker was a dead heat between senior Joey Ijjas and junior Jonathan Phillips, the latter having handled kickoff duties for the Gators lasts season. Incoming freshman Chaz Henry will challenge redshirt sophomore Bobby Kane, who had a good spring, to replace Eric Wilbur for the punting job. Brandon James and Moore will again handle the kickoff- and punt-return duties.

After a couple of warmups against Western Kentucky and Troy, Florida's title defense kicks into high gear with the annual grudge match against Tennessee on Sept. 15 in Gainesville. Auburn goes to Florida Field on Sept. 29, giving the Gators a chance to avenge their only loss of 2006. Then begins a dangerous trek with four of the next five at LSU, at Kentucky, against Georgia in Jacksonville and at South Carolina.

Florida is favored in the East to get back to the SEC Championship Game. Whether it will have more titles to celebrate this season considering the 17 starters lost from last year's team is debatable, but it's hard to imagine it won't be a factor.

"We're going to be very eager and talented," Meyer says. "At least the standard has been set so we can show [the players] what we want done."

THE NEXT BIG THING

» CARLOS DUNLAP, DE

The Gators need help on their decimated "D" and signed six new linemen. Why not start with Dunlap, arguably the nation's best in coming freshman at his position?

RECRUITING REPORT

The old adage about the rich getting richer could certainly apply to the Florida football program.

Coming off a 2006 national championship season, the Gators have reloaded their talent pool with the nation's No. 1 recruiting class. No less than seven of Street & Smith's 50 All-America honorees opted for the Gainesville campus.

Two of those were among seven commitments from the nation's best high school team in Lakeland, Fla.: defensive lineman John Brown (6-1, 285) and running back/returner Chris Rainey (5-9, 175).

Other recruits from Lakeland High, which recorded its third straight 15-0 season and state title in 2006, are offensive line twins James Pouncey (6-4, 270) and LaShawn Pouncey (6-4, 275), wide receiver Mark Wilson (6-1, 180) and defensive backs Ahmad Black (5-10, 165) and Steven Wilks (6-2, 195).

Three more top-50 Florida products came into the Gator fold: offensive tackle James Wilson (6-4, 315), wide receiver Deonte Thompson (6-0, 185) and defensive back Lorenzo Edwards (6-2, 220). Tight end Aaron Hernandez (6-4, 240) from Connecticut and safety Jerimy Finch (6-3, 205) from Indiana are also among the 50 best.

Recruits receiving postseason All-America recognition include quarterback John Brantley (6-3, 195), defensive ends Carlos Dunlap (6-6, 245) and Justin Trattou (6-4, 240), defensive lineman Torrey Davis (6-5, 295), safety Major Wright (6-2, 205) and linebacker Brandon Hicks (6-2, 220).

Also watch for ultra-athletic Joe Haden, a back from Maryland.

With quarterback situation under control with Stafford, Bulldogs can concentrate on trying to win the big ones

Ah, springtime in Georgia. The mind conjures images of dew-covered azaleas, dogwoods, green jackets. A mint julep sipped slowly on the back porch.

It can be downright idyllic. At least it was this spring for Georgia Coach Mark Richt.

"The best thing that happened this spring was the lack of injuries," Richt says. "Our director of sports medicine said in his 12 years at Georgia, this was the best spring for that."

While the spring in Athens may have been most pleasant, as Ray Charles sang about Georgia, "No peace I find." Especially not in the fall, when the Bulldogs begin trying to improve on a 2006 campaign that was equal parts frustration and optimism.

A shaky 5-0 start that included a 14-13 comeback win over 2-10 Colorado and a 14-9 decision at Ole Miss fragmented into a season spinning into oblivion when Georgia dropped four of the next five.

A stunning 51-33 loss to Tennessee preceded three more disturbing defeats—a 24-22 home loss to Vanderbilt (Georgia's first loss to the Commodores since 1993), a 21-14 loss to Florida (the Bulldogs' 15th to the Gators in the last 17 years) and a 24-20 loss at Kentucky, the first time Georgia fell to the Wildcats since 1996.

Then, just when everything seemed so dire, the Bulldogs pulled out of the nosedive with their most impressive victory of the season, a 37-15 upset at fifth-ranked Auburn that wrecked the Tigers' national-title aspirations. Two wins in Atlanta—at Georgia Tech and over Virginia Tech in the Chick-fil-A Bowl—allowed Georgia to salvage a respectable 9-4 season and finish No. 23 in the final Associated Press poll.

For most programs, it would have been a nice season. But for Georgia, it had to be a downer, especially considering the Bulldogs had won 44 games over the previous four years and were coming off an SEC championship season in 2005 that began with many more question marks than did 2006.

One question that was answered quickly last year—and remains resolved—is at quarterback.

Matthew Stafford, then a freshman, emerged from a three-way battle with senior Joe Tereshinski and redshirt freshman Joe Cox to take the job and earn a place on the SEC All-Freshman Team. Stafford played in every game, completing 135 of 256 passes for 1,749 yards with seven touchdowns and 13 interceptions. Now, as a sophomore, he is firmly entrenched as the Bulldogs' offensive leader.

"There's no comparison from this year to last year," Richt says of Stafford. "Before, he was just trying to fit in with the team and with the offense. This year, he's our starter. He's the one everyone looks to for leadership and great plays. Matthew is starting to do that for us."

Who Stafford will be throwing to was a bit of an unsettled issue coming out of spring practice.

Sean Bailey, who tore an anterior cruciate ligament in practice for the 2006 Sugar Bowl and missed all of last season, returns for his senior year, but at split end instead of flanker. Like other Georgia receivers, he was plagued by dropped passes during the spring. That was a problem so troubling for junior Mohamed Massaquoi—Georgia's top returning receiver with 30 catches for 366 yards and two TDs—that he enters fall camp as the Bulldogs' No. 3 wideout. Senior Mikey Henderson, the All-SEC punt returner in '06, left spring as the top flanker. Henderson drew so much praise from Richt that he was dubbed "Mr. Spring" by the Georgia media corps. Tight end Tripp Chandler was the only player to make it through spring healthy at his position and is a virtually unchallenged incumbent.

THE NEXT BIG THING

» CALEB KING, RB

The Bulldogs have depth returning at tailback and a talented freshman waiting eagerly for his chance. Senior Kregg Lumpkin, Georgia's leader with 798 yards and six TDs rushing last season, returns, as does senior Thomas Brown. Brown rushed for 256 yards and a touchdown before blowing out his ACL against Vandy. They are backed up by redshirt freshman Knowshon Moreno and true freshman Caleb King, one of the nation's top tailback prospects.

Questions still abound as to the sturdiness of the offensive line, but Georgia fans were encouraged by the arrival of new Offensive Line Coach Stacey Searels from LSU. Another new arrival is early enrollee Trinton Sturdivant, who showed up in January and by spring's end was the starting left tackle. Another freshman, redshirt Chris Davis, tops the depth chart at left guard. Senior Fernando Velasco is at center, with junior Scott Haverkamp and senior Chester Adams fortifying the right side.

Departures hit Georgia's defense hard, as the Bulldogs lost six of their front seven. Especially big losses were ends Quentin Moses and Charles Johnson, who are likely to be replaced by sophomore Roderick Battle and lightweight senior Marcus Howard. Sophomore Geno Atkins joins returning starter Jeff Owens, a junior who had 26 tackles last season.

Because of injuries, Georgia had only four linebackers to work with in the spring. Senior Brandon Miller started at strongside linebacker but moved to the middle. Junior Dannell Ellerbe mans Miller's old spot, while freshman Akeem Dent won a protracted battle with sophomore Darius Dewberry at weakside.

Two starters return from a secondary that helped Georgia rank fifth in the nation last season in pass defense (150.0 ypg). Senior Kelin Johnson, who had 60 tackles and two picks last year, is back at strong safety, while sophomore Bryan Evans returns at cornerback.

Georgia brings back the SEC's best placekicker in senior Brandon Coutu. Coutu made all 17 of his extra-point attempts last season and was 10-of-11 on field-goal tries, his only miss being a 53-yarder against Colorado.

Four-year punter Gordon Ely-Kelso has left the stage, leaving the job at least for now to junior Brian Mimbs. Mimbs didn't have a punt last season, but did leave his mark, converting an onside kick that spurred the Bulldogs' comeback in their bowl win over Virginia Tech. Mimbs, however, is expected to get a strong challenge in the fall from incoming freshman Drew Butler, son of former Georgia and Chicago Bears great Kevin Butler.

With Stafford cementing himself in a leadership role on offense, with the defense that returns, with the constant influx of talent that Richt has pipelined into the program, can the Bulldogs be expected to contend for the SEC East title? Of course, this year and virtually every year. But to unseat Florida, it would help if Georgia could beat the Gators a little more frequently. Do that, and avoid the midseason swoon that dogged Georgia last year, and the Bulldogs could be making the short trip to Atlanta in December.

RECRUITING REPORT

The Bulldogs landed an elite group of offensive linemen and continued to reap the harvest of in-state prospects to earn a No. 9 ranking from Street & Smith's.

Newcomers who will vie for offensive line spots include Chris Little (6-5, 345), Justin Anderson (6-5, 320), Clint Boling (6-5, 265), Ben Harden (6-4, 290), Scott Haverkamp (6-5, 300), Tanner Strickland (6-4, 315), Trinton Sturdivant (6-4, 285) and Vince Vance (6-7, 300).

Four of the linemen are transfers from junior colleges or prep schools, with Boling, Little, Strickland and Sturdivant coming off high school seasons. All but Sturdivant, a North Carolina product, played at Georgia high schools.

Aside from the linemen, this recruiting class includes Caleb King (5-11, 185), Georgia's top-rated running back, linebacker Rennie Curran (5-11, 205) and three highly rated defensive ends: Neland Ball (6-6, 220), Justin Houston (6-3, 230) and Corvey Irvin (6-4, 275).

King played his senior season at tiny Greater Atlanta Christian after earning All-State honors as a junior at large-school powerhouse Parkview in Lilburn.

Promising defensive lineman Jarius Wynn (6-5, 275) is a product of Georgia Military in Milledgeville, Ga., along with Vance and Irvin.

Other promising in-state recruits include defensive back Vance Cuff (5-11, 170), linebacker John Knox (6-2, 190) and wide receivers Walter Hill (6-5, 200) and Israel Troupe (6-0, 200).

The Bulldogs also signed a touted out-of-state quarterback in Logan Gray (6-3, 180) from Columbia, Mo.

2006 Record: 9-4 » SEC: 5-3 (lost to Penn State in the Outback Bowl, 20-10)

Vols have injury issues heading into preseason

When you're Tennessee, a season like 2006 isn't so much something to celebrate as it is a relief.

Coming as it did on the heels of a disappointing 5-6 record in 2005—the Volunteers' first losing campaign since 1988—last year's 9-4 record was, in the words of Borat, very nice.

Not thrilling, but nice.

There were certainly some high points on Rocky Top. The Vols opened by manhandling California, an alleged national-championship contender, 35-18 in Knoxville. They crushed reigning SEC champion Georgia in Athens, 51-33.

But after a 7-1 start, a No. 8 national ranking and gathering dreams of vaulting into national-title contention, the season hit the skids. Tennessee lost three of its last five, starting with a 28-24 setback to LSU and culminating with a 20-10 loss to Penn State in the Outback Bowl.

In a way, like last season, Tennessee is starting over, trying to build a memorable season out of the tools at hand.

The foundation starts with senior quarterback Erik Ainge—or, more specifically, his surgically repaired knee. Midway through spring practice, he had a torn piece of meniscus cartilage removed, with his recovery expected to be completed in time for August practice.

It better. Though Jonathan Crompton showed promise last season, Ainge is perhaps the most accomplished returning quarterback in the SEC. He set a Tennessee record with a 67-percent completion mark last year, throwing for 2,989 yards and 19 touchdowns.

Whether Ainge can be as effective as he was in 2006, given the departure of receivers Robert Meachem, Bret Smith and Jayson Swain, is perhaps the bigger question. Lucas Taylor (14 catches, 101 yards), Austin Rogers (5, 69) and Quentin Hancock (2, 29) have emerged as the best of an underwhelming lot.

Fulmer has threatened to use his tailbacks as receivers, if necessary. Fortunately, there are plenty at his disposal.

The Vols return last season's top three rushers, although it was the third, Arian Foster (91 carries, 322 yards, 5 touchdowns), who emerged from spring practice as the starter. LaMarcus Coker (108, 696, 5) is probably the best talent, but he has been dogged by discipline issues. In between is Montario Hardesty (107, 384, 4), who could shine brightest if he can stay healthier than he was last season. The offensive line, which returns three starters, will have to improve if the running game is to be more productive.

Concerns about the defensive line led to spring conversations about switching from a 4-3 front to a 3-4. Quality depth is an issue, especially at tackle, where sophomore Dan Williams and senior J.T. Mapu are the best prospects. A native of Hawaii, Mapu returned to the team last season after serving a two-year Mormon mission to record just eight tackles. He will have to be more productive. Juniors Xavier Mitchell and Antonio Reynolds will likely man the end positions.

Junior Jerod Mayo slides inside to take over for Marvin Mitchell at middle linebacker—or he will when he recovers from offseason knee surgery. His first full contact this August will be his first since the Outback Bowl.

The secondary is anchored around All-SEC free safety Jonathan Hefney. The conference's No. 2 returning interceptor had five picks last season. The rest of the starting spots were unsettled at press time, with senior Antonio Gaines and sophomore Marsalous Johnson emerging from spring on top, while Jarod Parrish was No. 1 at strong safety.

THE NEXT BIG THING

Crompton, who showed glimpses of brilliance last season against LSU, could be the man driving the Big Orange bus if Erik Ainge's knee doesn't heal by September.

Is this Evil Genius' year to make indelible mark on USC?

There was a certain hum to South Carolina football this offseason, and it wasn't just the amps cranking up from the performance Hootie and the Blowfish gave before April's spring game.

ESPN showed up to televise the game as well. Perhaps it's because the sports giant heard the buzz everyone else is enveloped in these days in the Palmetto State:

This could be the year.

Since South Carolina and Arkansas joined the SEC in 1992 and helped usher in the conference championship game and divisional play, the SEC East berth in the title game has been an exclusive club with only three members: Florida, Georgia and Tennessee.

But this year, there could be a garnet-and-black-clad guest crashing the party.

Steve Spurrier's team has been gaining ground on the rest of the conference in recruiting, traditionally a difficult task for the Gamecocks. The defense is beginning to take on the look of a contender. And the offense, well, it does have the Evil Genius calling the plays.

OK, so maybe winning the East is quite a leap for a team that was only 3-5 in the SEC last year. But with Florida perhaps coming back to the pack after losing so much off of last season's defense and Georgia and Tennessee not looking as though they can separate from the rest of the division, maybe the notion isn't so far-fetched.

One pothole that South Carolina will have to fill right away on its road to Atlanta is at wide receiver. Sidney Rice left a considerable void there, taking his talents to the NFL two years early.

As a group, the Gamecocks' receivers looked pretty ordinary in the spring, with Spurrier left wanting for a deep burner. Junior Kenny McKinley, the team's second-leading receiver last year with 880 yards and five touchdowns on 51 catches, returns at one spot, while the other will likely be manned by junior-college transfer Larry Freeman. Freshman Chris Culliver, rated by some as the top prospect out of North Carolina this year, will also be expected to contribute.

Getting the ball to those receivers will be the job of senior quarterback Blake Mitchell, the main man in South Carolina's offense after splitting the job last year with Syvelle Newton. Mitchell completed two-thirds of his passes last season (135-for-202) for 1,789 yards with 10 TDs and six interceptions. Battling behind him to be the No. 2 quarterback are sophomore Tommy Beecher, freshman Chris Smelley and freshman Stephen Garcia, who has drawn the most praise from Spurrier.

The ground game looks solid with the return of senior Cory Boyd, who had 823 yards and eight TDs in 2006, and junior Mike Davis, who ran for 474 yards and six scores.

The offensive line, however, was a concern all spring, dominated by the defensive front even when it rushed only four. Sophomore Lemuel Jeanpierre moved over from defensive tackle to beat out James Thompson at right guard.

South Carolina signed seven defensive linemen in February and four of them were on campus in time for spring practice, speeding up the improvement of the D-line.

Twin brothers Jasper and Casper Brinkley return for their senior seasons in the heart of the Gamecocks' defense. Jasper plays middle linebacker, while Casper works the weakside, though he could be asked to make a move back to defensive end. Sophomore Rodney Paulk plays strongside 'backer.

Junior Ryan Succop is back to handle both kicking and punting duties. He was a sharp 16-of-20 on field-goal attempts last season.

#5 » KENTUCKY WILDCATS

PRESEASON RANK

Kentucky has become the SEC's main distributor for boundless optimism.

First—and basketball in Kentucky is always first—there's the excitement generated by the hiring of new Coach Billy Gillispie for hoops. Then, a definite second but just as palpable, is the hum emanating from Commonwealth Stadium.

The Wildcats went 8-5 last season, winning five of their last six, including a 28-20 victory over Clemson in the Music City Bowl, UK's first postseason victory in 22 years. This season, with some of the SEC's best offensive stars returning, hopes are again high.

Coach Rich Brooks used spring practice to build experience for many of his younger players because the veterans are so established.

Quarterback Andre Woodson returns for his senior season as a prime All-SEC candidate. He completed 264 of 419 passes last season for 3,515 yards with 31 touchdowns and just seven interceptions. Also back are three of his favorite targets—receivers Keenan Burton, Dicky Lyons and tight end Jacob Tamme. Burton was second in the SEC in 2006 with 141.9 all-purpose yards per game.

While the offense should provide fireworks, the Kentucky defense will once again be trying to keep the opposition from lighting a fuse. The Wildcats were last in the SEC in total, rushing, passing and scoring defense last season. That prompted Defensive Coordinator Mike Archer to leave for a similar position at North Carolina State.

Brooks promoted Steve Brown from secondary coach to defensive coordinator, with the promise to streamline Archer's complex scheme. At least there is plenty of experience returning, with eight starters back led by senior weakside linebacker Wesley Woodyard.

#6 » VANDERBILT COMMODORES

PRESEASON RANK

You've heard of teams using "The time is now" as their catchphrase?

For the 2007 Vanderbilt Commodores, the slogan could well be, "If not now, when?"

Nineteen returning starters (plus a starting tailback from 2005), a favorable non-conference schedule and eight home games for the first time since 1900 give Vandy a legitimate shot at going bowling for the first time since 1982.

Now entering his sixth season, Coach Bobby Johnson and his staff have made big strides at elevating Vandy's talent level to where it is competitive in the SEC.

Junior wide receiver Earl Bennett and left tackle Chris Williams are two of the SEC's best. With Cassen Jackson-Garrison at tailback, plus the return of Jeff Jennings—he missed all of the 2006 season with a knee injury—the Commodores have one of the best ball-handling duos in the conference. And eight starters return on a defense led by linebacker Jonathan Goff, an All-SEC choice a year ago.

At tailback, Jackson-Garrison (614 yards, 5 touchdowns in 2006) and Jennings (448 yards, 7 TDs in 2005) emerged from camp as 1 and 1-A on the depth chart.

Whether Jennings or Jackson-Garrison takes the first snap Sept. 1 against Richmond is irrelevant. The point is that to survive in the SEC, teams need a stable of running backs. With them, as well as sophomore Jared Hawkins (298 yards, 3 TDs), Vanderbilt has that kind of depth.

Chris Nickson (160-of-292, 2,085 yards, 15 TDs, 13 interceptions) returns at quarterback, with his favorite target joining him. Bennett (82 catches, 1,146 yards, 6 TDs) led the SEC in receptions per game last season and was second in total receiving yards. Though just a junior, Bennett needs 48 catches to become the career leader in SEC receptions.

CONFERENCE TITLE · BOWL · NATIONAL TITLE

First-round NFL Draft losses heavy, but there are still Miles of talent in Baton Rouge

Despite LSU fans' tendency to despair over the little things, despite what former coach/now Louisiana Public Enemy No. 1 Nick Saban once called "Catastrophe Syndrome," football has never been better in Tigertown.

Since 2000, LSU has:

- Won a national championship.
- Won two SEC titles and played for a third.
- Been to seven straight bowls for the first time ever.
- Posted four seasons of 10 to 13 wins.
- Finished in the top 10 four times and three times in the top five.

Not even in the glory days of Billy Cannon and the Chinese Bandits have the Tigers ever been on this kind of roll. And LSU figures to keep rolling on the river this season. Despite losing four first-round NFL draft picks—including the top choice, quarterback JaMarcus Russell, to the Oakland Raiders—LSU is still arguably the most talented team in the conference, or maybe the nation.

After back-to-back 11-win seasons that were very good but not great, nothing less than a championship will do in 2007.

One gets a sense from third-year Coach Les Miles that he shares the sentiment. But he also knows the work his players must put in to get there.

"I want them to segment their thinking," Miles says. "There's no way we can win a national championship today. There's no way we can win a conference championship today. We're a ways away from the field.

"I certainly understand expectations and the enjoyment of that. But there's a lot we have to accomplish before we can talk about where we're going to finish the season."

The old joke at LSU goes that the most popular Tiger quarterback is whoever is on the bench. For a lot of LSU fans, that man has often been Matt Flynn, Russell's backup the last two seasons.

Now the job is falling squarely to Flynn.

Miles' mantra even at the end of spring practice was that the quarterback derby continued to be a horse race between Flynn and sophomore Ryan Perrilloux. But Perrilloux was suspended indefinitely in May for using a fake ID, so the safe bet is Flynn, who in his biggest chance to shine was brilliant as MVP of the 2005 Peach Bowl.

Both quarterbacks will give opponents headaches with their running ability, something new coordinator Gary Crowton is sure to incorporate into his offense. Known for setting passing records when he was at Louisiana Tech and for producing 1,000-yard rushers at BYU, Crowton is likely to favor the same kind of multiple, balanced attack LSU fans came to favor from Jimbo Fisher, who left to be offensive coordinator at Florida State.

"The thing I enjoy about Gary is he's always able to take the skills he has and adjust the offense to make sure the right people touch the ball," Miles says. "We'll still be two-back and be recognizable, but you will also recognize some differences."

As with many positions on this team, the backfield stable is deep and talented. LSU fans lamented not being able to keep New Orleans prep star Joe McKnight away from Southern Cal, but there are still plenty of players here to carry the ball. Expect Keiland Williams to beat out fellow sophomore Charles Scott for the starting nod, but it will be a tailback-by-committee that also includes seniors Jacob Hester and Alley Broussard and improving redshirt freshman Richard Murphy. Hester will also play fullback and is the Tigers' best receiver out of the backfield.

The Tigers lost two first-round draft picks from their corps of wide receivers—Dwayne Bowe and Craig Davis—but they still have a likely future pro in senior Early Doucet. Sophomore Brandon LaFell will have to continue his maturation process and take over the other spot. Expect players like sophomore Jared Mitchell, a center fielder on the LSU baseball team, and pocket-rocket sophomore Trindon Holliday (5-5, 159 pounds) to play key roles. Holliday will be LSU's version of Percy Harvin at Florida, a multiple talent with speed and quicksilver elusiveness.

THE NEXT BIG THING

» RICHARD MURPHY, RB

Worked his way through a deep tailback corps with an impressive spring and now stands poised to challenge Keiland Williams and Charles Scott.

Both safeties will have to be replaced. Senior Craig Steltz is practically a returning regular, having started three games in each of the last two seasons in place of a oft-injured Jessie Daniels. Junior Curtis Taylor takes over for yet another NFL first-rounder, LaRon Landry, at free. Both corners are back in seniors Chevis Jackson and Jonathan Zenon.

Junior Colt David returns as LSU's placekicker after having a quietly consistent season—he made eight of 13 field goals and 50 of 51 extra points. The punter position is up for grabs, though for now it's in the hands of seldom-used senior Patrick Fisher. Expect the kickoff-return duties to once again be handled by Doucet and Holliday, who returned just five balls in 2006 but averaged an explosive 32.4 yards per return. Jackson ended up handling more punts than anyone (though he averaged just 6.7 yards per return) and is the incumbent there.

Some critics say LSU's talent should have put it in the BCS Championship Game last year. But four road games against what were at the time top-10 teams (teams that all wound up in January postseason games) would have made that a daunting task for any program.

This year, the schedule sets up just about perfectly: not too hard, but not too soft so as to cost the Tigers points in the BCS formula when it really counts.

The Tigers have their games against tough opponents, but most of them are at home: Virginia Tech, Florida, Auburn and Arkansas. LSU's road slate includes a Thursday night opener at Mississippi State and matchups with Ole Miss, Kentucky and Tulane. The Nov. 3 game, on the road against Alabama and Saban, looms as a must-win for the Tigers.

It is that way because the Tigers want to beat their ex—and because they hope by early November LSU will still be a national-championship contender.

RECRUITING REPORT

The Tigers continued to restock the talent pool, and the 2007 recruiting class earns a No. 3 national ranking from Street & Smith's.

LSU again recruited well in its home state and landed most of its recruiting targets, with the notable exception of USC-bound Joe McKnight.

However, the Tigers signed 11 home-grown products in their 26-player class. The in-state headliners are prep All-America defensive back/athlete Chad Jones (6-2, 220), defensive back Stefoin Francois (6-0, 190) and wide receiver DeAngelo Benton (6-3, 195).

Other Louisiana prep products in the fold include defensive end Kentravis Aubrey (6-3, 285), defensive linemen Will Blackwell (6-4, 300) and Drake Nevis (6-1, 285), defensive back Delvin Breaux (6-0, 175), offensive lineman Josh Dworaczyk (6-5, 265) and athlete John Williams (5-11, 175).

Notable out-of-state commitments are Terrance Tolliver (6-4, 185), who was rated the top receiver prospect in talent-rich Texas, prep All-America defensive lineman Joseph Barksdale (6-6, 325) from Detroit and defensive end Sidell Corley (6-4, 250) of Alabama.

Other promising newcomers include athlete Ron Brooks (6-0, 170), offensive lineman Jarvis Jones (6-7, 250) and quarterback Jarrett Lee (6-2, 195) from Texas; wide receiver Demetrius Byrd (6-2, 195) and athlete Stevan Ridley (6-0, 210) of Mississippi; athlete Phelon Jones (6-1, 185) from Alabama; and offensive lineman Ernest McCoy (6-5, 330) of Florida.

LSU also added a re-signing from the 2006 class with in-state defensive back Shomari Clemons (6-2, 230).

Despite '06 success and presence of McFadden, Arkansas must overcome caldron of controversy

Perhaps the best way to classify the Arkansas Razorbacks is as a danger to themselves and others. Otherwise, the Razorbacks virtually defy description.

Arkansas was ranked fifth in the country last Thanksgiving, rebounding from an opening-day blowout loss to Southern California with 10 straight wins to clinch the SEC West championship and dare to dream of playing in the BCS Championship Game. Then came the three-game skid that dropped the Hogs to 10-4. Sure, the losses were to LSU, Florida and Wisconsin—teams that finished a combined 36-4 and were all ranked in the top five—but it still left a bitter taste.

Running back Darren McFadden and backfield mate Felix Jones hog-wired the Razorback Nation by combining for 2,815 yards, finishing one-two on the SEC rushing list. McFadden was the runner-up to Heisman Trophy winner Troy Smith of Ohio State, and goes into this season as the player to beat for sport's most coveted individual award. And yet, in the offseason, quarterback Mitch Mustain and wide receiver Damian Williams were disillusioned enough to transfer to Southern Cal, while Gus Malzahn packed up his playbook and bolted to Tulsa after just one season in Fayetteville as offensive coordinator.

Amid all the turmoil, the highs and the lows, the one constant is often embattled Coach Houston Nutt's boundless optimism.

POWER RATINGS

| SPECIAL TEAMS | 3 |

He looks at last season as the foundation for bigger and better things in 2007.

"The staff is in place and we've done a good job," Nutt says. "We're the defending Western Division champs and we want to continue to get better."

Only 11 starters return, but enough key players to make Nutt's mission statement sound like more than coach's chatter.

"We have a good group of seniors," Nutt says, "guys like [wide receiver] Marcus Monk who could have left early. Good leaders and good kids who do the right things. That's what you feel good about."

With Mustain gone, Casey Dick enters his junior season as the undisputed starter despite less-than-overwhelming stats last year: 65-of-132 passing, 991 yards, nine touchdowns and six interceptions. Dick had a hot-and-cold spring under new Offensive Coordinator David Lee, who was brought in to try to upgrade the passing game into something resembling the running game.

Lee has said his quarterback doesn't have to be a Heisman Trophy winner, just someone to run the offense efficiently and keep the mistakes to a manageable number. It's sound reasoning, since Arkansas most likely has the nation's top Heisman candidate.

McFadden came at opponents from a variety of unstoppable angles last season, piling up 1,647 yards rushing and 14 TDs. His backfield mate, Jones, was only the SEC's second-leading rusher last season despite getting 1,168 yards. Senior fullback Peyton Hillis was sorely missed when he went down for the last four games of last season with an injury. A potent weapon who had opposing defenses guessing whether he'd be staying in to block or go out for a pass, Hillis tied for second on the team with 19 receptions in 2006.

Six-foot-6 senior Monk is one of the SEC's most inviting targets and the Razorbacks' go-to pair of hands in the passing game. Monk had 50 catches last season for 962 yards and 11 TDs. Another senior, Robert Johnson started the Capital One Bowl against Wisconsin and is projected as the starter at flanker despite being banged up during spring practice. Sophomore tight end Andrew Davie (6-6, 265 pounds) had just two catches in 2006.

All-SEC center Jonathan Luigs returns to anchor the center of an offensive line that is otherwise largely a rebuilding project. Senior Robert Felton, a versatile player who can play all five line positions, returns at right guard.

» MALCOLM SHEPPARD, DE

Junior left tackle Jose Valdez, Tony Ugoh's understudy the last two seasons, played the second half of the Capital One Bowl after Ugoh got hurt and now takes over the position full-time. Junior Mitch Petrus, a former fullback, has beefed up and takes over at left guard. Senior Nate Garner doesn't have much experience and is the line's biggest question mark.

The defense was banged up this spring, with the biggest concern being senior defensive tackle Marcus Harrison. Harrison tore knee ligaments in April, requiring surgery, and the predicted rehab time will take him right up to the season opener. Senior Fred Bledsoe is Harrison's understudy.

Arkansas' linebacker corps was hit hard by the loss of outside 'backers Sam Olajabutu and Desmond Sims. Redshirt freshman Ryan Powers replaces Olajabutu, while sophomore Freddie Fairchild, who missed most of last season with a knee injury, is on the strongside. Senior Weston Dacus, the team's top returning tackler with 95 stops, is at middle linebacker.

Senior free safety Michael Grant is the only returning starter in the secondary, though he practiced sparingly in the spring after returning from knee surgery. Senior Matt Hewitt, a former linebacker, moves to strong safety. Senior Matterral Richardson and sophomore Jerell Norton, a talented but inexperienced former quarterback, take over at the corners.

Placekicker Jeremy Davis returns, but after going just six-for-13 in the field-goal department—making none from outside 44 yards—the door is open for incoming homegrown freshman Alex Tejada of Springdale. Davis is expected to move over and do a capable job of replacing graduated punter Jacob Skinner (though whether he can do a decent impression of Skinner's genuflecting pre-punt aiming technique remains to be seen).

Returning kicks was an Arkansas strength last season. With kickoffs coming from the 30-yard line now, there's little reason to believe the Razorbacks won't be dangerous here again. McFadden (26.2 yards per kickoff return) and Jones (24.1) will have opposing special-teams coordinators praying for a touchback. Hillis (11.5 yards per punt return) will likely be deep on punt returns, though Norton could get a look as well.

After starting with a 50-14 loss to USC's Men of Troy last year, Arkansas begins this season with the men of Troy (University) from Alabama. Next comes an early open date before the Razorbacks play 11 straight, starting with a Sept. 15 trip to Alabama and ending with a traditional day-after-Thanksgiving game with LSU in Baton Rouge.

Following Troy, the rest of the non-conference schedule is even less daunting, with games against North Texas, Chattanooga and Florida International. The key for the Razorbacks will be taking advantage of a home slate that includes Kentucky, Auburn and South Carolina. If the Razorbacks can win those, they could stay in contention for a return trip to the SEC Championship Game going into that season finale at LSU.

Clearly, the Razorbacks could again be a championship team. Or they could continue to unravel into something much more disappointing. Either way, the story ought to be compelling.

RECRUITING REPORT

The Razorbacks had a solid recruiting class but lost national names from 2006, including two in-state standouts who have transferred to USC in quarterback Mitch Mustain and wide receiver Damian Williams. Those two were high school teammates on a nationally ranked Springdale (Ark.) High team. Mustain was also named a National Player of the Year.

But the Arkansas coaches complemented in-state prospects with newcomers hailing from recruiting hotbeds Texas, Florida, Oklahoma, Alabama and Georgia.

From the Arkansas high school ranks come two promising tight ends in D. J. Williams (6-2, 245) and Grant Freeman (6-6, 235), as well as massive offensive lineman Grant Cook (6-6, 315), center Seth Oxner (6-4, 280), wide receiver Crosby Tuck (6-1, 185) and All-State placekicker Alex Tejada (6-1, 195).

Out of Florida are lineman Kareem Crowell (6-4, 315), who spent a year at a Virginia prep school, and running back Juwan Franklin (6-1, 210). Both could figure prominently in future Razorback plans.

Touted Texas linebacker Jermaine Love (5-11, 200) is a productive defender from Garland who was credited with more than 150 tackles last season.

Two quarterbacks were also recruited out of Texas: Nathan Dick (6-4, 200) from Allen and Joseph Chaisson (6-2, 175) of Beaumont. The Razorbacks went to Tulsa, Okla., to land running back Michael Harris.

Tigers will continue to quietly be the best team in Alabama

While the excitement at Alabama over Nick Saban's hiring has to have Auburn fans rolling their eyes, the underlying truth is something even the Crimson Tide faithful can't deny: 'Bama has a lot of catching up to do.

It is Auburn that now sets the standard in the state. Since 2000, the Tigers have been to a pair of SEC Championship Games, turned in that hurts-so-good 13-0 season in 2004 and won 66 games overall, including 33 over the last three years.

Maintaining that kind of success will be a challenge for Auburn in 2007. Not that the talent and coaching isn't still strong, but it's the schedule that may keep the Tigers short of their now-expected annual goal of reaching the SEC Championship Game.

On offense, it will be up to Brandon Cox to lead Auburn there. The 6-2, 209-pound junior had a solid if unspectacular sophomore campaign, completing 163 of 271 passes for 2,198 yards with 14 touchdowns and nine interceptions.

With Kenny Irons gone, the bulk of the tailback duties fall to junior Brad Lester, who had 510 yards and a team-high nine TDs on 104 carries last season. Lester is backed up by sophomore Ben Tate, who rushed for 392 yards and three scores in 2006, with redshirt freshman Mario Fannin and junior Tristan Davis providing depth. Senior Carl Stewart returns at fullback.

Auburn can comfortably go three wide at receiver (and then some), but someone has to be the go-to guy. That's junior Rodgeriquis Smith, second on the team last year with 26 catches for 452 yards and a team-best four TDs. Sophomore Robert Dunn came on late in spring despite being hampered by a hamstring, and junior Prechae Rodriguez will also catch plenty of balls. Senior Cole Bennett returns at tight end.

Leon Hart has been shuffled from here to there on the line. Now in his final season, he has one last chance to make his mark at right guard. Andrew McCain, a junior, ended the spring as the No. 1 right tackle, but will have to fend off August challenges from junior Antwoin Daniels and possibly even freshman Lee Ziemba (6-7, 295).

The defensive line could be the Tigers' biggest strength this season, but even here Auburn coaches did a little spring shuffling. Three starters return in seniors Quentin Groves and Josh Thompson and sophomore Sen'Derrick Marks (6-2, 287). But concerns over who would replace Marquies Gunn at end opposite Groves led Defensive Coordinator Will Muschamp to slide Marks to the outside, opening up a spot at defensive tackle for junior Pat Sims. Marks' move was inhibited by an ankle injury that kept him down most of the spring.

Auburn has to hope things settle out at linebacker come August. Projected strongside starter Tray Blackmon, a sophomore, was suspended for the spring. Junior Merrill Johnson, now at middle linebacker, also sat out much of the spring with a torn calf muscle. New starter Steve Gandy, another junior, is at weakside.

More injuries in the secondary forced Auburn to go young at cornerback this spring. The expectation is for senior Jonathan Wilhite to be back from knee and shoulder injuries by fall. Senior Patrick Lee takes over for David Irons at the other corner. Sophomore free safety Aairon Savage, Auburn's top returning tackler with 53 stops, has emerged as one of the SEC's best young defensive backs. Senior Eric Brock returns at strong safety, though Auburn coaches were publicly saying this spring they are looking for more leadership from him.

Auburn must revamp its kicking game.

THE NEXT BIG THING

Savage led Auburn with 53 tackles in 2006, so he isn't a new name. But the sophomore could replace ex-LSU free safety LaRon Landry as the SEC's best.

'Sabanation' expecting miracles from Nick, but 2007 unlikely to produce anything special

Nick Saban and Mike Shula have the same number of letters in their names and both once played quarterback.

Alabama fans are hoping that's where the similarity ends.

After years of riding college football's roller coaster—up one season and down the next—Alabama went for the gold by shoving a pile of it at Saban, who in five years at LSU got that program on track to its greatest era ever.

Saban was handed a $32 million, eight-year guaranteed contract to do in Tuscaloosa what he did in Baton Rouge (we won't mention his aborted two-year stint with the Miami Dolphins). And by that, we don't mean take 'Bama to the Chick-fil-A Bowl.

The Crimson Tide faithful want to win championships again. It has been 15 years since Alabama won its last national title, eight years since it won an SEC championship or even played in the SEC Championship Game.

Coaches like Mike Dubose, Dennis Franchione and Shula brought slivers of success, but nothing permanent. Alabama fans are starving for consistent, big-time winning, just like the Bear Bryant days.

Can Saban do that? Can anyone? Right now, 'Bama fans certainly believe. Why else would they have packed Bryant-Denny Stadium for the "A-Day" spring game, filling its 92,138 seats so completely that Alabama officials had to turn folks away at halftime. It was believed to be the largest crowd ever for a spring game anywhere.

Saban, who has never stayed anywhere longer than five seasons in his coaching career, came under withering criticism after stating flatly he would not be Alabama's new coach.

That was from outside the 'Bama nation—uh, make that the "Sabanation." Inside that country, there's been nothing but love.

Known for his defensive expertise, Saban hired young Offensive Coordinator Major Applewhite away from Rice and invited him to install a wide-open attack.

Alabama certainly has the tools to do just that, led by junior quarterback John Parker Wilson. Wilson completed 216 of 379 passes last year for 2,707 yards with 17 touchdowns and 10 interceptions. Expect to see a lot of Wilson in shotgun formations as he throws to a bevy of receivers, led by seniors DJ Hall and Keith Brown. Senior Matt Caddell will typically be on the field as a third receiver.

Saban detests depth charts, so the tailback position coming out of the spring was a true mystery. Junior Jimmy Johns was No. 1 most of the spring, but freshman Terry Grant started on A-Day. Also, don't count out sophomore Glen Coffee.

With a load of experience and depth, the offensive line should be improved. All the starters return, though senior right tackle Chris Capps was hurt all spring and was replaced for most of the practices by junior B.J. Stabler, who had a knee scoped but is expected to be OK. The rest of the line includes sophomore left tackle Andre Smith, senior left guard Justin Britt, junior center Antoine Caldwell and junior right guard Marlon Davis. Junior Travis McCall is back at tight end.

Alabama's defense was middle-of-the-pack in the SEC last year and, while Saban's defensive prowess is well known, he can't fill all the holes himself. Saban installed a 3-4 alignment under new Defensive Coordinator Kevin Steele, with senior Wallace Gilberry and junior Bobby Greenwood manning the ends and converted offensive lineman Brian Motley taking over at nose tackle.

The linebacking corps isn't particularly deep. Sophomore Prince Hall is the top returning tackler with 77 stops. Senior cornerback Simeon Castille, who led the Tide with six interceptions last year, is one of the SEC's best.

THE NEXT BIG THING

A surprise spring-game starter ahead of Jimmy Johns, a junior. Nick Saban hates depth charts, but the job could be Grant's to lose.

#5 » MISSISSIPPI REBELS

PRESEASON RANK

When Brent Schaeffer arrived at Ole Miss, he was supposed to be the next great thing at quarterback in Oxford—or at least the first great thing since Eli Manning left.

Heading into this season, he isn't even the Rebels' No. 1 signal-caller.

Either Coach Ed Orgeron is trying to send a message to his talented senior (who started every game and threw for 1,442 yards in 2006) or it really will be fellow senior Seth Adams who takes the first snap Sept. 1 at Memphis.

"Schaeffer has had some inconsistent days," Orgeron says. "We're keeping the quarterback position open, but Seth has the leg up for now. I'm not going to say Brent can't be the quarterback, but he has to be more consistent."

More dependable production at quarterback is all-important to the Ole Miss mission statement: breaking the cycle of three straight losing seasons, the Rebels' worst skid in 25 years.

Tony Fein, a junior college All-American who served a tour of duty in Iraq, takes over at middle linebacker for departed All-American and first-round NFL draft pick Patrick Willis. It's hard to imagine that the Rebels' defense could be better or even the equal of last year's unit without Willis, though it will be new Defensive Coordinator John Thompson's duty to try. Thompson coordinated the defense at Northwestern State when Orgeron, who called his own defensive formations the last two seasons, was a defensive lineman there.

Whoever is the quarterback, the offensive line in front of him should be a team strength, as left guard Reid Neely is the only new starter. The running-back corps is led by bruising senior BenJarvus Green-Ellis, who became just the third 1,000-yard rusher in Ole Miss history last year.

#6 » MISSISSIPPI STATE BULLDOGS

PRESEASON RANK

The Mississippi State Bulldogs have taken up roots in the SEC West cellar. They've spent enough time down there to put in a game room and a big-screen TV they can use to watch their upsets of Alabama and Florida that State has pulled off in recent years—and those now-long-ago bowl trips.

As comfortable as the Bulldogs have gotten down there, the goal is to get back on the main floor in the SEC Western Division. This season, they're as close to climbing the stairs of respectability as they've been in some time.

The excitement is on offense, where State returns 10 starters—and a former head coach. Rockey Felker, the ex-State quarterback who was serving as Coach Sylvester Croom's administrative assistant, is back on the field as running backs coach as well as recruiting coordinator.

Felker has some talent to work with in the backfield, as the Bulldogs return their top three rushers from 2006, led by sophomore Anthony Dixon (668 yards, 9 TDs).

The key to the offense is sustaining the health of junior quarterback Michael Henig, who threw for 1,201 yards, seven TDs and nine interceptions last season. He has as deep a receiving corps to throw to as the Bulldogs have had since their glory days in the late 1990s. It's led by senior Tony Burks (35 catches, 850 yards, 5 TDs) and junior Jamayel Smith (20, 335, 2). Mike Brown, a transfer from Florida, returns at left tackle, where his presence late last season led to a marked decrease in pressure on Henig.

As promising as the offense is, the defense is a question mark. The Bulldogs lost two of their best in middle linebacker Quinton Culberson and tackle Deljuan Robinson, and will be hard-pressed to replace them. Junior Jamar Chaney slides over from the weakside spot to fill Culberson's position.

FOUR FEARLESS FORECASTS

1. A WAC team won't crash the BCS bowl party again, but the conference will produce its second Heisman Trophy winner: Hawaii quarterback Colt Brennan.

2. Two seasons removed from a winless campaign, Hal Mumme's New Mexico State Aggies will break a 47-year postseason drought and play in the New Mexico Bowl.

3. San Jose State's Dwight Lowery will get eight more interceptions and finish his career with 17, the most ever by someone who played only two seasons in the conference.

4. After spending all season distancing itself from talk about the trick plays used in the Fiesta Bowl victory, Boise State will beat Hawaii in its regular-season finale—and clinch the conference title—with a perfectly executed fake punt.

With national-honors candidates galore, WAC won't be resting on laurels

By LAURENCE MIEDEMA
San Jose Mercury News

With teams spread across four time zones, it's difficult for the WAC to get steady national exposure. But the conference's visibility and credibility reached new heights last season, largely because of Boise State's thrilling overtime win over Oklahoma in the Fiesta Bowl.

That might have just been the start.

Hawaii quarterback Colt Brennan and Boise State running back Ian Johnson are strong preseason candidates in the Heisman Trophy race after finishing sixth and eighth, respectively, in the voting last fall. San Jose State cornerback Dwight Lowery and Boise State offensive tackle Ryan Clady have made several preseason All-America teams.

Some of the nation's top returning statistical leaders are from the WAC: Lowery and Idaho's Stanley Franks led the country with nine interceptions apiece. New Mexico State receiver Chris Williams led the nation in receptions and yards per game. Johnson scored the most touchdowns (25). Brennan threw the most touchdowns (58) by a Division I-A quarterback ever.

But as the conference's exposure widens, the competitive gap within it is narrowing.

Boise State and Hawaii enter the season as the favorites to win the league championship. But San Jose State, Nevada, Fresno State and New Mexico State all have pieces in place that could turn the title chase into a mad scramble. Louisiana Tech, Idaho and Utah State are at least a year away.

The Broncos are the six-time defending conference champion (Nevada was the co-champ in 2005) and coming off a 13-0 season, but they have significant question marks. Boise State is looking for a new quarterback and receivers, and lost key pieces to its dominant defense.

Hawaii can outscore anybody, and with an improved defense could be this year's Boise State.

San Jose State and Nevada both played in bowls last season, but newcomers at key positions will go a long way in determining if those squads return to the postseason. Fresno State appears poised to rebound from an underachieving 2006 campaign, and New Mexico State, with the most exciting offense in the country this side of Hawaii, might be the most improved team in the conference.

It should be an interesting fall.

RECRUITING ROUNDUP

1. BOISE STATE ▸ Four-star quarterback Kellen Moore tops a prep-heavy class.
2. FRESNO STATE ▸ Signed 10 All-State California preps.
3. HAWAII ▸ Small class, but junior-college defenders will help immediately.
5. LOUISIANA TECH ▸ Found potential help for secondary.
6. NEVADA ▸ No QB, but lots of linemen and linebackers.
7. IDAHO ▸ Solid collection of talent despite just three weeks to recruit.
8. NEW MEXICO STATE ▸ More than half of the class is defense.

Petersen determined that Broncos won't be relying on tricks for headlines in 2007

What can Boise State do for an encore?

In 2006, all the Broncos did was go undefeated and become the media darlings of the college football world. It was a great story when Boise State, led by a rookie head coach, forced its way into a BCS invitation. It became much, much more when, after blowing a huge lead in the Fiesta Bowl, the Broncos used three trick plays to beat Oklahoma in overtime in what many believe was the greatest bowl game ever played.

What followed was just as unbelievable. The Broncos finished with a No. 5 ranking in the final AP poll—even earning a first-place vote. A documentary about the season is set for release this fall, and the rights to a feature film were purchased over the winter. Last year's quarterback, Jared Zabransky, was picked as the cover boy for a video game.

Heady stuff, for sure. But with huge holes to fill on both sides of the ball and an even larger target than usual, the Broncos can't afford to live off of their highlight clips. During spring practices players were forbidden from wearing any of their Fiesta Bowl garb.

"You kind of talk about it as if it were a movie or something, but not as if it were a part of your life," says junior tailback Ian Johnson, who famously made an on-field proposal to his girlfriend, Broncos cheerleader Chrissy Popadics, after he scored the winning two-point conversion against the Sooners. The couple's wedding was scheduled shortly before the Broncos opened fall camp.

"[Otherwise], you're living in the past," Johnson adds.

Coach Chris Petersen, whose debut as the successor to Dan Hawkins couldn't have gone any better, says he wants his squad to remember what got them to the Fiesta Bowl, not the flashy plays that won it.

"We want to be known as a blue-collar outfit," Petersen says, "that does things the hard way."

It certainly won't be easy for the Broncos to recapture last season's magic. The offense lost six starters, including Zabransky and his top four receivers. The defense, as large a factor as any for last season's breakthrough, lost six regulars, including All-WAC defensive lineman Andrew Browning and WAC Defensive Player-of-the-Year Korey Hall at linebacker. The Broncos also have to replace their punter and kicker.

But this program has survived significant roster turnover before. It has won or shared the WAC title the past six seasons. Since 1999, Boise State has the best winning percentage (.843) of any team in Division I-A football. The Broncos are 86-16 during that stretch and have won at least 10 games in six of those eight seasons.

The most obvious change on offense is at quarterback, where Zabransky must be replaced. In the spring, Bush Hamdan, a junior, and Taylor Tharp, a senior, distanced themselves from Mike Coughlin and Nick Lomax. But Petersen says the job likely won't be decided until late in fall camp. Hamdan, a third-stringer last season, had the strongest spring of the competitors, but Tharp, the No. 2 man the previous two seasons, has the most experience.

Last season, Boise State had the sixth-best rushing offense in the country, averaging 214.2 yards per game and scoring 39 touchdowns on the ground. There is no reason to believe the Broncos won't be just as good in 2007, with Johnson back and running behind four returning linemen: preseason All-America left tackle Ryan Clady, Jeff Cavender, Andrew Woodruff and Tad Miller.

Hawaii's Colt bucking for a Heisman and a WAC title

Hawaii's run-and-shoot offense always makes for entertaining football and video-game-like statistics. But after tying a school record with 11 victories last season, the Rainbow Warriors sense a higher calling: a conference title and a chance to crash the BCS party.

The Warriors finished last season ranked No. 24 in the USA Today coaches poll and have reason to believe they can be the team that finally knocks Boise State out of the top spot in the WAC. After all, Colt Brennan passed on early entry into the NFL and is back for his senior year after producing one of the greatest seasons by a quarterback in college football history. Also returning are Brennan's top three receivers and the bulk of an improving defense.

Last season, Brennan finished sixth in the Heisman voting after he broke or tied 16 NCAA records, 10 WAC records and 25 school records. Not only did he lead the nation with 5,549 passing yards and 58 touchdown passes (breaking David Klingler's previous mark of 54), but Brennan also completed 72.6 percent of his attempts, threw just 12 interceptions (in 599 attempts) and established an NCAA record with a pass-efficiency rating of 186.0.

Brennan was able to produce such mind-numbing numbers largely because he had time to throw. Protecting him will be a key after the loss to graduation of a trio of three-year starters on the offensive line: center Samson Satele and tackles Tala Esera and Dane Uperesa. Guards John Estes and Hercules Satele are the lone returnees on the line.

Hawaii broke spring camp unsure of who would take over in the backfield in its one-back set after the departures of workhorse Nate Ilaoa (990 rushing yards, 67 receptions) and top backup Reagan Mauia. But it was not from a lack of options. The Warriors looked at 13 candidates, and no one emerged as a clear No. 1 on the depth chart.

So, the jockeying at running back is far from over. Nebraska transfer Leon Wright-Jackson, a mega-recruit coming out of high school, will arrive in the fall and should quickly emerge.

QB › Colt Brennan

Hawaii has no shortage of game-breaking receivers. The trio of Davone Bess, Jason Rivers and Ryan Grice-Mullen caught a combined 214 passes for 3,168 yards and 36 touchdowns last season. Bess, a junior, led the way with 96 receptions, and he and Rivers, a senior, gave the Warriors a pair of 1,000-yard receivers for the second year in a row. Grice-Mullen, a junior, missed four games because of injuries last season, but caught 85 passes for a team-best 1,228 yards and 12 TDs in 2005.

Although the offense gets most of the attention, one of the reasons Hawaii was able to make a six-win improvement last year was because it played better defense. The defense returns eight starters, but it will have a new identity with Greg McMackin taking over at defensive coordinator for Jerry Glanville, who left to be coach at Portland State. After two seasons of a 3-4 set, the Warriors are moving back to a 4-3, which should benefit a strong group of linebackers.

Bulldogs looking to bounce back from uncharacteristic swoon

It was just two seasons ago that Fresno State was the great hope for the non-BCS crowd. But since mid-November 2005, when the 8-1 Bulldogs took eventual national champion USC to the limit before suffering a heart-breaking 50-42 loss, nothing has gone right for this proud program.

The four-game losing streak to end 2005 was bad, but last season was even worse. The Bulldogs suffered through inconsistency and injuries to finish 4-8, the most losses seen in the Valley in 30 years. The result was a fifth-place finish and no bowl game for FSU for the first time since 1998.

However, 11th-year Coach Pat Hill and his staff were able to turn key positions over to many of the young players on the roster, particularly at the skill slots. The Bulldogs enter the fall with a young, battle-tested squad intent on restoring the luster to Fresno State's legacy.

"We have a lot of young players who are very talented and work extremely hard," says Hill, who delayed the start of spring drills by four weeks so his team could extend its offseason strength-and-conditioning program, and the result was 13 weight-room records.

"They have a chip on their shoulder after last season, which is a good thing. We just want to put the 2006 season away and focus on 2007."

A more consistent offense will go a long way in helping the Bulldogs put last season behind them and hold off the new wave of title contenders.

Fresno State typically has the personnel to score points in a hurry, but last year the Bulldogs averaged just 23 points per game, sixth in the conference.

Enter Jim McElwain, who will be the program's third offensive coordinator in as many seasons. Bulldogs fans have complained in recent years that the squad's offense is too conservative. Although Fresno needs to find a new starting tailback to replace departed 1,400-yard rusher Dwayne Wright, this will still be a power-running team. But McElwain, the Oakland Raiders' quarterback coach last season who formerly worked with John L. Smith at Michigan State and Louisville, implemented several intriguing new twists in the playbook, including four- and five-receiver sets.

The biggest key to the Bulldog offense is quarterback Tom Brandstater. The 6-foot-5, 220-pound junior had a topsy-turvy debut as the successor to Paul Pinegar and he took the brunt of the criticism for the team's struggles.

Brandstater was solid in a season-opening win over Nevada, completing 16 of 24 attempts for 124 yards and a touchdown. But it was a wild ride from there. He threw more interceptions (14) than touchdown passes (13), barely completed half his attempts and was briefly benched in the middle of the year. He ended the season by throwing four interceptions against San Jose State.

Protection wasn't a problem a year ago, when the Bulldogs' offensive line set a school record by yielding only 12 sacks. It shouldn't be this season either, with four of the starters returning: center Ryan Wendell, guards Adam McDowell and Cole Popovich and left tackle Bobby Lepori.

Coming out of spring camp, things weren't so clear on the defensive side of things—particularly in the secondary, where Hill said all four spots were still up for grabs. Ahijah Lane, the only returnee on defense who started every game last season, moves to the middle-linebacker spot vacated by all-conference performer Dwayne Andrews. The linebacking group might be the fastest in the conference, which should put some bite back in the Bulldog defense. Three starters return to the line, paced by senior Tyler Clutts, who led FSU with five sacks last season.

Street & Smith's All-American

New Mexico State took a big step last season, earning four victories after a miserable winless 2005 campaign and snapping a 21-game losing streak against Division I-A opponents along the way. Now, can the Aggies get over the hump and reach a bowl game for the first time since 1960?

Everything seems to point to a breakthrough. Third-year Coach Hal Mumme has 19 starters returning from a squad that lost three games by less than a touchdown and had five of its eight losses decided by 10 or fewer points. For the second time in school history, the Aggies have seven home games. And there is momentum coming off a two-game winning streak to end last season.

The Aggies are going to go as far as their offense can take them. It largely rests on the strong right arm of junior quarterback Chase Holbrook.

Holbrook, who sat out the 2005 season after following Mumme from Southeastern Louisiana (where Mumme was previously head coach), threw for 4,619 yards, breaking Ty Detmer's NCAA record for a sophomore. Holbrook was efficient as well as prolific. He completed 70 percent of his attempts, threw 34 touchdowns passes and was intercepted just nine times in 567 attempts.

Mumme's "Air Raid" offense could be even more productive this season, especially if the Aggies can run the ball—or at least keep teams honest. After tailback Justine Buries was lost to a knee injury in the second game, NMSU's running game was little more than a rumor. The Aggies averaged 2.8 yards per carry and barely 75 yards per game, so teams focused on pressuring Holbrook and he was sacked 39 times.

The top six receivers are back, led by junior Chris Williams, who caught 92 passes for 1,415 yards and 12 touchdowns last year. In all, Holbrook has four targets who caught at least 50 passes in '06.

Street & Smith's All-American

San Jose State was one of college football's best success stories last fall, making a six-win improvement in the second season under Coach Dick Tomey and winning the school's first bowl appearance in 16 years.

Now, coming off a winning season for just the second time in 14 years, the challenge is for the Spartans to become a consistent winner. SJSU hasn't had back-to-back winning seasons since the early 1990s.

The Spartans return 13 starters and a large group of young backups could push for larger roles in 2007. But finding replacements at wide receiver and safety this fall is crucial if the Spartans are going to be back in the bowl hunt—and filling those positions with juco transfers was a priority of the incoming recruiting class.

Offensively, SJSU had a top-20 rushing attack nationally in 2006 and it figures to be even stronger this year with an improving offensive line returning mostly intact and a deep group of tailbacks led by 5-foot-7 dynamo Yonus Davis, who rushed for 1,007 yards last season and averaged 6.2 yards per carry. But a key last season was a big-play passing game and the emergence of quarterback Adam Tafralis.

Tafralis blossomed into an efficient passer, setting a school record by completing 65.6 percent of his attempts and ranking 11th in the nation in efficiency. He threw 21 touchdowns and just seven interceptions. However, the Spartans must replace his top three receivers, who accounted for 18 of the team's TD catches and 78 percent of its receptions.

The Spartans' defense made huge strides last season, yielding 20.8 points per game after giving up more than 32 each time out in 2005. The unit has most of its key players back, including All-America cornerback Dwight Lowery, whose nine interceptions were tied for most in the nation.

#6 » NEVADA WOLF PACK

Nevada has played in a bowl game each of the past two seasons and won a share of the conference title in 2005. But the Wolf Pack heads into the fall as a work-in-progress.

A solid defense and favorable home schedule will keep the Wolf Pack competitive. But the key to another title run will be how well Nevada can reload the "Pistol" offense, which lost its quarterback, top running back and top receiver from last season's 8-5 squad. Only five starters are back on offense, three on the line.

Nick Graziano has the inside track to be the new triggerman in Coach Chris Ault's innovative variation of the shotgun formation. The sophomore was solid in the spring and during brief relief appearances last season, but could get pushed by redshirt freshman Colin Kaepernick this fall.

The receiving corps is experienced, led by Marko Mitchell and Mike McCoy, who combined for 63 receptions and 13 touchdowns in 2006.

Nevada has lost its leading rusher for the second year in a row, but the position again should be solid. Luke Lippincott, a junior, rushed for 456 yards and had a better per-carry average (4.9) and scored more touchdowns (9) than last season's top back, Robert Hubbard. Brandon Fragger also figures to be a factor coming off a freshman season cut short by injury.

The Wolf Pack's special teams unit took a major hit late in the spring when De'Angelo Wilson, one of the top punt returners in the country last season, was dismissed from the squad for violating an unspecified team policy. Brian Fludd, a juco transfer, turned heads in the spring at receiver and could figure in as the return man.

Nevada should again boast one of the top defensive squads in the WAC. Seven starters return to a unit that yielded 19.2 points per game, the second fewest in the conference.

Ruston » 2006 Record: 3-10 » WAC: 1-7

#7 » LOUISIANA TECH BULLDOGS

PRESEASON RANK

Nobody fell harder in the WAC last season than Louisiana Tech, prompting big changes in Ruston. Jack Bicknell III, after three winning records in eight seasons, is gone, replaced by Derek Dooley. The son of former University of Georgia coaching legend Vince Dooley implemented new systems on both sides of the ball and made clear that every job was up for grabs.

Looking to inspire his squad, Dooley called on former Tech greats Terry Bradshaw and Karl Malone to address the team during spring camp.

The biggest challenge is shoring up what was the worst defense in the country last season. The Bulldogs allowed an average of 41.7 points and 483.2 yards per game, the most among the 119 Division I-A teams. Ten starters and seven backups return from that unit, although Dooley's first recruiting class was heavy on junior-college transfers who could impact the depth chart immediately.

Getting into the backfield was a priority in spring camp. Not only did the Bulldogs allow the second-most rushing yards in the nation, but they ranked last with eight sacks. To that end, the staff rotated linemen, looking for players who could give pressure off the edge. The coaches were pleasantly surprised by redshirt-freshman defensive end Randy Grigsby, a Ruston native who turned heads and forced his way into a starting job.

New Offensive Coordinator Frank Scelfo, architect of the dynamic Tulane offenses earlier this decade led by current NFL quarterbacks J.P. Losman and Patrick Ramsey, inherits a unit that returns most of its key players and would have been fine last season if it could have held on to the ball. After committing just 18 turnovers in 2005, the Bulldogs lost the ball 37 times last season, which tied for most in the country.

When Coach Brent Guy arrived in Logan two seasons ago, he turned the program over to the kids. Now, after having 36 freshmen play during that stretch, the Aggies need a growth spurt.

Coming off a surprising three-win season in its WAC debut, Utah State took a huge step back last fall. Not only was it 1-11, but throw out a promising three-game midseason stretch against Fresno State (a 13-12 victory), San Jose State and Louisiana Tech, and the Aggies' average margin of defeat was almost 35 points.

But with 19 starters returning—including the entire defense—USU expects to be improved. Experience alone should benefit a defense that endured growing pains last season. The Aggies yielded at least 40 points seven times and were equally inept against the run and the pass. Opponents churned out nearly 2,300 rushing yards and picked apart the Aggie secondary for a conference-high 33 touchdowns.

The strength of the unit is at linebacker, headed by the WAC's 2006 Freshman of the Year, Paul Igboeli, and junior Jake Hutton, who missed most of his sophomore season because of injury. Defensive end Ben Calderwood was second-team All-WAC, but the Aggies need to put more pressure on opposing quarterbacks after collecting just 11 sacks last season.

Utah State will have a much different look on offense. After going through two offensive coordinators last year, former North Texas head coach Darrell Dickey was hired over the winter. He'll try to give an identity to a unit that scored the third-fewest points in the country last season (10.8 per game) and was shut out four times. There are big questions in the backfield. Leon Jackson will likely be USU's opening-day QB for the third season in a row, but he'll need to recapture his 2005 form to hold off juco transfer Sean Setzer.

The Robb Akey Era at Idaho might finally produce something that this once-proud program desperately needs—stability. Akey is Idaho's third coach in three seasons and replaces Dennis Erickson, whose highly anticipated second tour in Moscow lasted 10 months.

Akey, a former Washington State assistant, inherits a program that won four games for the first time since 2000, but also faded badly. The Vandals lost their last five games by a combined score of 217-56.

With 16 starters back (nine on defense), this isn't a complete overhaul. But Akey brought in new coordinators on both sides of the ball, so there will be a learning curve.

The offense could use a clean slate. Last season, the Vandals were shut out twice, averaged 16.9 points per game and scored fewer than two touchdowns in six contests.

Quarterback will be the biggest issue for the Vandals. With two-year starter Steve Wichman gone, redshirt freshman Nathan Enderle enters the fall with a tentative grip on the No. 1 job.

He won't have the luxury of throwing to experienced receivers. Max Komar, who caught 17 passes as a freshman, is the only returning wideout with at least 10 receptions in 2006.

However, the Vandals return four starters on the offensive line and should have a solid running game. Brian Flowers, a senior, and Jayson Bird, a junior, combined to rush for 1,067 yards and 11 touchdowns last season.

The defense has ground to make up after ranking 115th in scoring defense. There are pieces in place for the defense to hold its own in the offense-heavy WAC. Senior linebacker David Vobora led the conference in unassisted tackles and is on the Lombardi Award watch list. The secondary is led by senior Stanley Franks, who tied for the most interceptions in the nation last year.

Stellar defense may have Frogs hopping to BCS

By STEVE CARP
Las Vegas Review-Journal

Is it possible the Mountain West is poised to return to the Bowl Championship Series?

After Utah made it to the Fiesta Bowl three years ago and Boise State was in Arizona last year, maybe TCU's defense is good enough to carry the Horned Frogs to the BCS.

Gary Patterson has nine starters back from a team that allowed just 12.3 points a game. Only Virginia Tech (11.0) and Wisconsin (12.1) surrendered fewer. The Horned Frogs can run the ball effectively enough to control the clock and put up points.

Whether or not they get to the BCS may depend on a lot of factors, but this much is certain: TCU is the team to beat in the MWC. With BYU and Utah having to play unproven people at quarterback, it's hard to imagine anyone seriously challenging the Horned Frogs for the top spot.

But the Mountain West has bowl tie-ins with five games, which means that a team with minimal success can find itself playing in mid-to-late December.

For the Cougars and Utes, they figure to be in that middle-to-lower-tier bowl mix. Same for Wyoming and New Mexico, both of which boast offensive talent and should win enough to keep their seasons going beyond November.

BYU settled on sophomore Max Hall in the spring to replace all-everything quarterback John Beck. And while Hall hasn't taken a snap in three years, he was good enough in high school to sign with Arizona State. Assuming Hall can shake off the rust quickly, he should keep the Cougars in contention.

At Utah, junior Brian Johnson has recovered from the knee surgery in 2005 that forced him to redshirt last year. He is ready to take over for the departed Brett Ratliff. Johnson has a strong arm and good wheels and is a dual threat for the Utes.

Wyoming, which was picked to finish last in 2006 and wound up in the middle of the pack at 6-6 to tie for third, won't be at the bottom this year. Not with 44 lettermen back and the momentum of having won five of its last seven games. Coach Joe Glenn continues to do an excellent job of keeping the Cowboys competitive and, with seven starters back on offense, Wyoming should get back into the bowl picture.

Rocky Long has done a good job of getting New Mexico into bowl games, having guided the Lobos to four postseason appearances in the last five years. Now, the goal is to win one of those bowls. With Dave Baldwin having been brought on board to be the offensive coordinator, perhaps this is the year that happens. Baldwin had been a successful head coach at San Jose State and this is a veteran team with 20 starters back.

There's only one new head-coaching face this year, as Air Force hired Troy Calhoun to replace Fisher DeBerry, who spent 23 years at the Academy before retiring following last year's 4-8 campaign. Calhoun will replace the option offense, a longtime staple at Air Force, with a multiple look. That more conventional scheme should make the Falcons a little easier to prepare for.

San Diego State is hoping to move up in Chuck Long's second year as coach after injuries ravaged the Aztecs on both sides of the ball in 2006.

Colorado State is looking to bounce back from a dismal 4-8 campaign and a 1-7 conference mark that saw the Rams tie for eighth place. However, longtime Coach Sonny Lubick has nine starters each back on offense and defense and quarterback Caleb Hanie completed 61.1 percent of his passes last year. He's better than people think.

FOUR FEARLESS FORECASTS

1. Max Hall will be better than BYU fans think. The sophomore earned the starting QB job out of spring practice and, while he won't put up John Beck numbers, Hall will keep the Cougar offense moving. He was at Arizona State before transferring, so he's had plenty of time to prepare.

2. Good luck trying to score against the TCU defense. With nine starters back from a team that was second in the nation in rushing defense and surrendered just 12.3 points a game, the Horned Frogs are in prime position to finish atop the Mountain West standings.

3. As quickly as Troy Calhoun would like to improve Air Force in the standings, the first-year coach may find it slow going thanks to an early-season schedule that includes games at Utah, at home against TCU, at BYU and at Navy. Also, the Falcons don't have a bye this year, compounding Calhoun's problems in his attempt to turn things around.

4. Mike Sanford's future at UNLV may be tied at the hip of talented but oft-injured quarterback Rocky Hinds. Sanford is under some heat to turn things around after going 4-19 in his first two years. Hinds has run hot-and-cold when he's managed to stay on the field with his wobbly knees. If the Rebels can't make progress, the haters will be out in force, especially given the basketball team's turnaround under Lon Kruger and run to the Sweet 16.

Poinsettias nice, but loaded Frogs seek better bowl trip

Momentum and motivation won't be an issue for the Horned Frogs this year. Not after finishing 2006 with eight straight wins and not after coming up short in their quest to win the Mountain West title.

TCU went 6-2, which was good enough for second place. But that's not good enough for Coach Gary Patterson. The two losses, which came back-to-back to BYU and Utah in late September and early October, prevented TCU from even thinking about a BCS bowl game.

Instead, the Horned Frogs whipped up on Northern Illinois 37-7 in the Poinsettia Bowl.

However, with nine defensive starters back from a team that allowed just 12.3 points and 60.8 rushing yards a game, TCU is going to be in just about every game it plays. Which means whoever replaces Jeff Ballard at quarterback will have some of the pressure lifted from his shoulders.

With defensive ends Tommy Blake and Chase Ortiz and tackle James Vess as the anchors of the defensive line returning, TCU is formidable up front. Blake, a two-time first-team All-Mountain West selection, led the league in tackles for loss last year with 16.5 and led the league in sacks with seven. Ortiz had 11 tackles for loss and is the perfect complement to Blake. Teams can't double both of them. Nor can they forget about Vess, who started the final eight games at defensive tackle. He was a two-time MWC Defensive Player of the Week last season.

Their play makes life easier for the linebackers and secondary. But Jason Phillips, a two-time all-conference linebacker, has started 25 games in the middle and is the team's leading tackler with 73 stops. David Hawthorne doesn't get as much attention as some of his teammates, but the senior linebacker is solid and had 43 tackles, including six for losses. Junior Robert Henson has also been a force, coming off the bench to lend support, and he has been an honorable mention all-league pick his first two years.

Because opposing quarterbacks struggle to avoid the pressure from TCU's front eight, the Frogs' three-safety alignment gets to play in more of a support role than most groups. Brian Bonner and David Roach are back at two of those spots, while Steven Coleman, Stephen Hodge and Corderra Hunter will be competing for the chance to replace all-league safety Marvin White.

But when it comes to replacements, it's about who will take Ballard's place. Will it be sophomore Marcus Jackson, who has some experience and helped TCU beat Baylor last year? Or will it be redshirt freshman Andy Dalton, who was a big-time player in high school but has never taken a snap at this level?

Whoever gets the job will spend a lot of his time handing the ball off to Aaron Brown, the junior tailback who rushed for 801 yards, scored nine touchdowns and also had 34 receptions for 455 yards last season. His all-purpose game will not only aid whoever is the quarterback, it'll help chew minutes off the clock and keep TCU's defense on the sideline.

Of course, opposing teams will try to keep Brown in check. That could open up the passing game for Donald Massey, who had three touchdown catches in last year's 52-0 rout of San Diego State and 25 total receptions in 2006. Ervin Dickerson and Walter Bryant combined for 22 catches a year ago as reserves. That wideout group, along with tight ends Shae Reagan and Quinton Cunigan, should provide whoever is taking the snaps with enough good targets when Brown is shadowed too closely.

TCU has six offensive starters back, three on the line. Guard Matty Lindner, center Blake Schlueter and tackle Wade Sisk were part of a unit that allowed just 15 sacks a year ago. They'll be leaned on heavily to protect the new quarterback.

THE NEXT BIG THING

Converted QB has a chance to start at TE and, at 6-4 and 261 pounds, the junior should be an inviting target for whoever replaces Jeff Ballard at QB.

Despite recent bowl wins, Ute Nation getting restless

In his two years as coach, Kyle Whittingham has gone to two bowl games and won them both.

So why are so many Utah fans down on him?

Apparently, the 10 losses he has accrued, which include a pair to archrival Brigham Young, have not sat well with the Ute Nation.

But perhaps this is the year Whittingham can make everyone happy. Despite a tough non-conference schedule that includes road games with Oregon State and Louisville and a home contest against UCLA, Utah has 17 starters returning from last year's 8-5 Armed Forces Bowl championship team, 10 of them on offense.

If Utah can go 3-1 in non-conference play (Utah State is the fourth non-league team on the schedule) and get off to a fast start in the Mountain West when it hosts Air Force in the Sept. 8 league opener, it could give the team a huge confidence boost as well as momentum for the challenges that lie ahead at TCU and BYU.

But here's the big question: Can Brian Johnson regain the form that made him one of the league's top quarterbacks in 2005? Johnson sat out last season after undergoing knee surgery, but he looked good in spring drills and Whittingham is ready to hand him back the keys to the offense before it runs out of gas.

Johnson threw for 2,892 yards and 18 touchdowns as a sophomore and completed 63.6 percent of his passes. He also can beat you with his legs, having rushed for 478 yards in 2005. If he gets his timing and confidence back, Johnson can take Utah a long way.

There are plenty of weapons for Johnson to work with. The top six receivers from last year are back, including Derrek Richards and Brent Casteel. Richards had 60 catches and six touchdowns last year, while Casteel hauled in 39 passes for 600 yards and 10 TDs. Brian Hernandez had 47 receptions last year, second to Richards, and Marquis Wilson has the speed to get separation. Freddie Brown, a 6-3 junior, will be a nice secondary target underneath if the flanks are covered.

Utah's big concern is at running back. Darryl Poston was the team's leading rusher in 2006 and he averaged less than four yards a carry. There's no true breakaway threat in the backfield.

It also means Utah's offensive line will need to focus more on pass protection than run blocking.

Right guard Robert Conley and right tackle Jason Boone were honorable mention all-conference in 2006 and will be the anchors for a line that includes rising sophomore star Zane Beadles and senior Kyle Gunther. If Jeremy Inferrera can replace all-conference tackle Tavo Tupola, the Utes should be in good shape. This is a huge line in terms of size. Utah's front five averages 6-4 and 306 pounds.

The Utes scored just under 28 points per game last year. If they can match that output and keep their defense off the field, they figure to be in most of their games. Their 4-3 defense did a good job against the run in 2006, allowing just 106 yards a game. But the secondary got torched and allowed 215 yards through the air—even with all-conference safety Eric Weddle in the mix.

Middle linebacker Joe Jianonni is the lone all-conference defensive player returning, so his teammates will look to the 6-foot senior for leadership.

In Louie Sakoda, Utah has the Mountain West's co-Special Teams Player of the Year returning. The junior punter/placekicker has averaged 42.5 yards during his first two years at Utah and has booted 15 punts of 50 or more yards. He added placekicking duties last season and was the MVP of the Armed Forces Bowl after making all four of his field-goal attempts and averaging 47.3 yards for three punts.

THE NEXT BIG THING

» JOE DALE, SS

The Utes are overhauling their secondary after losing three starters to graduation. Dale, a 5-11 sophomore, could replace Casey Evans at strong safety. In nine games as a freshman, he registered six tackles.

RATING THE RECRUITS

Bronco driving Cougars to excel, and things shouldn't slow much in '07

For BYU's loyal but demanding fans, this was more like it—a conference championship, an undefeated league season and a convincing bowl victory over the Pac-10.

So, Bronco Mendenhall, what do you do for an encore?

You start by lowering expectations, hard as that may be. Your star quarterback is in the NFL, as the Miami Dolphins took John Beck in the second round of April's draft. You only have 13 starters returning and your team has a bigger-than-usual target on its back because of last year's success that saw the Cougars go 11-2 overall, 8-0 in the Mountain West and thoroughly dismantle Oregon 38-8 in the Las Vegas Bowl.

At BYU, it always seems to be about the QB, so when Mendenhall announced at the end of spring drills that sophomore Max Hall had won the job over junior Cade Cooper, more than one eyebrow was raised throughout Provo. But Hall is not your ordinary sophomore. The 6-1 gunslinger originally signed to play at Arizona State and redshirted his freshman year in 2004 before transferring to BYU and going on his church mission in 2005. He has a strong arm and a pretty good pedigree—his uncle is former Dallas Cowboys QB Danny White.

The challenge Hall faces is that the last football game he played that counted at any level was 2003, when he was a senior in high school. It will be four years between snaps when he finally takes the ball Sept. 1 against Arizona. Can he shake off the accumulated rust? Can he use his age (21 when the season starts) to speed up the maturation process?

Beck isn't the only star BYU has to replace. All-league tight end Jonny Harline and running back Curtis Brown were responsible for 2,799 all-purpose yards in 2006 and, when you include Beck's 3,877 yards of total offense, that's a lot of making up to do.

Manase Tonga and Wayne Latu will be thrown into the fire right away, and Matt Allen, a 6-foot junior, returns as BYU's most experienced receiver, recording 27 catches and three touchdowns a year ago.

There's some experience up front to help protect Hall and give him time so he and his receivers can get on the same page. Center Sete Aulai may be the most important person on the field when BYU has the ball. The 297-pound senior was a second-team all-conference selection last year and his experience and leadership will be critical to the offense's success.

Guards Ray Feigna and Travis Bright are 322 and 314 pounds, respectively. They also have good quickness to go along with their size, which should help Offensive Coordinator Robert Anae come up with a few creative options for Hall.

Defensively, the Cougars want to build on their impressive Las Vegas Bowl showing that saw them shut down Oregon's high-powered offense. Brigham Young was second to TCU in the conference for scoring defense in 2006, as the Cougars allowed just 14.7 points a game. And while BYU didn't have any single dominating player, the Cougars were an impressive unit collectively.

Seven returning starters, led by inside linebackers Kelly Poppinga and Shawn Doman, will make a lot of plays, as will outside men David Nixon and Bryan Kehl.

Mendenhall switched from a 3-3-5 to a 3-4 last season to take advantage of his depth at linebacker, and look for more of the same in 2007. Backing up the linebackers are safeties Quinn Gooch and Dustin Gabriel. Gooch was a second team All-Mountain West honoree and led all defensive backs with 68 tackles. Gabriel had 37 tackles and an interception return for a touchdown in BYU's 47-17 win over San Diego State.

THE NEXT BIG THING

» AUSTIN COLLIE, WR

It seems like a long time ago that Collie was the MWC's Freshman of the Year after catching 8 TD passes in 2004. But he's back after a church mission and could be a favorite target.

#4 » WYOMING COWBOYS

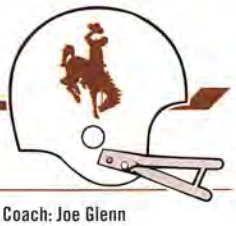
PRESEASON RANK



Joe Glenn continues to prove the doubters wrong.

Picked to finish last in 2006, the Cowboys tied for third with Utah at 5-3 and went 6-6 overall while playing a very tough non-conference schedule that included Boise State, Virginia and Syracuse. In fact, Wyoming was 1-4 after that opening stretch that saw it lose in overtime to the Cavaliers and the Orange.

But after going 5-2 the rest of the way to finish .500, Glenn and his program are ready to take the next step and return to the postseason and play in a bowl game.

"It's time for us to take another step forward," Glenn says. "We made progress last year, but we're setting our sights higher this year."

Unlike last season, there's experience at quarterback, as sophomore Karsten Sween is evolving into a pretty good player. Also, with Wyoming's top two running backs returning and four of the team's top five receivers back, Glenn should be able to open up the offense a little more.

Junior running back Wynel Seldon was seventh in the league in rushing last year and senior receiver Hoost Marsh had 23 receptions and three touchdowns. Junior center Tim Bond and junior tackle Kyle Howard will oversee the protection for Sween, who averaged 145 yards a game through the air his freshman season.

Defensively, Wyoming has an athletic secondary and talent at linebacker. All-conference performer Ward Dobbs led the team with 69 tackles from his inside-linebacker position and fellow linebackers Sean Claffey and Luke Chase give the Cowboys dependable people in those spots. Quincy Rogers had four pass breakups at safety last year and, along with senior cornerbacks Julius Stinson and Michael Medina, Wyoming has a nice core of physical, athletic defensive backs.

#5 » NEW MEXICO LOBOS

PRESEASON RANK

There was a time, not that long ago, when using the words "bowl game" with New Mexico in the same sentence would create puzzled looks. But since Rocky Long came to Albuquerque as coach in 1997, the program has experienced the postseason four times.

The fans are appreciative of Long's efforts, given the team had gone to exactly two bowl games from 1965 to 1999. However, they have one small request of their coach: "Hey, could you maybe win one of those bowl games?"

A 6-7 season was marred by a 20-12 loss to San Jose State in the inaugural New Mexico Bowl, giving Long an 0-4 mark in postseason with the Lobos. But with 18 returning starters, 10 on defense, perhaps this is the year New Mexico ends a season on a positive note.

With veteran linebackers Cody Kase, Major Mosley and George Carter back along with defensive ends Michael Tuohy and Tyler Donaldson, plus the entire secondary of safeties Tyson Ditmore and OJ Swift and corners Glover Quin and DeAndre Wright, the Lobos have more experience than anyone in the league on defense.

They'll need to impose their will on opposing offenses and try and give sophomore quarterback Donovan Porterie and his mates good field position to make something happen. Porterie's job is to get the ball to standout wide receiver Travis Brown and let him do his thing. The 6-3 senior was a first-team all-conference selection in 2006 after having a breakout season with 64 receptions for 867 yards and four touchdowns.

And if Brown is covered, Porterie will give the ball to junior tailback Rodney Ferguson, another first-team, All-Mountain West pick. Ferguson also had a big-time year, carrying the ball 252 times for 1,234 yards. He scored seven touchdowns and averaged 4.9 yards a carry.

Last place is not somewhere Sonny Lubick is used to being, but seven straight losses to end the season earned the Rams a share of the cellar with UNLV at 1-7. In fact, Lubick, who is preparing for his 15th season at CSU, has not had a winning record in four years and hasn't won the conference title since 2002.

First place may not be realistic for Colorado State at the moment. But the Rams should be better than last year's 4-8. First, last season's youngsters gained some valuable experience and, with 20 starters returning, Lubick has the most experience at his disposal since he took over the program in 1993.

Senior quarterback Caleb Hanie threw for 2,427 yards last year, but he was also intercepted 12 times and had only 11 touchdowns. Those numbers have to change.

Perhaps if running back Kyle Bell returns to his 2005 form, that will take some of the pressure off Hanie. Bell rushed for 1,288 yards and scored 10 touchdowns two years ago. He redshirted last year after undergoing knee surgery. But he is ready to go and that's a good sign.

Colorado State didn't have a single all-conference player on defense. That's not a good sign. But maybe junior free safety Klint Kubiak, the team's leading tackler a year ago with 90, and senior cornerback Darryl Williams, who had three interceptions, will help change that.

In that seven-game losing streak to conclude 2006, Colorado State allowed 27 points and a whopping 397.3 yards per game.

Another bad sign: Jimmie Kaylor had to punt 65 times last year and was third in the Mountain West with a 43.7-yard average. If he can stay off the field a little more, that can only help the Rams' cause.

After 23 years of Fisher DeBerry's option offense and sometimes-bizarre quotes, it was time for a change at the Air Force Academy. Of course, a 4-8 overall record, 3-5 league mark and a four-game losing streak to end the season help facilitate such moves.

Now it is Troy Calhoun's time.

The 1989 alumnus has been coaching in the NFL the last four years. Now, Calhoun will attempt to retool the long-standing triple-option scheme with a multiple look. It won't be easy, even though the Falcons have an experienced quarterback in Shaun Carney. At only 5-10, it's hard to imagine Calhoun turning Carney into a pocket passer who sits there, reads the defense and lets it fly. The guess is Air Force will likely continue to run the ball more than it throws, which means a healthy dose of seniors Chad Hall (784 yards rushing, 5 TDs) and Ryan Williams (442, 4).

How will Air Force's smallish offensive line fare at the point of attack in this new scheme, especially against conference foes TCU, BYU and Utah, all of which have big, big guys up front?

The transition from DeBerry to Calhoun should be a relatively smooth one from the perspective that coaching at a military academy is different than a regular school when it comes to running a program. Calhoun attended the Academy, so if there are any hurdles to getting things done, it won't faze him.

What may affect him is how tough it will be to play conventional football with guys who will be smaller than their opponents every time they line up for a conference game. Guys in the Mountain West may not be as big as the Denver Broncos or Houston Texans, where Calhoun had previously coached, but they're certainly bigger than the flyboys he'll be coaching in Colorado Springs.

#8 SAN DIEGO STATE AZTECS

PRESEASON RANK

For a while, it appeared Chuck Long's inaugural season as coach of the Aztecs would be a total loss.

The Aztecs were 0-5 to begin 2006 and there were fears they would go winless. But they defeated Air Force to get some much-needed confidence, beat UNLV in the second week of November and finished the year with a 17-6 win over Colorado State.

Now, 3-9 wasn't what Long envisioned when he took the job, but at 3-5 in the conference, the Aztecs avoided the cellar, finishing seventh.

Coaches talk about wanting to take that next step. But that means knowing how to walk first. San Diego State is still in its crawling stage as Long prepares for Year Two.

He does have some talent to work with. Sophomore running back Atiyyah Henderson averaged 4.4 yards per carry as a freshman and was the team's Offensive Player of the Year. At 6-6 and 335 pounds, senior guard Brandyn Dombrowski is one of the league's biggest players. Linebacker Russell Allen can make plays and is one of the more physical guys in the MWC.

But there's a lot of work to do. Long kept his staff together and that continuity can only help. The team was ravaged by injuries a year ago. If quarterback Kevin O'Connell is over the thumb injury that sidelined him a year ago, he's a significant upgrade over Kevin Craft, who had to learn on the fly.

The Aztecs also lost three games by a total of 12 points. Win two of those games this year and you'll have progress.

The defense surrendered 325 points for the second straight season. If Long intends to move the program forward, those numbers must come down dramatically.

Don't underestimate the change in karma. San Diego State is switching sidelines at Qualcomm Stadium this year to get closer to the press box where the coaches hang out.

#9 UNLV REBELS

PRESEASON RANK

Welcome to the hot seat, Mike Sanford.

After boasting at his introductory press conference two years ago that his team would compete for the championship and go bowling, Sanford has won a grand total of four games in his two years with the Rebels.

For those who still care, that's not sitting well. Many UNLV fans have jumped on Lon Kruger's basketball bandwagon after the Runnin' Rebels went to the Sweet 16 of the NCAA Tournament in March.

The only thing worse than anger is apathy, so unless Sanford and his guys turn things around quickly, Sam Boyd Stadium will have a lot of folks disguised as empty seats.

Yes, UNLV appears to have recruited well and some of those newcomers may have to step in right away. But the Rebels' fortunes will likely hinge on two star players who were beset by injuries last season.

On offense, quarterback Rocky Hinds simply can't stay healthy. He had yet another knee surgery in the offseason and was held out of spring practice. The one-time USC recruit started and finished 2006 in spectacular fashion, throwing for 322 yards in the Rebels' season-opening win over Idaho State, then concluding the year with a 351-yard performance in UNLV's 42-39 win over Air Force.

Beau Bell was on the way to a big year when he sprained his ankle at BYU and never played again. The senior is a game-changer at linebacker and, if he can return to his sophomore-season form, he could help reduce the number of yards and points the Rebels have been surrendering. UNLV was last in scoring defense last year (31.8 ppg) in the MWC.

MID-AMERICAN CONFERENCE

FOUR FEARLESS FORECASTS

1. Ohio tailback Kalvin McRae will get the attention he deserves this season. How many people have heard of the running back who enters the 2007 season as the third-leading active rusher in Division I-A football?

2. The MAC plays a number of games against BCS opponents on Sept. 1. On the docket that day is Central Michigan at Kansas, while Northern Illinois takes on Iowa at Soldier Field, Toledo plays host to Purdue and Bowling Green is at Minnesota. Look for the MAC to win at least two of those contests.

3. Temple will probably break the MAC record for largest home attendance when it plays host to Penn State at Lincoln Financial Field Nov. 10. And that won't be the only league record the Owls break this season.

4. The MAC's return to a system using inter-division records will result in a controversial champion. While a team may win more "MAC" games, victories against the teams in the other division won't matter much—until one squad loses a division title despite a better record in conference contests.

Sensational young quarterbacks shaking up MAC in a big way

By JOHN WAGNER
The (Toledo) Blade

"Fair is foul, and foul is fair."—MacBeth, Act 1, Scene I.

Never thought you'd read a little Shakespeare in a football preview, did you?

Well, quoting the Bard when discussing college football is only a mild surprise compared to all the unlikely events that unfolded around the MAC football scene last year.

Central Michigan won its first league title since 1994. Really? Ohio almost grabbed its first crown since 1968. Who saw that coming? And Kent State led the East Division much of the season, nearly earning its first football title since 1972. Huh?

And talk about topsy-turvy: both Toledo and Miami suffered its first losing year in the MAC since 1993. What's more, the Redhawks' 10-loss season was just their second since the program began in 1888.

The prime reason for the shakeup was the development of young quarterbacks around the league. And we do mean young: the top of the passing charts featured a sophomore in Julian Edelman of Kent State as well as two freshmen in Dan LeFevour of Central Michigan, the MAC Freshman of the Year, and Ball State's Nate Davis.

One change is certain this season: the league will choose its two champions based on victories within the division. That format became a must when the MAC added Temple this fall, giving it an unbalanced number of teams.

But the influx of talented newcomers last season is a clear signal that more changes may be in store for the league this year.

Perennial powers such as Toledo, Miami and Bowling Green may reassert themselves and move back to the top of the standings, to be sure. But those teams could continue struggling, and some other program may assert itself.

Does that mean conference newcomer Temple might contend for a title in its first season? Certainly.

Can Eastern Michigan vault out of the West Division basement? No reason not to think so.

And is there a chance Buffalo wins more than two league games for the first time since joining the conference? Why not?

After all, we found a way to incorporate Shakespeare in a football preview, didn't we?

RECRUITING ROUNDUP

2. AKRON ▸ Nine Pennsylvania recruits are key to this class.
3. TOLEDO ▸ Fourteen of Toledo's 20 signees are listed at offensive positions.
4. BALL STATE ▸ The 5-8 Frank Edmonds may have an immediate impact at running back.
5. TEMPLE ▸ Seven of the Owls' 29 recruits enrolled in the winter.
6. KENT STATE ▸ Five wide receivers/tight ends signed to offer options for QB Julian Edelman.
7. WESTERN MICHIGAN ▸ Eleven players from Florida—and only one from Michigan.
8. EASTERN MICHIGAN ▸ The Eagles, meanwhile, signed 13 from their home state.
9. BOWLING GREEN ▸ Linebacker Mark Wooldridge and running back Eric Ransom may play quickly.
10. OHIO ▸ Ten states, including Nebraska, are represented.

Let's be Frank: Solich has made Bobcats fearsome

Perhaps it takes a little perspective to appreciate Frank Solich. The former Nebraska fullback spent 15 years as an assistant at his alma mater before taking over as head coach in 1998. In six years, Solich led the Cornhuskers to a 58-19 record and .753 winning percentage, five bowl bids and two Big 12 Coach-of-the-Year awards.

Was that good enough for the 'Husker faithful? Apparently not, since they sent him packing after a 9-3 season in 2003.

Except for a nice run under current Wake Forest Coach Jim Grobe in the late 1990s, the Bobcats football program had wallowed near the bottom of the MAC for the better part of 40 years. In the four years before Solich arrived in Athens, the Bobcats were 8-24 in MAC games.

Ohio quickly responded to Solich's leadership, posting a 4-7 record in his first season before rocketing to the top of the East Division last year. The Bobcats were 9-3 during the regular season and won the division title, the program's first championship of any sort since 1968, with a 7-1 mark.

While Ohio lost in the MAC Championship Game, the Bobcats still earned a berth to the GMAC Bowl, just the third postseason bid in the program's long history.

Can Ohio continue the successes it enjoyed last season? It would be hard to bet against Solich and his program.

One reason is the system the veteran coach has installed at Ohio. The Bobcats win with a defense that combines pressure with toughness, an offense that enjoys grinding out long drives with mistake-free precision and special teams that produce big plays and limit what opponents can do.

A second reason not to bet against the Bobcats is the return of significant starters on both sides of the ball. While the defense will lose three all-conference performers in linebackers Matt Muncy and Tyler Russ along with cornerback T.J. Wright, six starters return to key a stout unit that allowed just 18.1 points per game, fewest in the MAC.

The line is anchored by senior Landon Cohen and junior Jameson Hartke. Both received second-team all-league honors last season.

The defensive backfield also has experience returning thanks to junior corner Mark Parson, senior free safety Todd Koenig and junior strong safety Michael Mitchell. The biggest question for the defense is at linebacker, where Muncy, Russ and Michael Graham are gone after making more than 700 tackles in a combined 90 starts over their careers.

The offense also took a hit from graduation as it lost six starters, including All-MAC offensive tackle Matt Coppage. While there isn't much depth back on the line—Coppage was one of only six linemen to play more than 200 snaps—there is plenty of experience returning.

Senior right guard Matt Miller, who started all 14 games last season and has 30 starts in his career, will anchor this unit. Senior David Shelby also started all 14 games at right tackle, while senior Paul Johnson and junior Mike Eynon have experience at the guard positions.

This group will be making holes for one of the best running backs in the conference as two-time All-MAC performer Kalvin McRae returns. Last season, McRae rumbled for 1,252 yards and 15 touchdowns, giving him 2,964 career yards.

Who will hand the ball to McRae, though? With the graduation of Austen Everson, the logical choice seemed to be Brad Bower, a senior transfer from Illinois who saw action when Everson was hurt late last season. But Theo Scott, a sophomore juco transfer who originally redshirted at California in 2005, is expected to challenge for that job.

THE NEXT BIG THING

TAJ HENLEY, LB

Henley has spent the past two seasons champing at the bit to earn regular playing time. MAC offenses will feel his frustration this fall.

MIAMI REDHAWKS

#2 PRESEASON RANK

2006 Record: 2-10 » MAC: 2-6

Was last season's 2-10 disaster a one-year aberration or the first in the decline of one of the league's most successful programs?

The answer probably is the former, not the latter. The RedHawks were decimated by injuries, which limited former 2005 second-team All-MAC running back Brandon Murphy to eight games, took away two starters from the offensive line and crippled a young defense that was trying to replace nine starters from 2005.

Quarterback Mike Kokal (219.1 passing yards a game) should benefit from the return of Murphy, who gained more than 1,100 yards in 2005 but was limited by ankle problems last year. But Kokal also lost a number of his targets from last season, meaning young receivers such as Dustin Woods will need to step forward.

Murphy should benefit from the return of fourth-year starter Charlie Norden at left tackle. Norden played in only four games because of a foot injury. He and Steve Meister, who will move from left guard to center, will anchor an offensive line that looks to cut down on the league-worst 49 sacks it allowed.

The defense should benefit from the return of linebackers Joey Hudson and Clayton Mullins. Last season, Hudson earned All-MAC second-team honors after recording a team-high 97 tackles and intercepting five passes, while Mullins ranked second on the RedHawks with 91 stops.

AKRON ZIPS

#3 PRESEASON RANK

2006 Record: 5-7 » MAC: 3-5

The Zips earned the mantle of MAC champs with a good finish to the 2005 season, but they certainly didn't wear the crown well last fall.

Akron claimed a fine non-conference victory at North Carolina State last year, but the team then lost three of its first four league games and never did fully recover.

Returning to the top of the mountain will be a tough climb for the Zips, who lost quarterback Luke Getsy and four of the team's starting offensive linemen. Left-hander Carlton Jackson, a sophomore, is the frontrunner to replace Getsy, while junior Chris Kemme, a second-team All-MAC tackle last season, will anchor the line.

Last year Akron hit a pair of home runs in substituting for departed skill players. Junior Dennis Kennedy replaced Brett Biggs and became a second-team All-MAC running back thanks to his 914 rushing yards, while sophomore David Harvey helped fill the shoes of receivers Domenik Hixon and Jason Montgomery to earn All-MAC second-team honors, thanks to an average of 21.3 yards per catch and 10 touchdown receptions.

But it's the Akron defense that needs to step forward if the Zips expect to challenge for another league title. Kevin Grant and Brion Stokes ranked second and third, respectively, on the team in tackles last season and key a deep, talented linebacking corps. The secondary is even more talented and led by senior rover John Mackey.

TEMPLE OWLS

2006 Record: 1-11 » MAC: 0-0

The Owls face perhaps the most important season in the program's history.

This fall, Temple will look to erase the sting of its removal from the Big East after the 2004 season by making waves during the team's first year in the MAC.

And a splash certainly is possible, even though the Owls have won only one game in the past two seasons. They return a number of starters on both sides of the ball, but the roster includes only two scholarship seniors.

The biggest question on offense is at quarterback, where redshirt junior Adam DiMichele and sophomore Vaughn Charlton will battle for the starter's role. There also is uncertainty at tailback, where the lone returnee with game experience is Jason Harper.

The winners of those skirmishes will benefit from working behind an experienced offensive line led by redshirt junior center Alex Derenthal, the team's MVP as a sophomore, and redshirt sophomore left tackle Devin Tyler.

Whoever wins the quarterback battle will throw to a veteran corps of receivers featuring Bruce Francis (team-leading 32 catches), and Travis Shelton, who also ranks among the top kick returners in the country.

The defense also returns seven starters as it switches to a 4-3 alignment. The move plays to the unit's strength, as the line returns seven experienced players.

KENT STATE GOLDEN FLASHES

2006 Record: 6-6 » MAC: 5-3

For a brief, heady moment last season, the Golden Flashes seemed on the verge of snapping out of their lower-division malaise of years past.

After starting the season 5-2, Kent State lost a critical home contest against Ohio and imploded the next game, losing by 27 points at Buffalo, ruining a promising season.

Now, the question is, can Kent State recapture that early-season momentum from 2006 and build on it to compete for a title?

Some of the building blocks already are in place. Junior quarterback Julian Edelman gave the offense a multi-talented threat by running for 658 yards and seven touchdowns in 2006 while throwing for 1,859 yards and 10 more scores to earn second-team All-MAC honors.

Redshirt sophomore Eugene Jarvis also returns after rushing for 798 yards in his first season, giving the Flashes one of the top ground attacks in the MAC. Kent State will probably need a strong running game early this season as a young corps of receivers looks to replace departed all-leaguer Najah Pruden.

But the bigger concern is how Kent State will replace the missing parts of a defense that ranked among the best in the conference. Defensive backs Usama Young and Andre Kirkland joined defensive lineman Daniel Muir in signing with NFL teams after last season.

Kevin Hogan will lead the 2007 defensive line. Jack Williams, who led the MAC in fumbles forced (5), is the top returnee in the secondary.

2006 Record: 4-8 » MAC: 3-5

At first glance, it's hard to understand why the Falcons finished 4-8 last season. Bowling Green's offense proved capable of moving the ball, and the defense seemed able to stop opponents as both units finished in the upper half of the MAC statistics. And even though there was youth on both sides of the ball, there also clearly was talent.

But the team's biggest problems weren't on offense or defense. In fact, the Falcons' special teams struggled so much last season, the offense and defense often found itself in holes neither unit could overcome.

Bowling Green made just 4-of-9 field goals and missed three extra points. The punting game ranked last in the MAC and failed to net even 30 yards per kick, while Falcon return men ranked next-to-last in the league for yards per return.

The Falcons brought in junior-college transfers Nick Iovinelli and Sinisa Vrvillo to hopefully solve the problems in the punting and kicking games, respectively.

The defense should be better this fall. The line will be anchored by Diyral Briggs, who finished with 69 tackles and seven sacks last year, while linebacker Erique Dozier is back as the returning team leader in tackles (98), including nine for loss.

There is experience in the backfield thanks to cornerbacks Antonio Smith, a three-year starter, and Kenny Lewis, who made 70 tackles last season.

The strength of the offense will be a line led by three-time All-MAC performer Kory Lichtensteiger.

2006 Record: 2-10 MAC: 1-7

If former Nebraska star Turner Gill didn't know the scope of the rebuilding project by becoming the new Buffalo coach, he learned fairly quickly.

Things seemed to be looking up when the Bulls won their opener over Temple. While the team was victorious just once more in 2006, there are signs that this program, which has posted a miserable 8-56 record in the conference over the past eight seasons, is finally moving forward.

One is the return of 56 letterwinners from a year ago, including 17 starters. Another was the promise shown by athletes such as Naaman Roosevelt, James Starks, Trevor Scott and Kareem Byrom.

Gill had no qualms with throwing Roosevelt, a true freshman last season, onto the field and all the youngster did was respond with 31 receptions while also ranking among the top kick-returners in the MAC.

Starks, a quarterback in high school, excelled in a move to running back by rushing for 704 yards and six touchdowns to earn All-MAC second-team honors.

Scott shifted from tight end to defensive end and quickly became a standout, recording 45 tackles and a school-record nine sacks.

And Byrom, a safety who finished third on the team with 88 tackles last year, proved his versatility by moving to linebacker when injuries struck.

Quarterback Drew Willy will have to hold off a challenge by Roosevelt, who switched to QB during spring.

High-octane offense led by sensational soph Dan LeFevour should drive Chippewas far

Rookies ruled the MAC last season, and nowhere was that more apparent than with the success of the Chippewas.

Dan LeFevour earned the conference's Freshman-of-the-Year honor after setting school records for passing yards (3,031), touchdown passes (26) and total offense (3,552 yards).

One of his favorite targets was another freshman, Bryan Anderson, who joined LeFevour on the All-MAC first team after catching a school-record 73 passes for 867 yards and five touchdowns.

And the defense benefited from strong play from freshmen such as linemen Larry Knight and Frank Zombo, as well as Calvin Hissong at free safety and cornerbacks Josh Gordy and Chaz West.

But the Chippewas are going to need at least one new "freshman" to step up if they hope to repeat as MAC champions and defend the program's first league title since 1994.

That newcomer is Coach Butch Jones, who replaced Brian Kelly after he took over at Cincinnati following last season's title run.

Jones is no stranger to the program, having served as an assistant at CMU from 1998-2004. The Michigan native spent the past two seasons at West Virginia, so he's familiar with the uptempo offensive style the Chippewas favor.

Jones will have plenty of weapons on offense thanks to the return of LeFevour, who was intercepted just 10 times in 14 games and also ran for 521 yards and seven scores.

Two of LeFevour's top receivers, Damien Linson and Obed Cétoute, were lost to graduation. But Anderson is a top-flight target, as is senior Justin Gardner, who caught 36 passes for 471 yards. And the position has depth thanks to senior Jemmy Jasmin, junior Darren Martin and redshirt freshman Kito Poblah.

The running game features junior Ontario Sneed, who last season ran for 764 yards and four touchdowns. Sneed, who also caught 52 passes for 415 yards and seven more scores, will receive a challenge from junior Justin Hoskins, a transfer from Notre Dame, and Marcel Archer, a sophomore who ran for seven touchdowns.

The biggest offensive questions are on the line, where the losses included all-league tackle Joe Staley and center Drew Mormino. Senior Eric Tunney, another All-MAC pick last year, will start at guard while juniors Andrew Hartline and Mike Decker are probable starters at tackle and center, respectively.

Junior Greg Wojt is the front-runner to fill the tackle position opposite Hartline, while the competition for the other opening on the line should include senior Michael Raffaelli, junior Andrew Cribbs and sophomore Adam Antonides.

Like the offense, the defensive unit returns seven starters and must find replacements along the line. Three-time All-MAC pick Daniel Bazuin and Mike Ogle both were lost to graduation, which means tackles Steven Friend, a senior, and juniors Ronnie Ekdahl and Casey Droscha must step forward. Last season Friend recorded career highs in tackles for loss (10) and sacks (five).

Knight and Zombo are expected to start at the end positions. Knight made 26 tackles in 2006, including three for loss, while Zombo added 23 stops, three for negative yardage.

The linebacking corps will be the strength of the unit thanks to the return of Red Keith and Ike Brown. Keith earned first-team All-MAC honors last season after making 127 tackles to lead the team for the third straight year. Brown was a second-team All-MAC choice two years ago, but his 2006 season was cut short by a knee injury during the Michigan game.

#2 » WESTERN MICHIGAN BRONCOS

PRESEASON RANK

Is the glass half-empty or half-full for Broncos football?

Positive people would bring up the program's eight-win season last year, not to mention its first bowl berth in 18 seasons, as encouraging signs. Negative nabobs will remember that the eight victories didn't result in a league title or even a division crown.

But many signs point to another banner year ahead. For example, while the Broncos lost quarterback Ryan Cubit to graduation, they have good options to replace him in Thomas Peregrin, who started in two wins last season, and Tim Hiller, the 2005 MAC Freshman of the Year who is coming back from a knee injury.

The winner of that competition will have plenty of options to throw to, the best being All-MAC tight end Branden Ledbetter and wide receiver Jamarko Simmons.

Running back Mark Bonds provides balance for the offense after rushing for 1,082 yards and seven touchdowns in 12 games. Bonds will run behind one of the better offensive lines in the conference, a unit anchored by senior center Robbie Krutilla.

The Bronco defense also suffered a big loss in MAC Defensive-Player-of-the-Year Ameer Ismail, which leaves middle linebacker Dustin Duclo in charge of that unit.

However, plenty of talent returns defensively, starting with a line that has back all four starters, including Nick Varcadipane and Cory Flom.

The other defensive strength is a corps of backs that led Division I-A football with 24 interceptions, four of which were returned for touchdowns. All-MAC cornerback Londen Fryar and fellow juniors E.J. Biggers, Louis Delmas and C.J. Wilson all are returning starters.

#3 » NORTHERN ILLINOIS HUSKIES

PRESEASON RANK

In recent seasons, the Huskies have ranked among the biggest teases in college football.

Coach Joe Novak rebuilt the program from a MAC laughingstock upon its return in 1997 to a conference powerhouse during recent seasons. But Northern Illinois never seemed to take that last step to a championship, always seeming to lose a key contest that denied the team a title.

This year, the Huskies look poised to take a step back. There are only 10 seniors on the roster, and just four of those are starters. The defense will need to carry the offense early in the year, but it has the parts in place to complete that task.

Junior Larry English and sophomore Brandon Bice are a talented pair of ends, while at linebacker junior Tim McCarthy has posted back-to-back seasons with at least 100 tackles. Phil Brown should return from a knee injury that sidelined him last season. Junior-college import Chase Carter and transfer Anthony Mason (Valparaiso) will add depth in the secondary.

The offense must be retooled after the loss of all-league performers Garrett Wolfe and Doug Free. A committee of backs led by Montell Clanton, Justin Anderson and David Bryant might replace Wolfe, who ran for 1,928 yards last season.

Dan Nicholson, who has started five games in his career, is expected to step in at quarterback. His favorite target probably will be junior Britt Davis, who has caught 99 passes in his career. Senior tackle Chris Acevedo will anchor the line.

Senior placekicker Chris Nendick will be a weapon, as will experienced punter Andy Dittbenner.

But it all adds up to a group that likely will finish just outside the spotlight.

#4

2006 Record: 5-7 » MAC: 3-5

Last season certainly was tough on the Rockets. The program finished 5-7 overall and 3-5 in the MAC for the program's first losing season since 1993. The team placed fifth in the six-team West Division, a far cry from the four bowl games Toledo has played in since 2001.

In fact, the only thing tougher than last year's season was the storm clouds of a point-shaving investigation that hovered over the team this past spring.

The Rockets hope to move past all those impediments and return to a spot near the top of the league thanks to 18 returning starters, including eight on each side of the ball.

On offense, the biggest question is who will serve as quarterback. Junior Clint Cochran and sophomore Aaron Opelt both saw considerable action last season. Cochran is steadier, but Opelt offers a tantalizing run-pass mix.

The winner of that competition will have plenty of weapons at his disposal. Two-time all-conference tight end Chris Hopkins also returns, while the options at receiver include junior Nick Moore and sophomore Robin Bailey.

Jalen Parmele ran for 1,131 yards and eight touchdowns last season to earn first-team All-MAC honors and will provide balance to the offense. He'll run behind a sturdy line anchored by another All-MAC first-team choice, senior tackle John Greco.

The defense is led by an experienced secondary.

#5

2006 Record: 5-7 » MAC: 5-3

It looks as if Cardinals Coach Brady Hoke has found at least part of the answer to the problem of resurrecting his alma mater's football program.

Last season, the Cards used the strong arm of quarterback Nate Davis to vault to the top of the league in passing offense, averaging 259.3 yards per game.

Davis, now a sophomore, relied primarily on his instincts and physical talent to throw for 1,975 yards and 18 scores. He will improve with continued learning about running a college offense—a thought that should frighten most MAC defenses.

To make matters worse for the rest of the league, Davis is one of seven returning starters for an offense that also boasts two of the MAC's better pass-catchers. Dante Love, a second-team All-MAC wide receiver last season, caught 52 passes, while tight end Darius Hill earned honorable mention thanks to 42 catches, including 10 for touchdowns.

MiQuale Lewis leads the competition to start at tailback, but whoever starts will run behind a veteran offensive line that returns four starters, including two-time lettermen in Dan Gerberry at center and tackles Robert Brewster and Andre Ramsey.

But the Cardinals need more defense, not offense, if they wish to push for a league title. Last year, Ball State was last in the league in total defense (433.5 ypg).

EASTERN MICHIGAN EAGLES

#6

2006 Record: 1-11 » MAC: 1-7

The Eagles may rank among the better last-place programs in MAC history.

Yes, EMU was 1-7 in the league last season. But five of those losses were by eight points or less, including near-misses against bowl participants Western Michigan (three points), Ohio (six) and Central Michigan (seven).

A total of 39 lettermen return this year for Eastern Michigan, including nine starters on defense and seven more on offense.

On the defensive line, senior tackle Jason Jones will be asked to repeat his second-team All-MAC performance of last season. He will receive help on the line from seniors Eric Young and Josh Hunt.

Junior Daniel Holtzclaw, a two-year starter in the middle who made 114 tackles last year, and senior Darren Matthews, who collected 100 stops on the strongside, lead the linebacking crew.

The backfield includes returning safeties Chris May and Jacob Wyatt, both of whom finished with 89 tackles a year ago, as well as cornerbacks Blake Smith, Duan Bracey and Lyle Garrison.

There are more questions on offense, beginning with a quarterback situation still up in the air. Andy Schmitt and Tyler Jones split the duties in 2006, with Jones moving to tailback late in the season before returning to QB this spring.

Whoever gets the start at quarterback may be hamstrung by big losses at wide receiver.

Growth abounds in the Sun Belt, but there's still room for improvement

By TOMMY HICKS
Mobile (Ala.) Press-Register

The Sun Belt Conference is growing and it's getting better. No, the SBC won't be joining the BCS nor will it have its own weekly TV package broadcast by a major network, but it is gaining ground. It should be remembered that this will be just the seventh season the league has sponsored a football championship. With that in mind, it is possible to view the growth and it's just as easy to see there remains a lot of room for improvement and forward motion.

Last season, Troy and Middle Tennessee tied for the league championship with identical 6-1 records and both earned bowl invitations—the Trojans to the New Orleans Bowl, where they defeated Rice, and the Blue Raiders to the Motor City Bowl, which resulted in a loss to Central Michigan. It was just the second time in league history the Sun Belt had a pair of teams participate in postseason football.

Western Kentucky, a league member for several years, is playing football as an independent this year as part of its move from Division I-AA (where it won the 2002 national championship) to Division I-A membership, which the Hilltoppers will attain for the 2008 season, making them eligible for the league crown and giving the Sun Belt what it has wanted for some time: nine football-playing members, which provides eight games for each team a year. Western Kentucky should also add strength and competition to the league when it claims I-A status.

Last year's battle between Troy and Middle Tennessee down the stretch—including the Trojans' improbable 21-20 win on the Blue Raiders' home field where the Trojans scored 14 points in the final 2:19—demonstrated the competition that is developing within the league. On the other end of the conference spectrum, North Texas and Florida International, the teams that respectively finished in the SBC's bottom two, needed seven overtimes to decide their meeting, with the Mean Green claiming a 25-22 win.

Look for Troy to be considered the favorite to defend its league crown, but it won't come easily. Arkansas State, Middle Tennessee and Louisiana-Monroe will all challenge the Trojans. And Florida Atlantic should be on the brink of making a move as well. Florida International, with new Coach Mario Cristobal, a former assistant at Miami and Rutgers, will try and push the Golden Panthers forward. Louisiana-Lafayette and North Texas are also looking for better things this season.

RECRUITING ROUNDUP

1. TROY ▸ The Trojans parlayed their league crown into a strong recruiting season, snagging defensive lineman Dion Gales, receiver Kenard Burton and offensive tackle Jeremiah Wright among the haul.

2. ARKANSAS STATE ▸ Running back William Anderson, defensive end Stanley Porter and offensive tackle Paul Henry will add depth and talent to ASU's roster this season.

3. MIDDLE TENNESSEE ▸ Cornerback Ted Riley is the highlight of a solid group that also includes linebacker Landon Givers and defensive lineman SaCoby Carter.

4. NORTH TEXAS ▸ The Mean Green needed to restock their talent level and moved toward that aim with a class that includes running back Cameron Montgomery.

5. LOUISIANA-MONROE ▸ The Warhawks' depth will be aided by this year's group, especially the addition of quarterback Brice Beck and linebacker Alvin Jordan.

6. FLORIDA INTERNATIONAL ▸ There's lots of talent in the area, so recruiting should be a strength. Look for cornerback Devin Parrish and all-purpose Marquis Rolle to help soon.

8. LOUISIANA-LAFAYETTE ▸ Defensive lineman Jermaine Rodgers may help quickly, as could linebacker Grant Fleming and offensive lineman Jaron Odom.

FOUR FEARLESS FORECASTS

1. Western Kentucky, a future Sun Belt member playing as an independent in football this year because it is making the move from Division I-AA to I-A, will beat at least one of the three (Middle Tennessee, Troy and North Texas) conference teams it plays in 2007. The Hilltoppers won the Division I-AA title in 2002.

2. Troy will become the first Sun Belt team to win back-to-back New Orleans Bowl titles. The Trojans, who defeated Rice 41-17 in last year's New Orleans Bowl (which features the league's champion) will win the Sun Belt crown again and follow up with its second straight bowl win, the first two such victories in school history.

3. At least one Sun Belt team will claim a significant non-conference win this season. There are plenty of opportunities with league teams facing the likes of Texas, Florida, Arkansas, Penn State, Oklahoma, Louisville, South Carolina, Clemson and Oklahoma State—and that's just in the first two weeks. On one weekend, an underdog Sun Belt team will claim an upset.

4. Once again, two Sun Belt teams will receive bowl invitations. And in the only two previous times that has happened (2004, 2006), Troy will be one of those two. This may even be the first time the league picks up two bowl wins in the same season, which would represent a big step for the conference.

What a difference an effective offense makes. Following a disappointing 2005 season where the Trojans finished seventh in total offense and sixth in scoring offense, Coach Larry Blakeney made a tough decision. He replaced several members of his staff, some of whom were close friends. That decision led to the hiring of Offensive Coordinator Tony Franklin, who immediately put in the spread offense.

All those decisions led to Troy winning its first Sun Belt championship last season, thanks to a three-win improvement in league wins. It also brought a New Orleans Bowl victory, the Trojans' first-ever Division I-A bowl win.

Quarterback Omar Haugabook, who directed Franklin's offense with style and success, was tabbed the league's Player of the Year, Offensive Player of the Year and Newcomer of the Year, not to mention the unanimous choice as Most Valuable Player of the New Orleans Bowl. He passed for 2,401 yards and 21 touchdowns a year ago, working around 17 interceptions. Haugabook also rushed for 313 yards and five more scores. He'll have favorite targets in Gary Banks (68 catches, 603 yards, 8 TDs) and Mykeal Terry (27, 477, 5) returning. Senior Kenny Cattouse rushed for a team-high 810 yards with four touchdowns last year.

Defensively, there are several players back who started at one point or another last season. The secondary should lead the unit, with Leodis McKelvin and Elbert Mack both back at the corners and juniors Sherrod Martin and Terence Moore handling the safety spots.

Boris Lee leads the linebacking corps, which is young. Marcus Richardson and Romanique Lewis will be in the starting lineup. Up front is more talent and depth, led by end Kenny Mainor and tackles Chris Bradwell and Marcus Pittman.

The team that won the league crown in 2005 fell back to a tie for third last year. The slight slip only served to make the coaching staff more aggressive, putting together perhaps its best recruiting class under Coach Steve Roberts and providing a strong dose of incentive.

The Indians have 20 starters returning (seven on offense and defense and six special-teams players), including safeties Tyrell Johnson and Khayyam Burns, quarterback Corey Leonard, running back Reggie Arnold and linebacker Koby McKinnon.

Opposing offenses have to put in extra work to try and figure out a way to attack Johnson and Burns, both All-Sun Belt performers. Johnson led ASU in tackles for the second consecutive year (63) but had just one interception and four pass breakups. Meanwhile, Burns picked off four passes, broke up seven others and was the team's No. 2 tackler last year.

Ends Brandon Rollins and Alex Carrington will be joined by Brian Flagg, who missed all of last season with an injury, giving strength to a position that was affected by injuries a year ago. Tackles Prince Hickman and Curtis Bonds are both solid, with McKinnon the only returning starter at linebacker,

Leonard split time with Travis Hewitt at quarterback through the first few games of last season, but claimed the starting job as his own down the stretch thanks to his ability to run and pass. Just a sophomore this season, he is expected in improve on his numbers from a year ago that included 1,321 passing yards for eight TDs and an equal number of interceptions, while rushing for 331 yards and two more scores. He'll have Arnold to help ease the big-play pressure. The sophomore rushed for 1,076 yards and four TDs last year. He earned the league's Freshman-of-the-Year honors and was a Freshman All-America pick.

MIDDLE TENNESSEE BLUE RAIDERS

PRESEASON RANK

Rick Stock still knows how to make an entrance. The former South Carolina recruiting coordinator and tight ends coach came within 2:19 of leading the Blue Raiders to an unblemished league record in his first season as their head coach. Instead, he and his team had to settle for sharing the crown with Troy at 6-1 in the SBC, an unbeaten league record on the road (4-0) and a berth in the Motor City Bowl.

That's going to be a tough act to follow, but the Blue Raiders have a chance. It won't be easy—three-year starting quarterback Clint Marks, All-Sun Belt running back Eugene Gross and all three starters at linebacker are gone.

However, six starters return on offense, including running back DeMarco McNair, who gained 586 yards rushing and scored seven touchdowns and picked up another 139 yards receiving. The emphasis will be on finding a new quarterback. Joe Craddock, a junior who appeared in eight games last season leads the list to replace Marks, but there is competition.

Receiver is strong with last year's top five pass catchers—Bobby Williams, Taron Henry, Jonathan Grigsby, playmaker Desmond Gee (he also had 62 carries last season) and McNair all back.

Six starters—safety Damon Nickson, corner Bradley Robinson, ends Erik Walden and Tavares Jones and tackles Trevor Jenkins and Wes Hofacker—return on defense.

LOUISIANA-MONROE WARHAWKS

#4 »

2006 Record: 4-8 » Sun Belt: 3-4

There seems to be a feeling the Warhawks are "almost there" in challenging for the Sun Belt crown. Last season, they won three of their final four games after losing seven straight. If the young team that took its lumps a year ago gained enough experience from the season, there's a chance it can make a run this year.

Coach Charlie Weatherbie oversees a roster that includes nine seniors among the projected 22 starters, with seven juniors and six sophomores. Senior running back Calvin Dawson returns after averaging 100.8 yards per game and scoring 11 rushing touchdowns last year. He is the sparkplug for the ULM offense. Junior wide receiver LaGregory Sapp (43 catches, 3 TDs, 796 yards) is back, along with junior tight end Zeek Zacharie.

The offense will look to Kinsmon Lancaster to take over at quarterback, with Trey Revell as the backup. Frank Goodin and Tay Ogletree will back up Dawson at running back with Sapp, Josh Boudreaux, Darrell McNeal, Marty Humphrey, Aaron Stringfellow and J.J. McCoy leading the way at receiver. The Warhawks led the league in passing offense, total offense and turnover margin, all good statistical categories to head up. But they were also last in total defense, giving up almost 350 yards a game.

Defense is the area where the most progress must be made. Alaric Coleman and Jameson Jordan will start at the ends with David Cooper and Kendall Moulton inside. Jeremy Moll, Cardia Jackson and James Wright are the linebackers.

FLORIDA ATLANTIC OWLS

PRESEASON RANK

Take a quick glance at the Owls' roster and one thing jumps out: there are a lot of redshirt sophomores, juniors and seniors playing this year. That's by design. Head coach and program architect Howard Schnellenberger has planned for this season by holding back some of the players he has signed over the past few seasons. The success of that plan should begin to show itself this year and in the next couple of seasons ahead.

The only first-time starters on offense will likely be left tackle Lavoris Williams and fullback Willie Rose. The rest of the starting lineup has been around the Sun Belt block before. That includes quarterback Rusty Smith, a redshirt sophomore who threw for 1,285 yards and six touchdowns last year, and shared time with Sean Clayton (926 yards, 5 TDs), who also returns. However, Smith has established himself as the starter.

Smith's favorite target will be Frantz Simeon (35 catches, 590 yards, 1 TD). Mike Wilds is listed as the starter at tight end, but the backup, Jason Harmon, was the Owls' No. 2 receiver last year. Charles Pierce, FAU's leading rusher last year (756 yards, 5 TDs) is also back, with Rose at fullback.

The defense boasts the greatest experience, with three seniors and six juniors in the starting lineup that has just one newcomer, redshirt-freshman cornerback Tavious Polo. Linebacker Cergile Sincere and right end Josh Pinnick are the leaders.

LOUISIANA-LAFAYETTE RAGIN' CAJUNS

If the Ragin' Cajuns are to make a run at the Sun Belt crown this year, they must achieve some balance. Last season, they led the league in rushing offense (188.7 yards per game) but finished seventh in passing offense (129.2). They were fourth in scoring offense, but fifth in scoring defense. They were second in rushing defense, but sixth in passing defense. It seems for every category Lafayette excels in, there's another where it needs improvement. As a result, the Cajuns finished 6-6 a year ago and were 3-4 in league play. Seven offensive starters return this season, with five back on defense.

Quarterback Michael Desormeaux serves as an example of Lafayette's good news-bad news theme. The junior, who takes over for Jerry Babb, has shown the ability to run with the football but hasn't proven to be a passer in limited action. His rushing ability will complement running back Tyrell Fenroy (1,197 yards, 10 TDs), but Desormeaux has to prove he'll be able to hit receivers Derrick Smith (551 yards) and Jason Chery (222), the team's top two receivers a year ago.

Several starting spots on defense must be filled, though again, there is talent in place. End Rodney Hardeway and tackle Korey Raymond are back, as is linebacker Brenton Burkhalter, cornerback Kyle Ward and free safety Lamar Morgan. Burkhalter was the team's leading tackler last year with 61 stops, while Morgan had 53 and Ward 42.

FLORIDA INTERNATIONAL GOLDEN PANTHERS

A new era in FIU football begins on Sept. 1 when new Coach Mario Cristobal leads the Golden Panthers for the first time. The former University of Miami assistant has brought enthusiasm to a program in need of a spark. However, he'll need more.

The Golden Panthers lost every game they played a year ago and finished last in the Sun Belt for scoring offense, scoring defense, rushing offense, pass efficiency, first downs, penalties, red zone offense and third-down conversions. As if that wasn't enough, even though eight offensive and seven defensive starters return, that number does not include quarterback Josh Padrick, wide receiver Chandler Williams, linebacker James Black or defensive end Antwan Barnes.

Offensively, the Golden Panthers simply must be more effective and productive. The strength of the unit this year will be its line, which returns intact. Also returning to starting spots are fullback John Ellis, running back A'Mod Ned and wide receiver Ashlyn Parker. Ned was the team's leading rusher, but his total was just 445 yards and a pair of touchdowns. Ellis was the No. 3 rusher a year ago with 42 yards.

Quarterback is the position of greatest interest and it's a starting position still up for grabs. The leader of a long list of contenders would appear to be sophomore Paul McCall, the only player among seven candidates who has any college game experience.

NORTH TEXAS MEAN GREEN

My, how the mighty have fallen. The Mean Green owned the Sun Belt when the league first began, but has stumbled in recent seasons. It is now Coach Todd Dodge's job to return the program back to the top of the league. North Texas tied for last in the league with Florida Atlantic two seasons ago and finished next-to-last in 2006, saved from the cellar by Florida International's 0-7 mark.

Returning players and several newcomers must join Dodge in the team's quest to re-enter the Sun Belt title chase. On offense, running back Jamario Thomas, who led the nation in rushing as a freshman, needs to show that kind of form again, something he hasn't been able to do recently. A year ago he rushed for just 668 yards and two scores, with an average of just 60.7 yards per game.

He is joined by only four other returning starters on offense: quarterback Daniel Meager, linemen Chad Rose and Adam Venegas and wide receiver Brandon Jackson. However, Meager's job is still up for grabs, with Matt Phillips and Woody Wilson also in the mix. The trio all earned starts a year ago, each with spotty success.

The story on defense is more promising. The Mean Green welcomes all but one starter from a year ago back this season. Of course, it's a unit that finished sixth in total defense, seventh in scoring defense and fifth in rushing defense.

Still, there is experience. The secondary returns in its entirety, led by cornerback Dominique Green.

QB › Jimmy Clausen

All Irish eyes set on incoming frosh QB Clausen this fall

Quarterback derbies are rare for the Notre Dame football program. So rare, in fact, the last one happened more than a decade ago by accident.

Third-year Coach Charlie Weis brings his Irish into the 2007 preseason without a designated starter at quarterback to replace Brady Quinn, who had been a fixture for four years.

Four candidates—sophomores Demetrius Jones and Zach Frazer, junior Evan Sharpley and Jimmy Clausen, a freshman phenom who enrolled in January—battled throughout the spring without giving Weis much ammunition to make a clear-cut decision.

Speculation, conjecture, gut instincts and necessity will pare the list down to two—probably Jones and Clausen—for the start of preseason workouts. Would Weis consider splitting the duties, much like Florida did with Chris Leak and Tim Tebow in 2006?

"Well, I can't say completely no to that," Weis says. "I can't see myself playing one guy half the game and the other guy half the game. But if you're asking me if I'd ever rule out playing more than one in a game, I wouldn't rule that out."

Jones' stature (6-foot-4, 210 pounds), athletic nature and demeanor—"I'm a social bug, more of a people person"—could give him an edge. But Clausen decided to skip his high school prom in favor of spring practice and appears eager for the spotlight. He arrived on campus for his commitment last spring in a stretch limo, flashing his high school state championship rings. All those rings and a buck-50 will buy him an espresso at The Huddle coffee shop on campus these days.

Notre Dame faced a similar scenario (sort of) in 1993. The Rick Mirer era had just ended, and incoming freshman Ron Powlus garnered the same level of hype and media attention that Clausen is receiving. The week before the season opener, Powlus, who had been billed by then-coach Lou Holtz as the starter since he was recruited, sustained a broken clavicle.

That ended his season and opened the door for Kevin McDougal and Paul Failla to spar for the job. Holtz ended up using Failla in short-yardage and goal-line situations and McDougal the rest of the time in what turned out to be a near-miss for the national title.

That level of success might be out of reach for a retooled Notre Dame unit that will have to deal with critical issues at other positions as well.

"Tradition never graduates," is the mantra Weis has been repeating to keep his "green" players from using their inexperience as an excuse.

Besides the big shoes waiting to be filled after Quinn's departure, the Irish have plenty of problems to solve on offense if they are to make their third BCS appearance under Weis in as many years. This year's unit will be hard-pressed to match the 31 points and 390 total yards the 2006 squad averaged a game.

Receivers Jeff Samardzija and Rhema McKnight are both gone, leaving in their wake smurfs David Grimes (5-10, 174) and George West (5-8, 188) and lanky Robby Parris (6-3, 201) as the top targets for whoever is throwing the ball. They've all had to work on the physical aspect of playing the position.

"I pretty much live and die by playing hard and playing with heart," West says. "A lot of colleges expect you to come out and show them something because you're a smaller receiver. I always felt that I always had the ability with my speed and quickness to make plays."

Parris says: "It's a lot different than high school. The corners and safeties are a lot more physical They're as strong as you are. It's harder to get open when they're playing press coverage."

The offensive-line situation will also give Weis some sleepless nights.

THE NEXT BIG THING

» JIMMY CLAUSEN, QB

In Clausen, the Irish have their most anticipated recruit since Ron Powlus, who's ironically the new QB coach in South Bend. "The Kid" is confident in a wide-open race under center.

Senior center John Sullivan may be the best in the nation and right tackle Sam Young, forced into the role as a freshman last year, will be better this season. But beyond that, there's no experience.

Junior Paul Duncan (6-7, 292) seems to be the answer at the all-important position of left tackle, while sophomores Eric Olsen (6-4, 300) and Matt Carufel (6-5, 295) appear to be the leading contenders at guard.

It wasn't an accident that last year's leading rusher, Darius Walker, decided to bypass his final year of eligibility to play in the NFL. He knew that with the stable of young running backs returning this season, he wouldn't come anywhere near the amount of work he received last season (255, 1,267 yards, 7 TDs).

Guys like fifth-year senior Travis Thomas, who spent time at linebacker last season, sophomore James Aldridge (37 carries, 142 yards) and early-enrolled freshman Armando Allen are too good to keep inactive.

Fullback Asaph Schwapp, a junior, is back primarily as a blocker, while senior tight end John Carlson has a chance to improve on his 2006 numbers (47 catches, 634 yards, 4 TDs).

Recruiting on the defensive side of the ball has been one shortcomings of the first two years of the Weis regime. Commitments heading into the third year have started to stem that tide of frustration, but the 2007 Irish defense won't feel the impact. In fact, impact players may be at a premium.

The Irish defense yielded about 24 points and 340 yards a game last season. Offensive explosions by Southern Cal and LSU to end the season were bad enough to get Defensive Coordinator Rick Minter fired.

Corwin Brown has come over from the NFL after serving three seasons with the New York Jets to try and stop the bleeding as the new coordinator. Brown played at the University of Michigan before eight seasons in the NFL.

Fifth-year safety Tom Zbikowski (79 tackles), who has embarked on a professional boxing career while at Notre Dame, will be the emotional leader of the defense. Senior cornerback Terrail Lambert (40 tackles, 3 INTs) came up with some big plays, including a critical interception return for a touchdown in Notre Dame's amazing comeback win over Michigan State.

Senior Trevor Laws (62 tackles, 9.5 tackles for loss, 3.5 sacks) will be a mainstay at left end, while senior Dwight Stephenson is a first-time starter on the right side. Junior Pat Kuntz and sophomore Chris Stewart will battle for playing time at nose tackle.

Senior Maurice Crum (100 tackles, 10 tackles for loss, 4 sacks) is a defensive captain and dependable component at inside linebacker. Alongside him will be senior Joe Brockington (59 tackles). Senior Anthony Vernaglia and sophomore John Ryan are the top contenders to nail down starting jobs at outside linebacker.

Aside from Zbikowski and Lambert in the secondary, safety David Bruton (18 tackles) and corner Ambrose Wooden (21) have been tested under fire.

RECRUITING REPORT

All-everything quarterback Jimmy Clausen (6-3, 207), who earned multiple national prep Player-of-the-Year honors in 2006, headlines a quality class of 18 recruits ranked No. 10 nationally by Street & Smith's.

Clausen never started a losing game at Oaks Christian in Westlake Village, Calif., and enrolled at Notre Dame in January to get an early start on his bid to replace graduated Brady Quinn.

Clausen, who had brothers Rick and Casey precede him as college quarterbacks, ended his prep career with gaudy statistics: 10,764 passing yards and a state-record 146 touchdown passes with only 20 interceptions.

While Clausen is the "name" in the Irish recruiting class, he's certainly not the only touted newcomer in the Notre Dame fold.

Two running backs receive high marks: Armando Allen (5-9, 190) from Hialeah, Fla., and Robert Hughes (5-11, 225) of Chicago.

A highly recruited defensive back was Gary Gray (5-11, 180) from Columbia, S.C. Wide receiver Duval Kamara (6-5, 210) from Hoboken, N.J., reminds some observers of another New Jersey prep product, former USC wideout Dwayne Jarrett.

On the defensive side of the ball, the most touted newcomers after Gray are end Kerry Neal (6-3, 232) from North Carolina and linebacker Brian Smith (6-2, 225) of Overland Park, Kan.

Tight end Mike Ragone (6-4, 225) from Cherry Hill, N.J., and two-way lineman Emeka Nwankwo (6-3, 285) fit into the future plans of Coach Charlie Weis and staff.

Two prospects recruited as athletes will be tested at multiple positions—Golden Tate (5-11, 175) from Hendersonville, Tenn., and Steve Paskorz (6-1, 215) of Pittsburgh. Tate was a do-it-all, skill-position athlete in high school and Paskorz a running back/linebacker.

NAVY MIDSHIPMEN

Annapolis, Md. Stadium: Navy-Marine Corps Memorial Stadium (34,000) Tickets: 800-US4-NAVY

Midshipmen know how to run, but key to their season will be stopping the pass

Before the first football is kicked, before the first touchdown is scored, Navy has its bowl bid already locked up.

Sort of.

Six victories separate the Midshipmen from an appearance in the Poinsettia Bowl Dec. 20 in San Diego against the No. 2 pick from the Mountain West Conference. Two years ago, Navy's 51-30 win over Colorado State drew about 36,000 for the bowl's inaugural game. That performance had a lot to do with this year's early invitation.

Last year, the Midshipmen lost a thriller to Boston College, 25-24, in the Meineke Car Bowl.

According to Coach Paul Johnson, back for his sixth season at Navy, that loss to BC shouldn't have an impact on what to expect now.

"You just move on," Johnson says. "It's a different team. You think about it after the game, but after that it's over."

The next chapter is ready to start with plenty of reason for optimism, even though the Midshipmen graduated a very talented class from a year ago.

"It will be interesting to see," Johnson says, when asked how this team will take shape. "That's why you play every year. Each team takes on their own identity and we'll see what identity this team takes. I think there is some talent; it's just a question if they have the same desire and work ethic."

Kaipo-Noa Kaheaku-Enhada, the quarterback who proved he could run Navy's high-octane, option-oriented offense with precision last season, is back with plenty of weapons at his disposal.

Navy, annually among the best rushing teams in the country, lived up to the reputation last season by averaging 327 yards a game. Kaheaku-Enhada (507 rushing yards, 10 TDs), Adam Ballard (792, 3), Reggie Campbell (706, 5) and Shun White (578, 5) give variety to the Midshipmen attack.

Kaheaku-Enhada, while playing in 11 games, threw just 48 passes, completing 23 for 384 yards and five touchdowns. He had one intercepted. Campbell is the leading receiver back after catching 13 passes for 244 yards and two touchdowns. Seldom-targeted Tyree Barnes (6 catches, 105 yards, 2 TDs) and OJ Washington (3, 50, 1) should be much more involved in the offense than a year ago.

Losing nine defensive starters from last season would give any coach reason for concern. Johnson recognizes that was a special group that limited the opposition to 20 points and 117 rushing yards per contest, while giving up 219 through the air.

"It's very similar to two years ago when we lost a bunch of guys on offense, so the young guys over there are going to have to step up in a hurry," Johnson says of filling the defensive holes.

How green will the Midshipmen be on defense this season? None of Navy's top eight tacklers returns. Cornerback Rashawn King (50 tackles), who ranked ninth among the team's tacklers last year, is back along with free safety Jeff Deliz (25 tackles, 3 for loss).

Chris Kuhar-Pitters, Nate Frazier and either Casey Herbert or Michael Walsh will be the down linemen in Navy's 3-4 alignment. Linebackers Matt Humiston, Dell Robinson, Clint Sovie, Irv Spencer and Matt Wimsatt are quality athletes.

King and Deliz will be joined by Greg Thrasher, Jesse Iwuji and Blake Carter as possibilities to solve the air-assault crisis that plagued the Midshipmen last year.

The kicking game is solid. Punter Greg Veteto averaged 38.1 yards last season, while placekicker Matt Harmon hit eight of 11 field-goal tries. He also connected on 37 of 38 extra points.

The Commander-in-Chief Trophy, annually awarded to the winner of the Army, Navy and Air Force competition each year, has been a resident of Annapolis the past four seasons.

THE NEXT BIG THING

IRV SPENCER, ILB

Started three games last year (16 tackles), and will become a mainstay at the inside spot this season. Spencer's speed and size will help him anchor the Midshipmen's linebacking unit.

Sixteen years in the NFL trenches may not have fully prepared Stan Brock for the battles he's likely to face this season as Army's new coach.

The Black Knights are coming off a 3-9 campaign that was followed by the departure of Bobby Ross and the elevation of Brock, who had been offensive line coach the past three seasons.

For starters, Brock must find a way to turn around the numbers from a year ago—the Black Knights generated 19 points and 261 yards on offense per game while yielding 28 points and 355 yards on defense.

Carson Williams heads into the preseason having unseated David Pevoto as Army's starting quarterback, but Brock's final verdict on the two won't be made until the week of the opener at Akron Sept. 1.

Pevoto completed 106 of 193 passes for 1,012 yards and six touchdowns with 14 interceptions last year. While playing in seven games as a rookie, Williams hit on 56 of 98 passes for 577 yards and four touchdowns with 10 picks.

Last year's top three running backs—Wesley McMahand (654 yards, 4 TDs), Tony Moore (399, 5) and Mike Viti (239, 1)—return to give Army some stability on the ground.

Receiver Jeremy Trimble (52 receptions, 534 yards, 2 TDs) will join Viti as an offensive co-captain for the Black Knights this season. Look for Damion Hunter to be one of the surprises of the receiving corps.

Retooling the Army offensive line will be an emphasis for Brock. He knows the territory, though, having toiled there for 16 years in the NFL.

Defensively, the Black Knights will sorely miss the production of graduated Cameron Craig, who collected 17 tackles for loss last season. That role could be assumed by defensive tackle Ted Bentler. "There's nobody who goes out there with a stronger motor than Ted," Brock says.

What better introduction into the world of big-time football than a date with the defending national champ?

Western Kentucky's Sept. 1 visit to The Swamp to play Florida may be monumental in many ways.

The meeting with the Gators will be one of five Division I-A matchups Western Kentucky will have in its transition year from Division I-AA.

"These are both historical and changing times for WKU football," says Coach David Elson, who embarks on his fifth season at the helm in Bowling Green.

The Hilltoppers, who have a streak of 11 straight winning seasons after last year's 6-5 campaign, are facing a bit of a quandary at quarterback. Brandon Smith is the only returning player with any experience, seeing limited duty behind graduated Justin Haddix, but Notre Dame transfer David Wolke, K.J. Black and Brad Savco are all making a bid for the starting job.

Running back Lerron Moore ended his career last season as the school's all-time leading rusher, but Andrew McCloud (443 rushing yards, 4 TDs) and Tyrell Hayden (315 yards) know their way around the backfield.

While the quarterbacks may be a question, the receivers should provide plenty of answers. Last year's top three targets—Curtis Hamilton (52 catches, 841 yards, 10 TDs), Jake Gaebler (36, 416, 2) and Jessie Quinn (29 catches, 427 yards)—return to an offense that averaged 23.5 points and 364.8 yards (160.4 rushing, 204.4 passing) a game last season.

The problem may be on the defensive side of the ball. The Hilltoppers yielded 24 points and 323 yards (170 rushing, 153 passing) per game in 2006.

Cornerback Travis Watters (50 tackles, 3 INTs) will provide leadership and experience in the secondary.

Mountaineers look to make three-peat history, but will have competition from usual suspects

By MATT McKENZIE, Street & Smith's Staff Writer

The name may have changed, but the top team remains the same.

During the offseason, the NCAA decided to break up the nomenclature of Division I-A and I-AA. Division I-A teams are now in the Football Bowl Subdivision (FBS), while I-AA squads are labeled as Football Championship Subdivision (FCS) teams. If you think this is more confusing than the original names, you're not alone.

But while this motion has confused many on the proper and correct name, one thing is clear: Appalachian State is still the team to beat in this classification, no matter what you call it.

After 77 years without a championship, the Mountaineers have now won back-to-back national titles and will try to capture an unprecedented third straight trophy in 2007.

With a 28-17 victory over Massachusetts in last year's championship game, Appalachian joins a list of just two other schools (Youngstown State and Georgia Southern) that have won consecutive titles. Georgia Southern did it on three occasions. The Mountaineers have now won 23 straight games against non-Division I-A opponents and own a 27-game winning streak (over the last four years) at home. Appalachian's 14 wins last year also set a school record.

RICKY SANTOS

Mountaineers Coach Jerry Moore calls the last two seasons "an exciting adventure," but adds that he doesn't want it to be over with quite yet.

"We've certainly celebrated winning two, and once we got into spring practice, three-peat has kind of been a buzzword," Moore says. "We've got to enjoy the ride, but tune it out at the same time. There are high expectations and we've got to live up to them."

Most of Appalachian State's offensive firepower is back, led by the talents of quarterback Armanti Edwards and running back Kevin Richardson. The two provided a strong one-two punch throughout the season, keeping defenses honest in the process. As a freshman, Edwards wasn't the starter at the beginning of the year, but went on to become just the fifth player in NCAA history to throw for at least 2,000 yards and run for 1,000 in a season. Richardson, meanwhile, set a new I-AA record with 30 rushing touchdowns.

"Last year, Armanti was a total newcomer," Moore says. "Over the winter, he gained 10 or 12 pounds. And his arm is getting stronger too. The players respect him, so his leadership is probably coming. And Kevin, what is amazing about him is that in half our ballgames, he probably only played a half and still had marvelous stats. He's gone from a walk-on to earning a leadership role. There are great expectations for him."

If the Mountaineers have a flaw, it's on the defensive front, as ASU must replace three of its four starters, including All-America end Marques Murrell. A potential starter is LSU transfer Tim Washington.

Standing in the way of the Mountaineers' quest for a third straight title is a cast of powerhouses that has challenged for the championship year-in and year-out. Montana will be aided by the return of tailback Lex Hilliard, a two-time All-Big Sky performer who missed all of last season with a torn Achilles' tendon. New Hampshire has 2006 Walter Payton Award (given to the top I-AA player) winner Ricky Santos back at QB, but his favorite receiver, record-breaker David Ball, is now in the NFL.

Northern Iowa, which lost to ASU in the title game two years ago, has reloaded with 17 returning starters, including quarterback Eric Sanders and All-America offensive lineman Chad Rinehart. One wild card to keep an eye on is Sam Houston State, where former Oklahoma quarterback Rhett Bomar will add to a spread offense that historically has put big numbers.

Appalachian State faces numerous obstacles in trying to leave Chattanooga, Tenn., with a third consecutive trophy. The Mountaineers travel to Michigan in their season opener, and play in the always-tough Southern Conference, which has the potential to put three or four teams in the playoffs this year. Moore knows the target will be on his group, with the bull's-eye larger than ever before. When you win two straight titles, it's hard to play the "no-respect" card. To counter that, Moore has been looking for any advantage possible during the offseason as his team sets out to try and make history.

"The thing is, we're an isolated team up in the mountains," he says. "The town's excited and fans are excited. I warned the guys about this. Everyone's patting us on the back, and it's been a fun ride for us. But how do you tune that out?

"We want to be even more precise with the way we practice during two-a-days. I like to go watch different teams practice, see the tempo, see the coaches. You go someplace for three days and pick up one point and put that to use for any amount of edge, it's worth it when you're trying to get a third straight title."

New coaches headline Big Sky, but look for Montana Grizzlies to continue dominance

By MIKE SORENSEN, The (Salt Lake City) Deseret News

The Big Sky Conference will feature a lot of new faces with three new head coaches this year.

Not many football fans have likely heard of John Zamberlin, who is the new coach at Idaho State, or Marshall Sperbeck, who takes over at Sacramento State.

However, the third new coach in the Big Sky is one who should be recognized by football fans throughout the country.

Portland State's new leader is Jerry Glanville, the former NFL coach for both the Atlanta Falcons and Houston Oilers. Of course, he's also known for his all-black outfits and a habit of leaving a pair of tickets for Elvis Presley before every game.

After many years of working as a TV analyst, Glanville spent the past two seasons at the University of Hawaii, where he served as the Rainbow Warriors' defensive coordinator. However, the 65-year-old Glanville shouldn't expect to win a conference title in his first season.

Montana, which seemingly just reloads every season, will be the team to beat again, as the Grizzlies feature 19 returning starters from a 12-2 team that made it to the I-AA semifinals.

Montana has been the most consistently successful program in Division I-AA over the past decade and a half. Over the past 14 years, the Grizzlies have won or shared 12 Big Sky titles (including the past nine in a row) and made the playoffs in each of those seasons.

Fifth-year Coach Bobby Hauck's team will be led by running back Lex Hilliard and defensive end Kroy Biermann. Hilliard already ranks second in school history with 2,884 rushing yards and 34 touchdowns. He'll be joined in the backfield by senior Reggie Bradshaw and sophomore Thomas Brooks-Fletcher. Although the Grizzlies lost quarterback Josh Swogger, they have experience with junior Cole Bergquist, who has started nine games over the past two seasons.

Biermann leads a defense that ranked ninth in the nation a year ago and returns eight starters and 31 lettermen. Also back are all-league safeties Colt Anderson and Torrey Thomas, along with second-team cornerback Jimmy Wilson and three starting linebackers: Tyler Joyce, Kyle Ryan and Loren Utterback.

Portland State, which knocked off Division I-A New Mexico 17-6 on the road last season, has been known for its defense in recent years. But the Vikings are expected to open things up offensively under Mouse Davis, who may be the oldest assistant coach in college football at age 74.

Davis, who was the head coach at Portland State from 1975-80, directed the high-powered run-and-shoot offense at Hawaii and coached alongside incoming Coach Jerry Glanville the last two years. The Vikings will count on senior Brian White or sophomore Tygue Howland at quarterback. They'll be protected by senior offensive lineman Brennan Carvalho, a consensus All-American in 2006. Glanville is installing a new 3-4 defense for a group that returns just four starters from a unit that was dominant last year.

Weber State Coach Ron McBride thinks his program is getting to the level envisioned three years ago when he took over the job after a long stint at Utah. This could be the season the Wildcats challenge Montana for the championship after narrowly losing to the Grizzlies the past two years.

Trevyn Smith, who rushed for 1,129 yards as a freshman, will lead a deep and balanced running attack, and the Wildcats hope 6-5 sophomore quarterback Brad Leggatt will develop quickly. Linebacker Brad Stewart heads up a defense that is experienced, particularly on the line, where Utah transfer Pate Moleni returns after earning all-league honorable mention a year ago.

Montana State was a surprise in 2006, finishing in a tie with Portland State at 6-2 and advancing to the playoffs, where the Bobcats won their first postseason contest since 1984, beating Furman 31-13.

However, the program has suffered a black eye in recent months with five former players either arrested or charged with drug crimes. Because of the instability, Coach Mike Kramer was fired in May. At press time, no replacement had been named.

The Bobcats have two quarterbacks to choose from in Cory Carpenter, who was 3-3 as a starter before sustaining an ankle injury, and Jack Rolovich, who started the Bobcats' final seven games and went 5-2. Defensively, Montana State is anchored by junior linebacker Bobby Daly, who led the team in tackles, and cornerback Kory Austin.

At Northern Arizona, All-America wide receiver Alex Watson, who caught 82 passes for 1,017 yards last year, returns for his senior season, but won't have Jason Murrietta flinging passes to him anymore.

Murrietta graduated after a stellar four-year career that saw him finish runner-up for the Walter Payton Award. Fresno State transfer Sean Norton, a former Parade All-American, is in the mix to take over at quarterback.

Eastern Washington has been one of the league's top offensive teams over the past three years and should be solid again. The Eagles return four starters on the offensive line, including two senior All-Americans in Rocky Hanni (6-5, 290 pounds) and Matt Alfred (6-3, 300).

At Sacramento State, Marshall Sperbeck takes over after a successful 15-year run as a junior-college coach at Foothill (Calif.) College. The defense looks to be the strength of the team with junior linebacker Cyrus Mulitalo, who averaged a league-best 10.9 tackles per game in 2006.

Idaho State's John Zamberlin comes from Central Washington, where he compiled a 63-41 mark in 10 seasons. He'll try to jump-start a Bengals program that has won just nine games in three seasons.

Zamberlin has 15 returning starters to work with, including all-conference honorable-mention cornerback D.J. Clark. The top returnee on offense is running back Josh Barnett, who rushed for 1,117 yards and six touchdowns last season.

Northern Colorado is entering its second season in the Big Sky, but unlike last year, the Bears will be eligible to win the conference title and earn a trip to the postseason. However, that will be a huge task after finishing 1-10 in 2006.

The Bears return six starters on both offense and defense under second-year Coach Scott Downing, but must replace all-time leading rusher Andre Wilson, who gained 1,027 yards last year.

Chanticleers continue to have lots to crow about on South Carolina coast

By GARY McCANN, The (Rock Hill, S.C.) Herald

Beginning its sixth season, the Big South Conference continues to take steps toward national prominence.

Coastal Carolina set the pace in 2006, claiming its second outright title in the past three seasons and garnering the league's first at-large bid to the Division I-AA playoffs.

The Chanticleers lost in the first round to top-ranked Appalachian State 45-28, after falling behind 31-0 at the half.

Charleston Southern and Coastal were ranked in the Top 25 during the same week last season. The Big South also won 21 non-conference games and averaged 6,838 fans, both records.

Coastal quarterback Tyler Thigpen became the league's first NFL draft pick.

The Big South has to wait until 2010 to be eligible for an automatic bid. That's when Presbyterian, making the move up from Division II, and Stony Brook, coming over from the Northeast Conference, will be football members in good standing. After last year, however, the league could merit at-large consideration again in 2007.

A team losing 36 seniors from a 9-3 championship team normally wouldn't be picked to win another title, but Coastal Carolina, under Coach David Bennett, is the best program in the league.

Over the past four seasons, the Chants are 34-11 overall and 12-4 against the league. Losing 13 starters, including seven first-team all-conference picks, makes this year just another challenge.

Quarterback Tyler Thigpen, the league's 2006 Offensive Player of the Year, defensive lineman Sam Harper, linebacker Jamar Leath and defensive back Quinton Teal leave the biggest holes. Wide receiver Jerome Simpson (61 catches, 1,077 yards, 16 TDs) is back, though.

Will Richardson, a 6-5, 225-pound junior who played in two games last year; Jamie Childers, a true freshman who enrolled early and went through spring practice; and 6-1, 190-pound redshirt freshman Sean Fortson will battle for the quarterback spot.

Mike Tolbert, a 5-10, 240-pound senior (439 yards, 7 TDs), is the top returning rusher behind a line anchored by 6-6, 295-pound Britt Leggett.

Linebacker D.J. Rice (51 tackles) and linemen Ronnie Mason (35 tackles, 3 sacks) and Adrain Grady (6-5, 260 pounds) lead the defense.

Under first-year Coach Danny Rocco, Liberty finished 6-5 last season. The five-game improvement tied for the best turnaround in the nation among I-AA teams.

Rocco returns 10 starters on offense, nine on defense.

The Flames have four offensive linemen back who were second-team all-conference, plus quarterback Brock Smith (1,376 yards, 7 TDs). Rashad Jennings, a 6-1, 240-pound junior, was the league's second-leading rusher (1,020 yards, 10 TDs) and Zach Terrell, who also plays quarterback, ranked third (673 yards, 13 TDs). The Flames led the conference with 23 rushing touchdowns.

Liberty set league records for scoring defense (15.6 ppg), points allowed (172) and total defense (306.6 ypg). Lineman Steve Ackley, linebacker Stevie Ray Lloyd and defensive backs E.L. Estes and Ryan Grieser—all second-team all-conference picks—return.

Coach Steve Patton's Gardner-Webb Bulldogs finished 6-5, their first winning season since 2003.

Patton has 19 starters back, including 10 from a defensive unit that started seven sophomores and ranked 112th of 115 teams nationally in total defense and 102nd in scoring defense.

New Defensive Coordinator John Windham has installed a more aggressive attack that will be led by last year's Big South Defensive Player of the Year, Brian Johnston, a 6-5, 280-pound end. He'll get help from third-team All-America linebacker Mario Brown (55 tackles, 5 sacks), linebacker Mike Pavelko and safety Daniel Cooke.

Quarterback Devin Campbell, a 6-4, 190-pound junior, ranked third in the league for total offense (2,215 yards passing, 15 TDs) last year.

All-league wide receiver Duvaughn Flagler (64 catches, 749 yards, 7 TDs) returns, along with all-conference lineman Demario Deese. Junior Dobson Collins (8 catches, 104 yards) and Tyson Petty, a 6-0, 165-pound freshman with 4.3 speed, make the wide-receiver position much stronger.

The Bulldogs were the only team in the conference to average fewer than 100 yards rushing per game (97.2) last year. They didn't have a back run for more than 349 yards, but keep an eye on sophomore Phillip Peoples (323 yards in '06).

Since 2004, Charleston Southern is 21-11 under Coach Jay Mills and is coming off a 9-2 campaign, a single-season school record for wins.

Maurice Price (103 catches, 985 yards, 10 TDs) led the NCAA in receptions per game (9.65) and returns to add to his Big South career records of 202 catches and 2,429 receiving yards.

Who gets him the ball is the question, as quarterback Collin Drafts, who was second in the league in total offense last year, is no longer around. Eli Byrd, a redshirt sophomore, and Sidney Bryant threw 23 passes combined last season. The top returning running back is Kenny Harper (429 yards, 5 TDs).

The Buccaneer defense should be strong, led by linebacker Jada Ross (127 tackles, 2 sacks), lineman Dennis Justiani (55 tackles, 6 sacks) and cornerback C.J. Hirschman (80 tackles, 3 INTs).

VMI lost four conference games by a combined 19 points, and Coach Jim Reid's Keydets finished 1-10, losing their last 10.

Reid begins his second season with an offense that led the league in rushing (206.6 ypg), but it's now without Sean Mizzer, who was the Big South's top tailback with 1,022 yards rushing. That puts pressure on a passing game that totaled just 1,132 yards and eight TDs.

Joey Robinson, a 6-1, 195-pound sophomore, ran for 330 yards in 2006 and should take over at quarterback.

Defensively, seven of the top 10 tacklers return, led by 6-3, 220-pound linebacker Patrick McKinney (82 tackles).

In 2006, the Keydets were last in the league in scoring (18.1 ppg) and at the bottom in points allowed per game (39.4).

New name, same winning game: CAA should again have multiple NCAA bids

By JOHN O'CONNOR, Richmond Times-Dispatch

New name. Same league.

What was the Atlantic 10 Football Conference has been absorbed by the Colonial Athletic Association. The CAA, which has been without football since its inception in 1985, takes over operational control of this league because six of the 12 members belong to the Colonial for other sports, and were anxious to play football under the CAA banner.

The Colonial inherits a dozen programs of distinction. Its membership has advanced multiple teams to the playoffs for 16 straight years, the longest streak of any Division I-AA conference. Since 1998, three league programs won national championships (Massachusetts in '98, Delaware in '03 and James Madison in '04). In the past six seasons, 10 of the 12 members have participated in the playoffs.

"When you coach in this conference, there aren't any really weak teams," says Rhode Island Coach Tim Stowers. "Usually, there is one great team that comes out of it, and two or three or sometimes four playoff teams. It has got to be the toughest league at this level in the country because of the quality and depth of the member teams."

The CAA figures to retain the distinction to which Stowers referred, with familiar programs leading the way.

NORTH DIVISION

The pitch is back in New Hampshire's terrific pitch-catch combo, and that's a good start. Quarterback Ricky Santos won the 2006 Walter Payton Award as Division I-AA's top player and will start for the fourth straight season. This time around, however, Santos won't have the catch, David Ball, as a target.

Ball was named a 2006 All-American after averaging 7.2 yards per catch and 85.7 receiving yards a game. He consistently drew double coverage and still scored 13 touchdowns.

Out of the team's spread offense, the 6-2, 217-pound Santos is a tough runner. But the Wildcats averaged a league-leading 35.3 points last season because of his ability to spread the ball around and avoid turnovers. Senior Keith LeVan, a possession receiver last season, looks to be Santos' new go-to guy. LeVan was named third-team all-conference last season, when he averaged 51.7 receiving yards and 9.6 yards per catch.

During his freshman season, Chad Kackert immediately became a versatile weapon. The 5-8, 190-pound sophomore tailback will again be used as a runner and receiver out of the backfield.

On his way in becoming one of New Hampshire's top all-time tacklers is senior safety Jeff Pammer, effective as a blitzer and cover man. Other standouts among the half-dozen returning defensive starters are senior linebacker Husain Karim, relatively short at 5-10 but a 230-pound rock, and junior cornerback John Clements.

Massachusetts made it to the 2006 national championship game and, though the Minutemen fell to Appalachian State, they set a school record for victories (13). More success seems probable with Liam Coen returning at quarterback. Coen, a junior entering his third season as a starter, ranks as one of college football's most efficient QBs. Last year he completed 64.5 percent of his attempts and passed for 26 touchdowns with just 10 interceptions.

Gone is Steve Baylark, who rushed for 1,000 or more yards in each of his four seasons and averaged 130.7 yards as a senior. Sophomore Tony Nelson, who gained 235 yards last season, is expected to emerge as Massachusetts' primary ball-carrier. On the offensive line, the Minutemen will rely on seniors Matt Austin and Nick Diana while breaking in 6-8, 285-pound Ben Coblyn, a former Boston University basketball player.

The blitz-happy Minutemen have allowed 13.3 points per game over the last two seasons. Gone is All-America safety James Ihedigbo, but senior linebacker Jason Hatchell is back and he led the team in tackles last year.

Northeastern will try to build on an impressive five-win season, which sounds odd. Northeastern was 1-4 before playing its first home game on Oct. 7, then won four of its last six.

Fifteen starters return and the emphasis would appear to be smash-mouth offense. The Huskies will lead with 6-0, 220-pound senior tailback Maurice Murray, a second-team all-league selection in each of the last two seasons who has gained 2,385 career rushing yards.

The top defensive assignment at Northeastern is to get off the field. No league team gave up more passing TDs than the Huskies (19). Seven defensive starters are back to address that problem, and the best is linebacker Joe Mele, who recorded 5.5 tackles for loss last season.

Even when Maine lost last season, its defense played well. That strength is likely to continue as the Black Bears bring back all three linebackers, including three-year regular John Wormuth, among six returning defensive starters.

No team in I-AA was better against the run than Maine (63.9 ypg allowed) in 2006, and the Black Bears, while going 6-5, led the league in scoring defense (13.1 ppg) and total defense (229.9 ypg).

In addition to Wormuth, who was responsible for 5.7 tackles a game, Maine features defensive lineman Bruno Dorsimond, a 6-4, 295-pound senior who recorded eight tackles for loss last season, and junior linebacker Andrew Downey.

Maine has more offensive starters returning (8), but the Bears will break in a new quarterback after losing four-year starter Ron Whitcomb, a pass/run threat.

Hofstra's Rob Zarrilli excels at scoring points, but not TDs. That's the good and the bad for the Pride, coming off a 2-9 season.

Zarrilli checks in for his last college season as one of the nation's best kickers. The 6-0, 203-pound senior made 18 of 21 field-goal attempts as a junior, and 17 of 19 as a sophomore. A two-time all-conference performer, Zarrilli also earned 2006 All-America recognition.

Hofstra averaged a league-low 16.8 points a game, was last in rushing (69.0 ypg) and made good on only 27 percent of its third-down opportunities while getting used to Cohen's system. A new quarterback will take over and do plenty of handing off to senior Kareem Huggins, who gained 572 yards last season. Senior receiver Charles Sullivan has 152 catches in three seasons.

Among nine returning starters on defense is sophomore linebacker Luke Bonus, the conference's 2006 Defensive Rookie of the Year, and fellow linebacker Gian Villante, a former All-American (2004) who earned all-conference honors last season.

Rhode Island Coach Tim Stowers adopted "Finish What We Start" as the Rams' motto this season. The team has had more good beginnings than finishes during Stowers' seven seasons at Rhode Island.

The Rams will have experience, particularly in their option offense that returns 10 starters. Rhode Island went 4-7 last season and each of its skill players was a freshman or sophomore. Bank on the Rams running primarily with junior fullback Joe Casey (who had offseason shoulder surgery), a two-time all-league pick who gained 874 yards last season and a conference-leading 1,245 yards as a freshman.

SOUTH DIVISION

Delaware went 5-6 last year, only its second losing season since 1987. Considering their 6-5 finish in 2005, the Blue Hens' distinction as the league's flagship program has faded. With the talent Delaware returns and brought in, however, resurrection is likely.

Ten offensive starters are back, most notably quarterback Joe Flacco, a strong-armed 6-6 senior, and running back Omar Cuff, who led the team in rushing during each of the last three seasons and has career totals of 2,419 yards and 30 TDs. Flacco passed for more than 200 yards seven times and set a school record for completions last season.

The lone offensive loss is a significant one: All-American Ben Patrick, who led all I-AA tight ends in receptions (64). But Delaware still has Aaron Love, a junior wide receiver/punt returner who is among the league's best at each position.

Defensive improvement is paramount for a program that last season allowed an average of 397.7 yards (108th of 116 I-AA teams). Coach K.C. Keeler used nine true freshmen in 2006, and accepted a few transfers who should immediately fortify resistance this season. Junior end Ronald Talley (6-4, 260 pounds) was a part-time starter at Notre Dame; junior linebacker Johnathon Smith started some at Connecticut; and junior cornerback Marvin McKinnie comes from the junior-college ranks.

Back from a separated shoulder is Matt Marcorelle, who will be the first sophomore in program history to serve as a captain. Two years ago as a starting true freshman, the quick 6-2, 250-pound defensive end collected four sacks among his nine tackles for loss.

Towson plays home games at Johnny Unitas Stadium and, appropriately, may have the league's most productive passing attack for the second consecutive season.

Quarterback Sean Schaefer averaged 303.3 passing yards a game and threw for 19 TDs with just nine interceptions last year. The junior will have one of the nation's most imposing receivers in 6-9 junior Tommy Breaux, who is also a starting forward on the Tigers' basketball team.

Four starters return on an offensive line that Coach Gordy Combs wants to run-block with a bit more this season. Senior Nick Williams, bothered by a hamstring last season on the way to 327 yards, gets the first crack at featured back. Williams is a three-year starter with 1,453 career yards who also plays lacrosse at Towson. The Tigers are high on running back Jas Lee Rouson, a 5-11, 225-pound redshirt freshman.

Three linebackers return, led by senior Brian Bradford, a four-year starter, and senior John Webb, a three-year starter. The secondary also has three starters back.

Over the last three seasons, James Madison went 29-9 and won the 2004 national championship. The major difference in 2007 is that Justin Rascati won't be playing quarterback. The three-year starter minimized turnovers, made plays when necessary as a runner or passer and was a mature team leader.

Junior Rodney Landers may be more athletic than Rascati, but nobody knows how Landers will handle himself as the starting QB. Because of that, JMU Coach Mickey Matthews will probably give senior running back Eugene Holloman (who gained 1,085 yards last year) plenty of work.

There were significant departures on both sides of the ball, but Matthews also has 12 returning starters. James Madison brings back 5-7 senior L.C. Baker, a wideout and dangerous punt returner who has more than 1,000 career yards.

Senior safety Tony LeZotte (6-0, 200 pounds) is a four-year starter and hard hitter who excels in run support. A three-time all-league pick, LeZotte will lead a defense that's missing linebacker Akeem Jordan, the league's 2006 Defensive Player of the Year. The Dukes will also be without standout defensive end Kevin Winston, but have a couple of solid defensive linemen back in John Baranowsky and Hassan Abdul-Wahid.

Richmond went 6-5 last season with an experienced defense and young offense. The arrangement now reverses. The Spiders need to replace eight defensive starters, but have four offensive linemen back to go along with senior tailback Tim Hightower, senior receiver Arman Shields and sophomore QB Eric Ward.

The Spiders will again lean hard on the 225-pound Hightower and the blocking of Tim Silver, Derek Stoudt, Aaron Miller and Matt McCracken.

Two of the league's best linebackers, Adam Goloboski and Lance Gray, are gone, as is all-league defensive lineman Johnny Campbell. Richmond needs big seasons from senior defensive end Sherman Logan, a former league Defensive Rookie of the Year who missed spring ball with a back problem, junior defensive end Lawrence Sidbury Jr. and senior defensive back Stephen Howell.

William & Mary hopes for a blast from the past. The Tribe was one of the league's most consistent winners for an extended stretch after joining in 1993. But a 5-6 season in 2005 was followed by a 3-8 finish last year, the lowest victory total since 1982.

Adrian Tracy, a 6-4, 235-pound sophomore defensive end, is a pass-rushing specialist. He and junior cornerback Derek Cox will lead a defense that could use a few more physical playmakers.

William & Mary finished 11th among league teams in total defense last year (394.8 ypg). The Tribe has rarely featured one of the conference's best defenses, but commonly would make up for defensive issues with a highly productive offense. However, the Tribe averaged just 19.0 points last year, third worst in the conference.

Senior Mike Potts and junior Jake Phillips have both started at QB in the past with mixed results. William and Mary isn't expected to select a starter until preseason practice. The other major question is at tailback. Elijah Brooks was the Tribe's top ball-carrier for three seasons and gained 2,945 career yards. But he's now gone, and the first shot at running back will go to DeBrian Holmes, who missed spring ball following ankle surgery.

Whoever ends up playing quarterback will look to 6-3 senior wideout Joe Nicholas, who has seven 100-yard receiving games and 2,127 career receiving yards. Four starters on the offensive line also return.

Villanova won the final four. Not the hoops version, but its last four games of 2006, a finish that "gives us a great deal of confidence," according to Coach Andy Talley.

The Wildcats went 6-5, but the late-season charge was important for a program that had dropped nine of 12 games dating back to 2005. Villanova's goal is to re-acclimate sophomore quarterback Antwon Young to the college game as quickly as possible following a redshirt season. The 6-4, 200-pound Young played a very limited role as a true freshman two years ago.

Transition season or no, Gateway power shows

By RANDY REINHARDT, Bloomington (Ill.) Pantagraph

Elite conferences in the Football Championship Subdivision/I-AA love to stake claim to the unofficial title of No. 1 league in the classification.

The Gateway stated its case quite eloquently in 2006, as Youngstown State, Southern Illinois and Illinois State all advanced to the national quarterfinals.

The Penguins, Salukis and Redbirds all harbor legitimate aspirations for another successful campaign, as does Northern Iowa, which fell one game short of adequate playoff credentials last year. All four teams finished 2006 in the top 17 of the national rankings and appear once again to be worthy of that lofty caliber.

This is a transition season for the Gateway, which now has seven teams with the departure of Western Kentucky to I-A and the Sun Belt Conference. Then, in 2008, league membership will swell to nine when South Dakota State and North Dakota State join the ranks.

Having made the playoffs in odd-numbered years and missing the postseason in even-numbered years each season since 2000, Northern Iowa is certainly glad seven is an odd number. But the Panthers, who have had winning seasons in 17 of the past 18 years, are even happier with the abundance of talent returning from a 7-4 squad.

Senior quarterback Eric Sanders guided Northern Iowa to the national championship game in 2005 and is back for his third season under center. The veteran signal-caller has plenty of support in running backs Corey Lewis and Darian Williams and receivers Johnny Gray and Terrell Allen. Ranked fourth nationally in total offense last year, the Panthers also boast four returning starters up front, led by All-Gateway tackle Chad Rinehart.

An experienced defense featuring safeties Chris Parsons and Clifford Waters and linebacker Brannon Carter will get assistance from a influx of junior-college players. Star cornerback Dre Dokes will be difficult to replace, as will all-league kicker Brian Wingert.

Illinois State's All-Gateway quarterback, Luke Drone, passed for 21 touchdowns and nearly 3,000 yards last season and brings a formidable group of offensive linemen in Isaiah Wiggins, Jonathan St-Pierre, Brandon Joyce and Joe Niklasch back with him.

The Redbirds, who face the Gateway's toughest non-conference schedule, must replace record-setting tailback Pierre Rembert. But Rafael Rice, Geno Blow and Iowa State transfer Mitchell Moore appear capable. The receiving corps is untested beyond Jason Horton.

If the Redbirds have a sixth consecutive Gateway Defensive Player of the Year, it will likely be speedy outside linebacker Kye Stewart, who totaled 126 tackles and 11 stops for loss last year. Illinois State's biggest question mark (2006 Gateway Defensive Player-of-the-Year Cameron Siskowic has graduated) may be the two linebackers who will join Stewart. Defensive backs Jesse Caesar and Tom Nelson and lineman Jarek Thomas are proven assets.

Illinois State is 16-8 over the past two seasons and Coach Denver Johnson was rewarded with a four-year contract extension.

Hit harder by graduation than any Gateway team, Youngstown State lost 27 lettermen and eight first-team All-Gateway performers from an 11-3 team that was eliminated in the playoffs by national champion Appalachian State. The departures include tailback Marcus Mason and his 1,847 yards rushing, an All-America center in Ryan Jewell and secondary studs Codera Jackson and Jason Perry.

The defense should have a solid front seven, with Mychal Savage anchoring the line and James Terry starring at linebacker in an alignment that may give more of a 4-3 look (from a 3-4) under new coordinator Jeff Mills. The Penguins will benefit from the return of linebacker Jeremiah Wright, who recorded 26 tackles in two games last year before suffering a season-ending injury.

With 36 career starts, quarterback Tom Zetts is a beacon of stability for an offense in transition. Jabari Scott and Jordan Edwards will get an opportunity at tailback, while tight end Derrick Bush and wide receiver Rory Berry will aid the passing game.

Southern Illinois will dearly miss All-America tailback Arkee Whitlock and his 1,828 rushing yards and 25 touchdowns. While John Randle is his heir apparent, more focus will fall on quarterback Nick Hill. After completing nearly 62 percent of his passes and tossing only four interceptions last year, Hill will have the support of seasoned linemen Darren Marquez, Andrew Kernes, Shawn Smith and Aaron Lockwood.

Standout return specialist Craig Turner is a pro prospect at cornerback. Linebacker Brandin Jordan was last season's conference Freshman of the Year. Tackle Andre Tillman, linebacker Chauncy Mixon and safety A.J. Wallace are other defensive stalwarts.

The Salukis are seeking their fifth consecutive playoff appearance under Coach Jerry Kill.

The Gateway in 2006 was definitely the year of the tailback with Whitlock, Mason and Rembert all making the top 11 in voting for the Walter Payton Award. Lost in the luster was Western Illinois' Herb Donaldson. As a sophomore, Donaldson rushed for 1,417 yards and 18 touchdowns.

Donaldson will be the focus of opposing defenses as one of just three returning offensive starters for the Leathernecks, along with receiver Carl Sims and lineman Drew Sweeney. Will Ducey will try to move up from being Steve LaFalce's backup the past two seasons at quarterback.

Linebacker Jerome Bennett, third in Gateway tackles last season, paces eight returning defensive starters. Linebacker Jason Williams and backs Milan Woodard, Trokon Tompo and Patrick Stoudamire join Bennett in what should be an improved defense.

While 18 losses came first, Indiana State got its first win under Coach Lou West in the 1-10 campaign of 2006. Remaining patient, West continues to build from the ground up with high school players.

Tony West, the coach's son, will be a workhorse running back behind four returning starters on the line after rushing for 791 yards a year ago. Quarterback Reilly Murphy passed for 1,770 yards, but he could be challenged by Charles Dowdell.

The Indiana State defense gets a much-needed new look after coughing up nearly 45 points per game last season. New coordinator Steve Barrows brings a 3-3-5 stack alignment from Charleston Southern.

Expect progress in Coach Terry Allen's second season at Missouri State. Slow progress, that is, as a mere seven starters return from a 2-9 team that averaged a league-low 281.6 yards per game in 2006.

Bison to take Great West crown as parting gift

By MIKE GIGLIO, Street & Smith's Editorial Intern

The fledgling Great West Conference sprinted ahead of the I-AA/FCS field in just its third year out of the gate. Four of the five teams finished among the top 16 in the Gridiron Power Index, led by North Dakota State at No. 3. The Bison were 10-1 overall (including a victory over Division I-A Ball State) with their sole defeat coming from the Big Ten in a 10-9 loss at Minnesota.

Cal Poly (No. 12), UC Davis (No. 14) and South Dakota State (tied for 16th) combined for a 20-13 overall record, notching big wins along the way. The Great West finished ahead of the MAC and Sun Belt in the 2006 Sagarin Ratings as well.

But size matters in I-AA, where a conference needs six teams to qualify for an automatic playoff berth. This bodes ill for the precocious yet unstable Great West. North Dakota State and South Dakota State will jump to the Gateway next year in pursuit of a more certain future and that all-important auto bid, as both programs continue their fast-paced ascent after moving up from Division II in 2004.

Great West Commissioner Ed Grom calls the planned departures "a disappointment, but not a shock," saying the conference was formed with the understanding that teams would be free to seek out other opportunities. Gateway Commissioner Patty Viverito describes the Great West as a short-term "marriage of convenience." Northern Colorado left for the Big Sky in 2005.

The conference hopes to solidify its future by adding two schools eager to mimic recent history. The Universities of North and South Dakota have informally agreed to join the Great West as provisional members in 2008, and the programs are adding scholarships and scheduling opponents in anticipation of crossing over from Division II. All four teams in the Dakotas were very competitive when they played together in the North Central Conference.

In the interim, the conference could again emerge as the class of I-AA, with North Dakota State repeating as best in the West. With a talented Bison trio including conference-leading rusher Kyle Steffes now trying out in the NFL, Coach Craig Bohl has some serious holes to fill. But he returns a strong core of veterans—eight on each side of the ball and both kickers—and will look to build on last season's conference title.

Senior Steve Walker quarterbacked an offense that led the conference with 398.9 yards and 34.0 points per game. He and receiver Kole Heckendorf, coming off a season with 52 catches for 752 yards and five scores, share the burden of replacing Steffes' production. Tyler Roehl becomes the feature back after starting at fullback. Street & Smith's preseason All-American Nate Safe will anchor the line up front.

The Bison allowed just 67.2 yards per game on the ground last year and gave up the fewest points in the conference. Two defensive stalwarts were lost to graduation at tackle and safety, but the starting linebackers return along with three veterans on the line. Free safety Nick Schommer (3 INTs, 1 TD) will again patrol the secondary.

The traditionally powerful Cal Poly defense has a lot of new faces this season. Sophomore Ryan Shotwell (7 sacks, 9.5 tackles for loss) will see more action at the flex position as he works to help fill the shoes of older brother Kyle, who won the Buck Buchanan Award (given to the top I-AA defensive player) last year. The Mustangs will also count on improved play from Sean Lawyer on the interior and solid efforts from their capable veteran linebackers.

Coach Rich Ellerson may need to rely more on his offense to control games, and he has the back to do it in James Noble, who has rushed for at least 1,000 yards the past two years. Cal Poly has a top center in Stephen Field and will need his presence to solidify a line that could start as many as three redshirt freshmen. Jonathan Dally is pushing Matt Brennan for the chance to throw to receiver Ramses Barden, who averaged nearly 20 yards over 42 catches last year.

After dropping its first three contests in 2006, South Dakota State went on a seven-win tear before losing its final match for the Great West crown. The stretch included consecutive one-point stunners over Cal Poly and UC Davis, both relying on fourth-quarter heroics and the steady leg of senior kicker Parker Douglass, who has broken many of Adam Vinatieri's school records.

The Jackrabbits may not have lost their fight, but the offense graduated the bulk of its firepower in running back Anthony Watson, quarterback Andy Kardoes and receiver Micah Johnson. Coach John Stieglemeier is confident in replacing Watson with Cory Koenig, who consistently gets midrange yards, but the situation remains unsettled under center. Junior Ryan Berry has the advantage over senior Reed Burckhardt heading into camp. JaRon Harris looks ready to take over as the main receiving threat.

The defense is rebuilding in the secondary, where sure-tackling Andrew Hoogeveen will move from outside linebacker to strong safety to help the cause. The strength of the Jackrabbits lies up front, where linemen Eric Schroeder, Jason Bonwell and Danny Batten combined for 29 backfield stops. Senior Justin Kubesh (79 tackles) leads the unit at middle linebacker.

Three close losses marred its conference record in 2006, but UC Davis fields a talented young team that could surprise in its first year of playoff eligibility. The defense boasts a strong linebacker corps, with redshirt freshman Dozie Amajoyi looking to make a major impact. The offensive line graduated three-year starters at both tackle spots, but two transfers are poised to take over, and the interior looks solid behind center Tommy Hernandez. Redshirt freshman Joe Trombetta (6-0, 220 pounds) runs a 4.5 40 and could have a breakout year out of the backfield. A deep group of receivers and tight ends figures to alleviate the loss of conference-leading receiver Tony Kays, but the Aggies must replace top quarterback Jon Grant and have yet to name his successor.

Southern Utah hasn't kept up in the Great West. The Thunderbirds went 2-3 in the conference's inaugural campaign but dropped to 1-4 in 2005 before going winless last season, during which they gave up the most points in the conference while scoring the fewest. Their chances of improving rest on senior QB Wes Marshall, who ranked second in the conference for total offense with 1,942 yards through the air and 366 on the ground.

Bulldogs will have plenty of bite in '07

By STEVE SILVERMAN, Street & Smith's correspondent

Yale looms as the lead dog with Princeton following closely behind as the Ivy League prepares for the 2007 season.

Both teams appear to be ahead of the rest of the pack, and the Bulldogs have an edge at quarterback over the Tigers. Matt Polhemus has the physical tools to take over a game and the intelligence and instincts to figure out the weaknesses in opposing defenses.

The Tigers have to find an adequate replacement for QB Jeff Terrell, who had been described by longtime Ivy League followers and many scouts as the heart and soul of the Princeton team. If Coach Roger Hughes can get consistent play from Bill Foran, the Ivy League title could come down to a late-season meeting (Nov. 10) between the two teams at Princeton.

Yale (8-2, 6-1 Ivy) has the weapons to defend the league championship it shares with Princeton. There is little doubt that the Bulldogs should have one of the most exciting offenses in the league. Quarterback Matt Polhemus and running back Mike McLeod are both explosive players, and should benefit from three returning starters off last year's offensive line.

Polhemus is not a prolific passer, but he has a knack for making big plays when the game is on the line. He completed 109 of 208 passes for 1,437 yards with five touchdowns and six interceptions last year. Those numbers may appear to be average, but throw in the fact that Polhemus averaged 5.7 yards as a runner and his accuracy improved in the fourth quarter, and Coach Jack Siedlecki knows he has a dependable quarterback. The key to the offense is the running of McLeod, who may be the best offensive player in the conference. McLeod won All-Ivy first-team honors in 2006, running for 1,364 yards and 19 touchdowns.

The defense should be one of the strongest units in the league. The Bulldogs return nine of 11 starters, including senior defensive tackle Brandt Hollander, who had 24 tackles and four sacks in 2006 while winning All-Ivy honors.

Princeton (9-1, 6-1) will try to challenge Yale for Ivy supremacy. It won't be easy after losing QB Jeff Terrell to graduation. Coach Roger Hughes will look to junior Bill Foran to fill the void. Foran led the Tigers on a 50-yard scoring drive in last year's 31-28 win over Harvard, but he will have to hold off Greg Mroz and Brian Anderson to win the job outright. Foran is an excellent athlete with great speed, but needs to improve in reading defenses.

Wide receiver Brendan Circle should be the Tigers' go-to receiver. He is a game-changing player who led the team with 56 receptions for 835 yards and seven touchdowns last year.

Harvard (7-3, 4-3) will have to find a way to offset the loss of running back Clifton Dawson, the All-Ivy running back who plans on playing in the NFL this year even if he wasn't invited to participate in the league's Scouting Combine. Dawson, the Ivy League's all-time rushing leader who concluded his career with a 1,213-yard, 20-TD season, will be very difficult to replace. Cheng Ho will have the best opportunity to take over that role. Ho ran for 145 yards and averaged 4.7 yards per carry last year while getting into the end zone once.

Quarterbacks Liam O'Hagan and Chris Pizzotti will have to step up for Coach Tim Murphy. Pizzotti completed less than 50 percent of his passes, but was able to keep his interceptions to a minimum, throwing five all season. He needs to get more aggressive and productive as the running game is bound to go through a rebuilding phase.

Penn (5-5, 3-4) could throw itself into Ivy contention if it can get a tad luckier. The Quakers suffered three straight overtime losses (to Yale, Brown and Princeton) a year ago, the first team in NCAA history to suffer that fate. Penn also lost the season finale to Cornell 28-27. All of the overtime losses were due to errors in the kicking game, so Coach Al Bagnoli knows that a slight correction in that area could turn his team around. Linebacker Joe Anastasio is the clear leader of a hard-hitting defense. Anastasio had 102 tackles a year ago and has the kind of nasty, punishing attitude that coaches look for.

Cornell Coach Jim Knowles knows how to get the most out of his players and has established himself as one of the better coaches in the Ivy League as he prepares for his fourth season. The Big Red (5-5, 3-4) return 14 starters and should have the best rushing attack in the league. Luke Siwula and Shayne Kilcoyne are the mainstays of a running game that averaged 182 yards per outing last year.

Norries Wilson established consistency and toughness in his first season at Columbia. The first black head coach in the history of the league led the team to its first conference win in 17 games when Columbia defeated Cornell last November. He followed up that home win with another on the road against Brown to close the season.

The Lions (5-5, 2-5) have plenty of momentum heading into the 2007 season. They are a strong defensive team that didn't allow any opponents to score more than 25 points in a game last year. Junior linebacker Drew Quinn is the anchor of that defense.

Not much has gone right for Dartmouth Coach Buddy Teevens in his second stint directing the Big Green. While Teevens is known as an innovator with great drive, Dartmouth (2-8, 2-5) has been going through difficult times since he returned in 2005.

Teevens remains confident that he will be able to get his team turned around in 2007. With three recruiting classes under his belt and a serious commitment in the weight room, Teevens believes Dartmouth will show improvement.

The Big Green need to find a quarterback since Mike Fritz has moved on after leading the team in rushing and ranking second in the Ivy League for passing efficiency. Senior Tom Bennewitz has the inside track at replacing him. Wide receiver Carroll Papajohn may be sought out by the pizza chain if he can meet or exceed what he averaged per catch (28.6 yards) on the JV squad.

The best player on the defense is linebacker Justin Cottrell, who led Dartmouth with 95 tackles last year.

The Brown Bears (3-7, 2-5) have slipped dramatically since winning their surprising Ivy League championship in 2005. That was running back Nick Hartigan's final year, and Coach Phil Estes could not find an adequate replacement last season. The defense faces a similar situation with the departure of linebacker Zak DeOssie, who led the league with 110 tackles a year ago. If Brown is going to exceed minimal expectations, Estes will have to get solid play from an experienced crew of receivers.

Dukes look to hand out parting punishment

By STEVE AMEDIO, Schenectady (N.Y.) Gazette

There will be a new world for the Duquesne football program to conquer next year, but before that happens the Dukes will likely continue to dominate their current realm and capture a ninth consecutive Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference championship.

Duquesne will join the Northeast Conference and begin awarding football scholarships in 2008, which seems like a natural move for a program that has seemingly owned the MAAC since joining in 1994. But that doesn't mean it will steamroll through its final season, and one conference opponent showed last year that it's not impossible to defeat the mighty Dukes.

Iona turned in the biggest MAAC football shock in recent history, upending Duquesne 17-13 to hand the Dukes their first conference loss after 39 consecutive victories. Can any team duplicate that feat this year?

Probably not. Duquesne (7-3, 3-1 MAAC) returns 18 starters—nine on offense, seven on defense and its kicker and punter—for third-year Coach Jerry Schmitt, the MAAC Coach of the Year in his first two seasons with the program.

The only question mark for Duquesne appears to be the secondary, where three first-team All-MAAC performers have graduated.

The Dukes get plenty back elsewhere on defense with seven all-conference selections returning, including linebackers John Simmons, Greg Hough and Eric Halberstadt and senior defensive end Travis Decker, who led the league with nine sacks last year.

The Dukes are every bit as strong offensively behind the 2006 MAAC Offensive co-Player of the Year, Bruce Hocker. He made 61 catches for 1,070 yards and 16 scores from his wideout position last season.

Getting the ball to Hocker will be junior quarterback Scott Knapp, who broke school records for completions and accuracy last year. His 209 completions on 351 attempts gave him a 59.5 percentage.

The only concern on the offensive side will be finding a starter at running back. It should be junior Dennis Void, who gained 170 yards on 49 carries a year ago. He'll go to work behind an offensive line that was inexperienced entering last season, but now returns intact with three all-conference selections, led by first-team center Matt Stansfield.

It was Iona that finally completed the difficult task of knocking off Duquesne in 2006. If that feat is to take place again this season, the most qualified candidate is Marist (4-7, 3-1), which has lost only to the Dukes in each of its past three seasons in the MAAC. Duquesne's misstep last year enabled the Red Foxes to earn a share of the MAAC regular-season crown for the first time since 1994.

While Marist has holes to fill, its offensive backfield is among the best in the league. That will hold particularly true if 5-11, 220-pound running back Obozua Ehikioya is fully recovered from the wrist injury that ended his season midway through Marist's second game of 2006. He finished with 111 yards on 28 carries after gaining 1,017 yards as a sophomore.

Teams won't be able to key on Ehikioya, because senior quarterback Stephen McGrath (151-for-239, 2,014 yards passing) is also a threat, and he has a big target in 6-4 senior Tim Keegan (22 catches last season). Ehikioya will share the rushing load with senior Adam Hanson, who had four touchdowns in a game against St. Peter's last year, and sophomore O'Neil Anderson, who turned in a breakout performance against Georgetown late in the campaign.

The Red Foxes will rely on an offensive line anchored by senior Dan Cooper, a first-team all-conference selection in 2006.

Defensively, Marist has one of the top MAAC corners in senior Dan Diaz and the league's best punter in senior Brad Rowe (35.7-yard average). Although the defense allowed 346.7 yards per game last year, it should be significantly better with four returnees who earned second-team all-conference honors.

Iona (3-7, 2-2) suffered some serious losses from the squad that stunned Duquesne a season ago, especially on offense, where seven starters are gone.

But co-Offensive Player-of-the-Year Dane Samuels returns after leading the conference with 698 rushing yards in 10 games. Samuels also had 30 catches and averaged 27.4 yards on 16 kick returns. Quarterback Dustin Croick, who completed 135 passes for 1,477 yards last year, is back as well.

Defensively, the Gaels allowed just 232 yards per game in 2006, third among I-AA teams. The unit graduated its top two linemen but returns nine players who started at least one game a year ago.

Among them are standout linebackers Jared Scotto and Andrew Lipski and defensive backs Reggie Dorsainvil, Ed Loscalzo and Matt McGuire—all first-team all-league picks last year.

After scoring one touchdown or fewer in four of its first nine games, La Salle (3-7, 1-3) showed some late-season offensive punch in its season-ending 37-28 victory over Saint Peter's, which might have been a sign of things to come.

The Explorers had 10 freshmen start at least one game last year and brought in another solid recruiting class, led by running back Deric Dudinski, Virginia's Class AA High School Player of the Year last season. He will see plenty of time, as Dave Macknet is Iona's top returning rusher with 101 yards.

The offense is otherwise solid, led by sophomore quarterback Chris Hanson (98-for-163, 973 yards passing). Hanson completed 28 of 36 throws for 322 yards in the season finale with Saint Peter's. His prime target will likely be junior Shane Kendrick.

Half of Iona's eight leading tacklers return, led by linebackers Stephante Kent (47) and Casey Walsh (46) and defensive end Brian Winn (39).

Saint Peter's (1-3, 2-8) also showed enough a year ago to indicate things could be better this season—but only if the team can find a running game to complement its passing attack. The Peacocks produced 2,480 yards through the air but managed a net of just 379 yards with their ground attack.

This means the aerial attack will be important again, and the Peacocks have a good one with quarterback Scott Bonnono (241-of-431, 2,470 yards, 15 TDs) at the helm.

Despite numerous losses to the NFL, Hampton is still master of the MEAC

By LUT WILLIAMS, Black College Sports Page

How Hampton Coach Joe Taylor has been able to produce three consecutive Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference championship teams was on full display at this year's NFL Combine. Five of Taylor's seniors received invitations and showed off their talents before a bevy of NFL scouts. Their showing garnered feature stories from USA Today, the Washington Post and the New York Times.

While the attention and exposure points to the quality of players Taylor is recruiting at Hampton, it also means the Pirates have some big holes to fill as they try to win their fourth consecutive title.

But Taylor has plenty left in the fold and restocked the talent pool with another great recruiting year. Where the Pirates will be short this year is in experience, which may create openings for the teams chasing them: South Carolina State, Delaware State and Florida A&M, which all have veteran QBs at the controls.

Morgan State made some strides last season and finished just outside the top four, tied with Howard, and was the only MEAC team to make a coaching change in the offseason. Former Minnesota assistant Carey Bailey takes over the Bison with the departure of Ray Petty. Bethune-Cookman, Norfolk State and North Carolina A&T took steps backwards last season and will look to regroup.

Coach Joe Taylor countered the loss of seniors that were 26-4 in their four years at Hampton (10-2 overall, 7-1 MEAC) with a 19-member recruiting class that includes both defensive (linebacker Jacobi Fenner) and offensive (tailback Dennis Mathis) players of the year from the talent-rich Tidewater, Va., area.

Redshirt sophomore TJ Mitchell (372 yards, 3 TDs) takes over at QB while Kevin Beverly (746, 12) moves into the starting tailback role. Jeremy Gilchrist (19 receptions, 209 yards) and Kevin Teel are the top receivers.

The strength of the team is the defensive line, which features three All-MEAC-caliber players—defensive ends Kendall Langford (55 tackles, 8 sacks) and Marcus Dixon (25, 4) and lineman Vernon Bryant.

South Carolina State (7-4, 6-2) bounced back from losing three of its first four games to win six of its final seven, including handing Hampton its only conference loss (13-6) in mid-October.

Gone is 1,200-plus-yard rusher and MEAC Offensive Player of the Year DeShawn Baker, but waiting in the wings is dangerous sophomore William Ford, who rambled for 752 yards and 10 scores as a freshman. Quarterback Cleveland McCoy (1,224 passing yards, 10 TDs, 420 rushing yards, 5 TDs) returns for his junior season along with wideouts Dustin Dubose and Terrance Smith.

You could almost count the seniors on last year's Florida A&M (7-4, 5-3) squad on one hand, yet the Rattlers managed to finish fourth.

With a host of returning players led on offense by second-team All-MEAC QB Albert Chester II, the league's passing (18 TDs) leader, and all-conference defenders in end Tyrone McGriff, cornerback Jason Beach (70 tackles, 4 INTs) and linebacker Vernon Wilder (89 tackles), the Rattlers appear poised to take steps up the ladder.

Willie Hayward (5 TDs) returns to lead a deep receiving group. Redshirt junior Anthony Edwards (536 yards, 5 TDs) and sophomore Deitric Henry (435 yards) head a stable of running backs. All-conference punter Wesley Taylor is also the league's top returning placekicker.

The only thing that kept Delaware State (8-3, 6-2) from tying for the conference title was a season-ending loss to Howard that came a week after starting QB Vashon Winton (1,171 passing yards, 10 TDs) went down with a broken ankle. Winton sat out spring practice but should be ready by the fall. His primary weapon is first-team All-MEAC wideout Shaheer McBride (11 TDs).

Coach Al Lavan lost several starters on defense but returns linebackers Russell Reeves, who led the team in tackles (85), and Kelly Rouse (47).

Ten returning starters on offense and eight on defense boost the prospects of Morgan State (5-6, 4-4) getting into contention for a conference title this season.

The job of ratcheting up an offense that scored just 18.1 points per game last year will fall to sophomore QB Mario Melton (5 TDs, 9 INTs), who needs to improve his decision-making and make better use of talented tailback Chad Simpson (795 yards, 9 TDs) and receiver Roderick Wolfe.

All-MEAC defensive end Terrell Floyd and tackles Dominique Laurent and Anthony Young are the stalwarts up front.

Alvin Wyatt's Bethune-Cookman (4-7, 3-5) Wildcats suffered a tough year, including their first shutout loss since 1997. The way back to prominence starts with senior QB Jimmie Russell (1,139 passing yards, 9 TDs).

Cornerback Bobbie Williams led the team in interceptions (6) last year. A senior-laden defense is also led by linebackers Rodney Hughes (42 tackles, 7 sacks) and Ronnie McCollough (73 tackles) and tackle Dennis King. Emmanuel Ware is a prep defensive talent.

A strong defense propelled Howard (5-6, 4-4) to wins in four of its final five games and will be the strong suit for the 2007 squad headed by new Coach Carey Bailey. Returning all-conference defensive end Rudolph Hardie (9.5) led the MEAC in sacks last year.

The offense struggled last season, scoring just 23 TDs in 11 games. The good news is the receiving corps may be the most talented on the team, led by Jarahn Williams, Larry Duncan and Arlandus Hood. Brian Johnson, who quarterbacked the Bison during their stretch drive, will have to prove himself against challengers Floyd Haigler and Darrell Turner. Karlos Whittaker (295 yards, 3 TDs) gets first crack as the primary ball-carrier.

Despite not improving on its 4-7 2005 record and winning one less conference game, it would be fair to say Norfolk State (4-7, 1-7) didn't take a step back in Coach Pete Adrian's second season. Three of its conference losses were by three points or less. To continue making strides, QB Casey Hansen (10 TDs, 16 INTs) needs to improve. Linebacker Maguell Davis (84 tackles) patrols the middle in a defense that also features corner Terrell Whitehead.

There were not many bright spots for North Carolina A&T (0-11, 0-8) during a winless 2006 season. Coach Lee Fobbs' young Aggies were outscored by an average of 43-10, holding only three teams below 40 points.

Curtis Walls and André Garth are an experienced receiving tandem. Wayne Campbell (9 TDs, 17 INTs), who took most of the snaps at QB last year, will be challenged by Herbert Miller this season.

Great Danes geared to run with I-AA big dogs

By STEVE AMEDIO, Schenectady (N.Y.) Gazette

The Northeast Conference not only continues to get stronger—particularly with the agreement two years ago for its members to offer up to 30 football scholarships apiece—but it also retains relative parity, at least among its better teams.

Last year, five of the eight members finished with better-than-.500 conference records. Although one of those, Stony Brook (5-2), has left the NEC for the Big South Conference, it will be replaced by longtime Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference power Duquesne in 2008.

At least four, maybe five, of this year's seven league members should remain strong, despite heavy losses throughout the conference in terms of individual talent. More NEC players drew at least some interest from NFL scouts in 2006 than ever before.

Albany (7-4, 5-2 NEC) earned arguably the best victory in the program's history in 2006 with a 17-10 shocker over Delaware, which was ranked 11th nationally in I-AA at the time. However, the Great Danes then lost the NEC title when they dropped a 19-0 decision to Monmouth in the season finale.

Albany had one of the best defenses nationally in 2006, ranking among the top five in three categories, including points allowed (13.0 per game). The defense should be just as strong this year, as linebacker Colin Disch, a two-time winner of the NEC's Defensive Player of the Year, returns. Returning starters Trevor DuPont and Mark Peretore will join Disch at linebacker.

On the line is defensive tackle Michael Dungey, a first-team All-NEC performer last season.

In the offseason, veteran Coach Bob Ford made some changes to the offense to improve a unit that ranked seventh of the eight NEC teams in total yards in 2006.

Among the most drastic is the move of last year's quarterback, junior Daniel Bocanegra, to flanker and handing over the signal-calling duties to sophomore Frank Blasinsky.

The offensive line returns Sam Pagano, a second-team All-NEC pick last year.

Omar Johnson (435 yards, 7 TDs) is the top returning rusher, and incoming freshman Terrell Dobbins could be an impact player at some point this season.

After winning the NEC a year ago, Monmouth (10-2, 6-1) loses nine first- or second-team All-NEC players to graduation.

The biggest hole to fill is at quarterback, where senior Brett Burke will be called on to replace four-year starter Brian Boland.

The Hawks' ground game will be powered by NEC Offensive-Rookie-of-the-Year David Sinisi, who averaged at least one touchdown a game last season.

But a year after limiting opponents to 152 total points (12.7 per game), tops in I-AA last season, the Hawks' defense is almost certain to take a step back with the loss of nine starters. The only returning regulars are senior linebacker T.J. Cerezo and senior defensive back Ayo Falae.

After sharing back-to-back league championships in 2004 and '05, Central Connecticut State (8-3, 4-3) didn't fall far in 2006, finishing just two games behind first-place Monmouth.

If the Blue Devils want to continue to challenge for the conference crown, though, they'll need to find a replacement for tailback Justise Hairston.

There is a solid candidate in place in redshirt junior Jo Jo Freeman, who gained 193 yards on 52 carries playing behind Hairston in 2006.

The team is also well set at quarterback, particularly if Aubrey Norris returns fully healthy after playing just three games last season. In his absence, Ryan Holmes was more than competent.

Defensively, several standouts return, most notably defensive back Anthony Wilson and senior linebacker Chris Stimmel, both second-team All-NEC picks in 2006.

Former NFL New York Jets head man Joe Walton is the only coach Robert Morris (7-4, 5-2) has had in its playing existence. Entering the program's 15th year, the Colonials have five NEC crowns and are always competitive.

Don't expect that to change this year, particularly with the young cast from 2006 coming back with a year's experience. Quarterback Erik Cwalinski, a junior, threw for 2,066 yards and 19 touchdowns last year, while sophomore Brian Harden led the Robert Morris ground attack with 399 yards as a freshman.

The Colonials did lose their top two pass catchers from last year, but seniors Mario Hines (23 catches) and Alvin Hill (21) should fill in nicely.

Defensively, Robert Morris also has key returnees in senior linebacker Chad Wengert and senior defensive back James Kazil, both second-team All-NEC performers last season.

Wagner (4-7, 0-7) didn't lose a non-conference game in 2006, but it couldn't win one in the NEC, either.

Defensive back Al Phillips was a first-team All-NEC pick last year, while linebacker Thomas Larsen was third on the team in tackles (78).

If Sacred Heart (2-9, 1-6) is to improve this season, it needs to find a replacement for graduated quarterback Tyler Arciaga, the school's all-time leader in passing yards. No other player threw a pass completion for the Pioneers last season. Junior Dennis Conrad, who appeared in only two games in 2006, looks to be Arciaga's replacement.

The Pioneers do have some quality pieces elsewhere on offense with their top two rushers returning—senior Jason Payne and junior Evin Jones—along with leading receiver Corey Bundy.

Optimism reigned last year for Saint Francis (Pa.), but the Red Flash (3-8, 2-5) won't be anywhere near as potent this season after losing the conference's all-time leading passer (Anthony Doria), their top two receivers (Michael Caputo and Luke Palko) and tailback Todd Harris.

Spoo doesn't expect to lose in return to EIU

By MICHAEL GRANT, The (Louisville) Courier-Journal

It should be another interesting year in the Ohio Valley Conference, with plenty of compelling storylines.

Two-time defending conference champion Eastern Illinois will welcome legendary Coach Bob Spoo back after dealing with medical issues during the 2006 season. Eastern Kentucky quarterback Josh Greco, the 2005 OVC Offensive Player of the Year, is battling for his starting job. Murray State is looking to end a 15-game conference losing streak. The OVC welcomes back Austin Peay for first time since 1996, while Samford, after joining the league in 2003, will leave for the Southern Conference in 2008.

Eastern Illinois (8-5, 7-1 OVC) had to win the conference championship with their coach sidelined for the season. The 70-year-old Bob Spoo is expected back this season after recovering from an undisclosed medical procedure. Considered the dean of OVC coaches, Spoo will try to get his program to its third straight conference title. The last OVC team to turn that trick was Eastern Kentucky (1986-88).

Eastern Illinois has 15 starters back, including eight on defense. The best returnee is linebacker Donald Thomas, the 2006 OVC Defensive Player of the Year.

The biggest question mark could be the offensive line, which has only two starters back in first-team All-OVC right tackle Anthony Rubican and left guard Drew Cairo-Gross. If the offensive line holds up, the offense should be solid. Senior quarterback Cole Stinson will get the ball early and often to junior wide receiver Micah Rucker, who led the conference in receiving yards (966) and touchdown catches (13) last season.

Tennessee-Martin (9-3, 6-1) enjoyed a breakthrough season in 2006 by winning its first-ever OVC title, sharing it with Eastern Illinois, and reaching the I-AA playoffs. On offense, the Skyhawks can rely on senior running back Donald Chapman, who led the conference and was 10th in the nation for rushing with 128.4 yards a game. Chapman also set a school record with 1,412 yards last season.

Defensively, leading tackler Nate Wilson, who finished fourth in the OVC for stops (48) among linemen, returns. If the Skyhawks' rebuilt defense holds up again in 2007 after leading the OVC in total yards allowed (255.5) last year, then Jason Simpson might earn consecutive Coach-of-the-Year awards.

It seems like every year Eastern Kentucky (6-5, 5-3) has quarterback issues. Senior Josh Greco is going to have to fight for his job against Allan Holland.

Greco's precipitous drop was puzzling. In 2005, he enjoyed one of the most productive passing seasons in Colonels history with 2,861 yards and 25 touchdowns. Last year, those numbers fell to 1,834 yards and 10 scores. Greco was still the starter at the end of the year, but he shared playing time with Holland, a Wake Forest transfer. Greco attributed his slump to a sprained ligament in his right index finger of his throwing hand, coupled with a broken toe on his left foot.

Whoever takes the snaps, though, will have plenty of weapons with running backs Mark Dunn and Bobby Washington and wide receivers Quinton Williams and Kyle Barber returning.

After spending the previous two seasons near the conference basement, Tennessee State (6-5, 5-2) finished a surprising third in 2006. With four All-OVC performers back in quarterback Antonio Heffner, running back Javarris Williams, offensive lineman Cecil Newton and defensive back Dominique Rodgers-Cromartie, the Tigers could be in line to win their first conference title since 1999.

Heffner was second in the OVC for passing yards per game (185.3) and his development will be greatly aided by Williams, who rushed for 1,233 yards last season. Rodgers-Cromartie collected a conference-high six interceptions.

It's tough to bet against Jacksonville State (6-5, 5-3). However, it seems like the rest of the conference is starting to catch up. After winning back-to-back championships (2003-04), the Gamecocks have finished third and fourth, respectively, over the past two years.

The offense should be tough to stop again with return of quarterback Matt Hardin. Last season he directed the highest-scoring squad in the conference (25.9 points per game). Jacksonville State also has a promising junior-college transfer in Cedric Johnson, who threw five touchdown passes in the spring game. Johnson originally signed with Illinois out of high school, but spent the past two seasons at Copiah-Lincoln (Miss.) Community College. Coach Jack Crowe already compares Johnson with former Gamecock All-American Montressa Kirby.

Tennessee Tech (4-7, 4-4) has a new coach in Watson Brown, who is familiar with league opponents, having been the head coach at Austin Peay (1979-80) and an assistant at Jacksonville State (1976-77). Brown, the former UAB head coach, is also returning to his hometown of Cookeville.

Tech returns the OVC's top passer in Lee Sweeney, who threw for 2,292 yards as a freshman.

Coach Tony Samuel is in his second season of rebuilding Southeast Missouri (4-7, 2-6). The Redhawks showed remarkable improvement last year after finishing 2-9 overall in 2005. They are searching for a quarterback to replace Kevin Ballatore. Southeast Missouri has a trio of candidates in Houston Lillard, Steve Callanan and Victor Anderson, who have exactly zero experience.

Murray State (1-10, 0-8) hasn't won a conference game in two years and will be young again as a total 57 freshmen and sophomores return. The biggest improvement must come from a defense that yielded 35.1 points and 430.4 yards per game last season—both worst in the league.

Samford (3-8, 1-7) could be bullied in its final season in the OVC before leaving for the Southern Conference in 2008. First-year Coach Pat Sullivan will try to guide the team through the transition. The 1971 Heisman Trophy-winning quarterback from Auburn and former UAB assistant will try to fix a stagnant offense, which averaged a league-worst 15.1 points per game last season.

Austin Peay's (3-8) return to the OVC will also be marked by the presence of a new coach. Rick Christophel replaces Carroll McCray, who left to become an assistant at Furman. Christophel, an Austin Peay alum, had been an assistant at UAB. The Governors lost all three games they played against OVC opponents last year.

Holy Cross primed to end Leopards' run

By ED LAUBACH
Easton (Pa.) Express-Times

Holy Cross came close to creating major upheaval in the Patriot League last year, capping a five-game winning streak by upsetting three-time defending champion Lafayette. But the Crusaders lost two of their final three contests and finished one game out of first place.

"We blew it at the end of the season," recalls Crusaders Coach Tom Gilmore.

Lehigh and Holy Cross have the experienced quarterbacks, Colgate the league's top rusher and Lafayette, with three consecutive appearances in the I-AA playoffs, the swagger—despite having to replace seven all-league first- and second-team players.

"We're trying to maintain our king-of-the-hill status," Lafayette Coach Frank Tavani says. "There is more work to be done; we've got to keep this thing going. We expect to win another championship, and then win a playoff game ... and a second, and a third and a fourth. ..."

Lafayette can become the first league team to make the playoffs in four consecutive years since Lehigh did so from 1998-2001.

Holy Cross will ride a productive young quarterback in Dominic Randolph, who led the league in total offense last season (258.4 yards per game). The Crusaders have a fleet of talented wideouts and return their secondary intact, bolstered by first-team all-league cornerback Casey Gough, a four-year starter.

"Gough's return is a huge, huge thing," says Coach Tom Gilmore.

And then there is the league's reigning Coach of the Year, Gilmore, who has his club poised to win the school's first league championship since 1991.

Randolph was injured in the 2006 opener and didn't return until the fifth week, when, in his first full college game, he was named the league's Offensive Player of the Week—the first of four in a row. For the season, he passed for 2,237 yards for a league-best 19 touchdowns with six interceptions, throwing primarily to Ryan Maher (797 yards, 6 touchdowns), Thomas Harrison (569, 4) and Brett McDermott (39, 518, 4).

Lehigh was No. 1 in the league in scoring offense, scoring defense and turnover margin last year, but was second behind Lafayette for the league's NCAA playoff bid after a 49-27 loss to the Leopards in college football's most-played rivalry. The Mountain Hawks' second-year coach, Andy Coen, is armed with three-year starter Sedale Threatt, the league's top returning quarterback and son of the former Philadelphia 76ers basketball star.

Threatt completed 61.4 percent of his passes for 2,008 yards and 14 touchdowns with five interceptions last season. Junior Jason Leo led the league in scoring as a kicker and punted for a 37.8-yard average.

Lehigh isn't without challenges up front, however. Coen will have three new defensive linemen and four new linebackers in his 3-4 defense. Most of the secondary does return, led by cornerback Julian Ahye and free safety Ernest Moore.

The six league championships Lafayette has won always featured proven performers at quarterback and running back. Coach Frank Tavani doesn't seem overly concerned with last year's backup, Maurice White, taking over at tailback and Mike DiPaola, a senior who paid his dues on the scout team, now at quarterback.

The six returning offensive starters include receiver Shaun Adair, who had 501 yards and four TDs in 2006.

Defensive tackle Kyle Sprenkle, outside linebacker Andy Romans and cornerback Adrian Lawson were all-league second-team picks last fall. Romans' 109 tackles led the Leopards and ranked fourth in the league. Among Sprenkle's 61 tackles were 13.5 for losses with four sacks.

Coach Dick Biddle accepted responsibility for his first losing season (4-7) in 11 years at Colgate, vowing this year's squad will get back to playing harder and with more focus.

The offense begins with junior tailback Jordan Scott, who has rushed for a school-record 2,598 yards in his first two seasons. Biddle and his staff went into the preseason unable to identify a new starter at quarterback. Erik Burke, a second-team All-Patriot wideout last year, leads the receiving corps, and the Raiders may have the Patriot's top tight end in Brent Dillingham, who's healthy for the first time in his career.

The Raiders also return veterans on the defensive line and All-America linebacker Mike Gallihugh, whose 140 tackles led Division I-AA.

Despite an improvement from 1-10 in 2005 to 6-5 last season at Bucknell, the Bison appear to be at least a year away. Seven freshmen were starting at the end of the season, and more than 60 players are underclassmen.

Coach Tim Landis' ground-oriented, spread-option offense took its usual toll on the Bison quarterbacks last year, as two went down, leaving freshman Marcello Trigg to start the last six games.

The return of some good, young offensive skill talent—fullback Josh DeStefano, running backs A.J. Kizekai and Rashod Bumpers, and wideouts Daniel Zvara and Cale Cadman—is balanced with the loss of three linemen. DeStefano was the Bison's leading rusher and a second-team all-league pick.

The defense, worst in the league a year ago, should be improved with the return of the entire line and linebacker Sam Nana-Sinkam, a freshman who burst onto the scene in 2006, recording 85 tackles.

Fordham provided its fans with a glimmer of hope at the end of a 3-8 season—Tom Masella's first as the Rams' coach—by storming back from a 21-10 halftime deficit to defeat Georgetown 38-30. Freshmen crashed Senior Day that afternoon as quarterback John Skelton passed for 288 yards and two scores and tailback Larry Dortch rushed for 127 yards and three TDs.

The Rams ranked worst in the league in total and red-zone offense and third-down conversions, were the most penalized and allowed the most sacks. But punter Benjamin Dato was named All-Patriot first team, averaging 44.6 yards. Other returning players include the Rams' top wideout, Sylvester Clarke, plus inside linebacker Earl Hudnell and cornerback Sam Orah.

Georgetown, which ranked at or near the bottom last year in total offense and turnover ratio, took at least two positive steps during the 2006 season with the emergence of Matt Bassuener at quarterback and tailback Charlie Houghton, who became the program's first player to win an award when he was named Patriot League Rookie of the Year. Houghton became a starter late in the season, rushing for 403 yards on 81 carries. Defensive players to watch include end Ataefiok Etukeren, linebacker Mike Greene and cornerback Kevin Cherepski.

Life after Harbaugh should still be sweet for USD

By MIKE GIGLIO, Street & Smith's Editorial Intern

When Jim Harbaugh bolted for the head-coaching job at Stanford this winter, the rest of the Pioneer Football League exhaled in a collective sigh of relief. In his short tenure at the helm of the Toreros, Harbaugh turned the PFL upside down, bringing premier talent and considerable swagger to a program long relegated to a back seat behind traditional powers Dayton and Drake.

San Diego was 14-1 in the league during Harbaugh's three seasons, winning back-to-back titles in addition to last year's inaugural Gridiron Classic victory over Northeast Conference champion Monmouth. The Toreros outpaced the competition by at least two touchdowns in all seven PFL matchups.

Ron Caragher has lofty expectations to meet after leaving his post as running backs coach and recruiting coordinator at the University of Kentucky to run the show in San Diego, and the rest of the league is anxious to gain ground. But the Toreros return core players from top-ranked units on both sides of the ball and threaten to build on their two-year undefeated streak in the league.

Ash's Bulldogs placed second a year ago and again figure to be in the foreground of a PFL picture that is difficult to discern after the top spot. Davidson has made considerable strides under Tripp Merritt and will continue to challenge, as could a talented, young Jacksonville squad. Dayton, after its first losing season in Coach Mike Kelly's 26-year tenure, figures to have a say as well.

Campbell University will shake things up in 2008 when the Camels join the PFL. The small Baptist school in Buies Creek, N.C., is reestablishing its football program after a 57-year hiatus.

For at least another year, no team should compete with San Diego. New Coach Ron Caragher will offer less hubris than his predecessor, but the Toreros haven't lost their high-profile firepower.

They will continue to overwhelm defenses behind the strong arm of senior quarterback Josh Johnson, the reigning PFL Offensive Player of the Year. Johnson led the league in passing yards (3,320), touchdowns (34) and efficiency (169.0) last year, and he produced on the ground as well (720 rushing yards, 11 scores). He and junior running back JT Rogan (1,002 yards, 14 TDs) spearhead an attack that put up 494.2 yards and 42.8 points a game in 2006. Senior linemen Jordan PaoPao and Gabe DeAnda, both first-team All-PFL selections, are back as well.

The league's Co-Defensive Player of the Year, Eric Bakhtiari, who led the PFL with eight sacks and 22 tackles for loss from the end position, returns for his senior year along with junior defensive back Patrick O'Neill (5 INTs). The Toreros allowed just 12.9 points per game in 2006.

Drake loses some key players from last season's second-ranked PFL defense and has holes to fill at linebacker and on the defensive line. Senior safety Jacob Craig is a big hitter (40 solo tackles in 2006) and will lead the secondary, along with junior Andy Green, who topped the league with five interceptions for 131 yards and a score last year.

The Bulldogs will rely on their dynamic backfield of senior fullback Willie Cashmore and senior tailback Scott Phaydavong, who rushed for a league-leading 1,613 yards last year, to maintain their grind-it-out style against the league's fast-paced offenses.

Tripp Merritt took a share of PFL Coach-of-the-Year honors in his second season at Davidson, as the Wildcats posted their best league mark since going 5-2 in the Southern Conference in 1969. They lived and died by the play of senior quarterback Ryan Alexander (2,581 yards, 21 TDs, 10 picks), dropping both of his multiple-interception PFL games. The 'Cats will lean even harder on Alexander in the absence of workhorse back Jonathan Hubbard, but Merritt thinks the winner of the three-back committee vying to replace him—headed by junior Chad Barne—should give the offense an extra step.

On defense, first-team All-PFL senior Patrick Fitzgerald (4 INTs) and junior Matt Easton will be patrolling the secondary with senior free safety Zach Long.

Dayton was plagued by injuries and inconsistencies in 2006, with four of its six PFL losses coming by a touchdown or less. With senior quarterback Kevin Hoyng (2,052 yards, 11 TDs, 8 INTs) returning to build on his school records, the offense will manage, but it needs to replace two seniors at receiver.

The defense returns seven starters and should be stellar behind the play of senior safety Brandon Cramer (52 tackles, 3 INTs) and linebacker Brian Kelly, who returns as a fifth-year senior after leading the PFL with 101 tackles in 2006.

Kerwin Bell takes over coaching duties at Jacksonville and must reinvent an injury-plagued defense that ranked last in the league a year ago. The former University of Florida quarterback has the players to make it happen, especially in the secondary where the Dolphins return sophomore Jason Wood (65 tackles) and juniors Aaron Woods (55) and Robson Noel (13 passes defended).

The offense will suffer without running back Jerry Brant, who played an integral part in the team's four conference wins in 2006. Junior quarterback Chris Horton (1,899 yards, 15 TDs, 11 INTs) needs to find a go-to target, as no Dolphins receiver had more than 30 catches a year ago.

Morehead State dropped a close PFL Championship Game to end the 2005 season, and the Eagles weren't the same in 2006. They lost their first five contests before finally beating Dayton in October. Now, top running back Jabari McGee is lost to graduation, and streaky senior quarterback Brian Yost will try to make do without a strong supporting cast.

Things may be looking up for a Butler program that has struggled for years. Coach Jeff Voris returns 15 starters from a team that went 3-8 overall (2-5 PFL) in his first season, matching the Bulldogs' win total from the previous three years. The Marzotto brothers return to lead the defense for their senior seasons. Defensive end Chris had seven sacks and 12.5 tackles for loss in 2006, while Mike was third in the PFL with 91 tackles at linebacker.

Valparaiso is coming off its third straight year with just one league win but will look forward to a boost from senior Jeff Horton, the school's career rushing leader who's coming back from a season-ending injury in 2006. Junior Steve Ogden might be the best receiver in the league; he led the PFL with 1,048 yards and scored eight times.

Gap shortened in Southern, but everyone's still trying to climb and reach the Mountaineers

By MATT McKENZIE, Street & Smith's Staff Writer

It seems that every year, one of the middle-tier Southern Conference teams pulls off a few upsets, followed by a label of true challenger to what has been known as "The Big Three." Since 1993, only two other schools besides Appalachian State, Furman or Georgia Southern have won the Southern Conference title: Marshall (1994 and '96), now in Conference USA, and Wofford (2003). And while Georgia Southern has fallen on hard times recently (more on that later), ASU and Furman don't show any signs of relinquishing the top spots.

The Mountaineers have won consecutive Southern titles for the first time since 1986-87. More importantly, Appalachian State has also captured consecutive I-AA national championships during that span as well. As the team begins its quest for an unprecedented three-peat, ASU Coach Jerry Moore says playing in a tough conference always helps prepare for the postseason.

"I think it's a classic example of week-to-week football," Moore says. "You better get ready to play every ballgame. Every team is well-coached and has talent. There's no easy game on the schedule. The minute you let your guard down, you're probably going to get blistered. Our job as a staff is to not let the players get that way."

If the Mountaineers do falter, the Paladins will be poised to jump to the top. As is the norm in Greenville, S.C., Coach Bobby Lamb has put together a solid defense and an offense that can move the chains with the best of them when healthy. No matter who wins the conference, both ASU and Furman are likely to earn postseason bids for the third straight year.

As for the Eagles, they'll be on their third coach in as many seasons after Brian VanGorder jumped ship for an NFL assistant's job with the Atlanta Falcons. A 3-8 season, Georgia Southern's worst in school history, wasn't exactly winning him votes with the Statesboro faithful anyway. The Eagles stayed in-state, dropped down and plucked Chris Hatcher from Division II Valdosta State to try and right the program.

Oh, and those previously mentioned challengers? This season, it looks to be Wofford and The Citadel, which both return numerous key players on offense and defense. But if that'll be enough to topple the current stronghold at the top by ASU and Furman remains to be seen.

Appalachian State will once again present a nightmare for opposing defensive coordinators with the duo of quarterback Armanti Edwards and running back Kevin Richardson. The two combined for 45 touchdowns and more than 2,800 yards on the ground last year. Richardson's 30 scores set a new I-AA record. During his freshman season, Edwards also became just the fifth NCAA player ever to record at least 2,000 passing yards and 1,000 rushing.

Both players will run behind a line that includes All-America guard Kerry Brown and All-Southern center Scott Suttle. However, the Mountaineers must replace most of their receiving corps, including tight end Daniel Bettis and wide receiver William Mayfield, an All-SoCon performer who had 1,129 yards last year. Senior Dexter Jackson (470 yards, 3 TDs), also ASU's return specialist, will get more passes thrown his way.

On defense, the question revolves around who replaces All-America defensive end Marques Murrell, who led the Southern with 13 sacks and six forced fumbles in 2006. Coming out of spring, it looks to be sophomore Tony Robertson. Sophomore Gary Tharrington was in the same situation last year, having to fill the shoes of another All-America end, Jason Hunter. And all Tharrington did in his first season was finish tied for second in the conference with 7.5 sacks and earn a first-team All-SoCon nod. He returns to anchor the conference's top-rated defense last year, along with All-America defensive back Corey Lynch (league-leading 5 INTs, 83 tackles).

With 17 starters back, Furman is set for a strong run in both the Southern and national picture. The Paladins will need running back Jerome Felton (23 TDs) to stay healthy in order to be successful. Felton missed one game last year with an ankle injury that hampered him late in the season, as the senior netted just 87 combined yards in Furman's final three contests. Senior Cedrick Gipson, who led the team with 938 yards but scored only four touchdowns, adds another offensive weapon in the backfield. However, Furman must fill in spots for three lost starters along the offensive line.

Senior Renaldo Gray (who is a cousin of ASU's Edwards) returns at QB, where last year he threw for 1,184 yards but just four scores. Patrick Sprague is the top receiver back in a unit that could use improvement across the board. No Paladin wideout caught more than two touchdowns last season.

The Paladins, who ranked second in the conference for total defense last year, need to replace All-America end Roy Ravenell, with sophomore Jay Jay Mars winning the role for now. Furman's starting linebackers are all back, led by senior Andrew Jones, a two-time All-SoCon pick who led the team and was second in the conference last season with 121 tackles.

Wofford finished second in the Southern in scoring offense (29.9 points a game) and defense (19.4 ppg allowed) last year, yet had just a 7-4 record to show for it. Three of those four losses were by seven points or less. The Terriers lost just 10 seniors overall, and have the majority of their key starters back.

Among the returnees is quarterback Josh Collier and tailbacks Kevious Johnson and Michael Hobbs. That trio combined for 24 rushing tocuhdowns last season, with Collier adding five scores through the air. However, the senior's passing yards per game (48.9) were lowest among all starting QBs in the conference last season.

The Terriers will benefit from the return of several key defensive players who had their seasons cut short by injury last year. Linebacker Kyle Horne (7.5 sacks) and end James Gonsoulin (6.0) lead a unit that topped the conference in turnover margin last year at plus-21, 10 more than any other team.

With a 5-6 record in 2006, The Citadel ran its consecutive streak without a winning season to 15 years. However, its 4-3 conference mark was the Bulldogs' best during that span, and there is reason for optimism this year, mainly resting on the arm of QB Duran Lawson.

A senior, Lawson finished second in the SoCon last season with 194.4 passing yards a game, totaling 2,138 and 14 touchdowns. The Bulldogs will miss the services of bruising tailback Nuru Goodrum (8 TDs), but have a very capable speedster in Tory Cooper, who led the team with 807 rushing yards and ranked fourth in the conference with 10 scores.

For The Citadel to be a legitimate conference contender this year, it must get better on the other side of the ball. Only one other Southern team gave up more points a game than the Bulldogs' 28.5 last season. Linebackers Joshua Lawson (95) and Andrew Rowell (88) both finished among the SoCon's top 10 in tackles last season, while defensive end Trevar Broughton tied for second overall with three forced fumbles.

After seeing its coach leave in each of the last two seasons, Georgia Southern will hope the third time's the charm with Chris Hatcher, who had a 76-12 record (including the 2004 Division II Championship) in seven seasons at Valdosta State. Hatcher will be in charge of making Eagle fans, who are used to winning, forget about the disastrous 2006 season.

In his three years with Georgia Southern, senior Jayson Foster has lined up at quarterback, tailback and wide receiver. This year, it looks as if Foster will get time at both running back and wideout along with being the return specialist, where he was voted an All-SoCon selection last season. Hatcher is bringing the spread offense he perfected at Valdosta State to the Eagles, and junior QB Travis Clark will get the first crack at running the show. The former Southern Miss transfer ranked third in the conference last year with 164.4 passing yards a game.

The Eagles should get a boost in the backfield with another transfer, Mike Hamilton, who was the 2006 Big 12 Offensive Newcomer of the Year at Oklahoma State, rushing for 900 yards and four touchdowns. He sat out spring practice to focus on academics, but should be ready by the fall and will be a contender for starting tailback.

Hatcher is also making some shifts with his new players. Junior Chris Covington, who ranked seventh in the conference last year with 74.9 rushing yards per game, is switching sides and will be a defensive back/rover in 2007. Joining Covington in the secondary is Chris Rogers, formerly the Eagles' backup QB, and junior Brandon Jackson, who tied for the SoCon lead with five interceptions in 2006.

Chattanooga has enjoyed just two winning seasons in the last 15 years. For the Mocs to break out of the funk, they must become more efficient at scoring. Chattanooga managed just 18.5 points a game last year, second to last in the Southern. The Mocs didn't help the cause on the other side of the ball much either, ranking last in pass defense and second to last in total and rush defense.

Eldra Buckley, who finished second in the conference with 109.5 rushing yards a game, is gone, leaving a big hole to fill in the backfield. Sophomore Erroll Wynn becomes the starter, with junior-college transfer Donald Askew in the mix as well. Senior QB Antonio Miller is back and needs a better performance than last year, when he had more interceptions (5) than touchdowns (4). If Miller falters again, Kent State transfer Tony Pastore could get the call.

Linebacker Chris Johnson led the team last year with 74 tackles, and anchors a unit that also has most of its defensive front and secondary returning. However, the Mocs were hurt with the loss of All-SoCon defensive back Quintez Smith (4 INTs), who was dismissed from the team after last season.

Right when Elon seemed to be making a move toward better days, the Phoenix were delivered a crushing blow. Coming off a 5-6 record (the school's best since 2000), it was announced in March that quarterback Wes Pope, who led the SoCon and set a school record with 2,572 passing yards last year, would be suspended for the fall semester due to violating the university's academic honor code. Signal-calling duties will now likely fall to redshirt freshman Donny Kirby, with true freshman Scott Riddle in the mix as well.

Whoever is throwing the ball will have a talented receiver in sophomore Terrell Hudgins, a first-team All-SoCon performer who led the conference in receiving touchdowns (8) and yards per game (102.7). Hudgins was the only wideout in the Southern to average more than 100 yards a contest. Next up on that list was teammate Michael Mayers (78.7), who also returns. Senior T.J. Clegg gets a chance to breathe life into what was an almost nonexistent running game for the Phoenix last season.

Elon suffered another huge loss with the graduation of All-America linebacker Chad Nkang, who led the conference in tackles (127) last season. However, eight other starters are back, including junior linebacker Corey Weaver (93, fifth in the SoCon) and senior cornerback Chris Bland, whose four interceptions last season ranked second in the Southern.

▸▸ DURAN LAWSON
QB, The Citadel

The Phoenix also have the best special teams in the conference, as kicker Andrew Wilcox and punter Brandon Lane both were first-team All-Southern picks in 2006.

Western Carolina would probably like to forget last year ever happened. After winning their first two games, the Catamounts went on to lose the final nine, and finished last in the conference for both scoring offense (14.5 points per game) and points allowed (28.7). WCU also was the lone member not to place a player on either the All-SoCon first or second team.

Senior Todd Spitzer, who started two games at quarterback last year, now takes over full-time. The offense will miss the services of running back Darius Fudge, who was fourth in the league last year with 1,001 rushing yards. Senior Mike Malone or sophomore Willie Harper will get the starting nod in 2007. Seniors Eddie Cohen and Michael Hines are experienced receivers who both finished in the league's top 10 for yards per game last season.

On defense, the Catamounts will have to hope last year's inexperienced unit will get better with a season under its belt. Leading the returnees are linebackers Kadeem Morgan (68 tackles) and Mordy Ornguze (61).

Cowboys remain team to beat as Southland looks to regain prominence

By BILL SMITH, Street & Smith's correspondent

As one of the old-line power conferences of Division I-AA, the Southland Conference always had quality at the top and depth in the ranks. But these are the days of the newly-named Football Championship Subdivision, and the SLC was a shadow of the legend last year with a near-dormant McNeese State stumbling into the playoffs as the lone representative of the league.

Until the depth returns, there are a couple of things you can count on from the Southland, starting with unpredictability in the ranks. A lack of depth is often a problem for programs in this division, as one or two key injuries can render teams unable to respond. This fall's favorites are just one mistake or surgery away from the basement. Witness last year, as Nicholls State lost its top tailback and Sam Houston State was unable to use its best quarterback.

The other constant is change. For years, the SLC has been a transition league for teams in the Southwest trying to reach the brass ring of big-time football. This season, the league officially welcomes a Division II team (Central Arkansas) moving up and also has a longtime member (Texas State) pining for the greener stadium grass of Division I-A football.

The addition of the Bears returns the Southland to the state of Arkansas, once a key market for the league. Central Arkansas' presence should invigorate the football race, not unlike how the addition of Texas A&M-Corpus Christi shook up basketball last year.

By McNeese State standards, a first-round loss in the I-AA playoffs is poor, but a huge comeback for the program that was once the Southland standard. Coach Matt Viator stepped into a situation made for disaster after the sudden departure of the Cowboys' previous head coach in early October. The former offensive coordinator led MSU to five victories in the last six contests en route to the league title. Considering his team returns a near-sweep of the Southland's top players, imagine what he can do with a year's preparation.

Wideout Steven Whitehead (609 yards, 3 TDs), the 2006 Southland Player of the Year, heads into the fall riding a 17-game streak with at least one reception and more than 3,000 career all-purpose yards. Sophomore quarterback Derrick Fourroux (1,490 passing yards, 10 TDs) moved the ball to Whitehead and others, plus is able to keep defenses off balance with a running ability (377 yards) that helped make him the league's freshman of the year.

Senior defensive end Bryan Smith ranked among the I-AA's top 10 for sacks and tackles for loss last season, earning SLC Defensive Player of the Year.

The player ready to shake up the Cowboy coronation is Rhett Bomar at Sam Houston State. The former Oklahoma quarterback spent his second spring in Huntsville, Texas, and emerged from drills ready to take control of the SHSU offense. Bomar's speed and arm will dominate the SLC if he can get some consistent play from the Bearkats' group of receivers. All-SLC tight end Blake Martin (481 yards, 2 TDs) is the most experienced returnee, but two other Big 12 transfers figure to be the key targets: former Texas Tech receiver Catron Houston and Trey Payne from Baylor.

The team that spices up the 2007 race was the best squad in the Southland last year. Central Arkansas wasn't a competing member in 2006, but climbed to 24th in the final I-AA poll. Unfortunately for Coach Clint Conque, he's making his first official SLC campaign without 14 starters, including eight on defense. Weak in the secondary and on the ends, Conque will look to newcomers like junior-college transfer Quadderick Sanders at defensive end to keep things stable while a very young Bear team matures.

As expected for a team adding scholarships by the move up in division, almost three-fourths of the UCA roster is made up of sophomores and freshmen. One of the few upperclassmen is junior quarterback Nathan Brown.

In most seasons, Stephen F. Austin's Danny Southall could feel confident of being the top quarterback in the Southland. A first-team selection last year who led the SLC with 170.6 passing yards per game as a junior, Southall has top target Dominique Edison back. Edison is the top returning Southland receiver on average (18.1 per catch).

Thanks to last year's youthfest, Northwestern State Coach Scott Stoker appears to have an experience edge in the Southland race. The only problem is, many of the 17 starters returning from 2006 won't be the 2007 guys, as the Demons will get a boost through redshirts and transfers. How soon Division I-A transfers like defensive end Leron King from Ole Miss mesh into the current Demon roster will determine how fast the turnaround will be in Natchitoches, La.

Nicholls State can be forgiven for living in the past because the return of Joe Tobias is one of the keys to the future. The newcomer of the year when the Colonels won the league title in 2005, the 5-11, 220-pound running back sat out last season. He'll join last season's top SLC newcomer, safety Kareem Moore, to provide leaders on each side of the ball. With Tobias available, ground-pounding Nicholls has a solid backfield that includes sophomore quarterback Vince Montgomery, who ranked eighth in the league in rushing last year, and top returning running back Michael McLendon.

Texas State heads into the 2007 season with dreams of moving up to Division I-A once again. Coach Brad Wright reinvigorated the San Marcos fan base, but better finishes than the middle of the SLC pack are needed to make the jump reality. While a university committee debates the move, Wright works to find a way to shore up one of the league's worst defenses. The Bobcats' outstanding offense is led by sophomore Bradley George (1,676 yards, 11 TDs), but the defense gave up as many big plays as the offense made last season. For now, new wrinkles to enhance open-field opportunities on offense might tip the balance toward a winning season from last year's 5-6 mark.

For a team that struggled on offense last season, the fact Southeastern Louisiana had half of its touchdowns scored in the spring game off a pair of 70-plus-yard interception returns is not a good sign. Coach Mike Lucas heads into the fall still looking for a complement to the running game of second-team All-SLC running back Jay Lucas and senior Mario Gilbert.

Legendary Robinson's death will shadow season

By LUT WILLIAMS, Black College Sports Page

The 2006 campaign could go down as the most competitive in the storied history of the Southwestern Athletic Conference, and 2007 may produce more of the same.

Last season, eventual conference champion Alabama A&M emerged from a logjam atop the Eastern Division, taking the title over four teams that all finished just one game behind.

In the West, Arkansas-Pine Bluff finished the regular season on a seven-game win streak that enabled it to wrest the title from Grambling State and Southern, who had represented the division in the conference title game every year since its reinstatement in 1999. Only four teams—Grambling, Southern, Alabama State and Alabama A&M—have won conference titles since 1999.

Grambling, one year away from an 11-1 2005 conference championship and a four-time champion since '99, and Alabama State, which won the 2004 championship and has made three title-game appearances, have new coaches. With resurgent Jackson State and Alcorn State in the East, and emerging programs at Prairie View A&M and Texas Southern in the West, parity has perhaps reached the conference as never before.

The biggest loss for the conference and all of college football was the death in April of legendary Grambling Coach Eddie Robinson, who established an unsurpassed on- and off-field legacy of dignity, class and sportsmanship while winning a record 408 games during his career at the school (1941-97).

EAST DIVISION

Under new Coach Rick Comegy and with a boatload of transfers, Jackson State (6-5, 5-4 SWAC) emerged from a three-year slump, winning five of its first six games before dropping four of its last five. With key contributors on both sides of the ball returning, and even more transfers coming in, the Tigers will look to finish the job this year.

Quarterback Jimmy Oliver, the team's passing (1,906 yards, 14 TDs) and rushing (546 yards, 5 TDs) leader, returns to lead the offense while Erik Haw (371 yards, 9 TDs) is at the head of a deep stable of running backs.

NFL prospect Corey Clark (6-3, 320) is the linchpin of a formidable defensive line.

With a 2006 roster littered with underclassmen, Alcorn State (6-5, 5-4) still managed a winning record and could be pegged as the up-and-coming power in the East.

Wide receiver Nate Hughes, who is also a lethal punt returner, will be the offensive leader. Running back Vernardus Cooper should be joined by Michael Shepherd to give the Braves a potent ground attack. Tony Hobson and Chris Walker shared time at QB last year and should battle again for the starting spot.

Nine defensive starters return and will be led by an outstanding quartet of linebackers—Lee Robinson, Antonio Cooper, Idly Etienne and Lester Mosley.

Its fourth appearance in the championship game was the charm for Alabama A&M (9-3, 6-3), but the Bulldogs got there behind six all-conference seniors who have since departed. The only returning skill position starter on offense is QB Kelcy Luke, whose backfield will feature sophomore Ulysses Banks.

Mississippi Valley State (6-5, 5-4) defeated both division champs but lost three other conference games by single digits with the season finale costing it the division title.

Sophomore Paul Roberts steps into the QB spot with wide receiver Clarence Cotton and reliable running back Johey Hargrett as his chief weapons. Burly defensive tackle Ronald Green, a first-team All-SWAC selection, and defensive back Pierre Marshall, who led the league in interceptions, are the defensive standouts.

An up-and-down season turned out to be the last for Coach Charles Coe, whose contract issues caused him to leave Alabama State (5-6, 5-4). Former Hornet and NFL wide receiver Reggie Barlow moves up from his assistant's position to guide the Hornets on an interim basis.

Running back Jay Peck will be the staple of the offense after rushing for 1,139 yards and eight TDs last season.

WEST DIVISION

West Division champ Arkansas-Pine Bluff (8-4, 7-2) took a hit on its offensive line, losing four of five starters, but Coach Mo Forte signed 10 linemen in the most recent recruiting class. Quarterback Chris Wallace, the reigning SWAC Offensive Player of the Year, running back Martell Mallett and wideout Jason Jones were first-team All-SWAC last year, and all return.

While scoring may not be a problem, defending against it may be. Forte will look for linebackers Tim Turner and Jared Dunn and defensive backs Steward Franks and Kevin Thornton to shore up play on that side of the ball.

The league's top defense (266.6 yards per game) and best rushing offense (180.6) belonged to Prairie View A&M (3-7, 2-7) but that couldn't offset the Panthers' league-worst of 15.6 points and 69.2 passing yards a game.

Fourth-year Coach Henry Frazier is in the final year of his contract and needs to make an impression that will secure his job. Quarterback Chris Gibson will run the offense and hopes to use wide receivers Marc Ison, Anthony Weeden and Joe Townsend to jumpstart the passing game. Running backs Arnell Fontenot and speedster Calvin Harris will run behind an offensive line that returns four starters.

Back-to-back losing seasons is something new for Southern (5-6, 4-5) and Pete Richardson, who enters his 13th year as the longest tenured coach in the SWAC. Settling on a starting QB between fifth-year senior J.C. Lewis, C.J. Byrd and Bryant Lee is one of Richardson's first priorities.

All-conference free safety Jarmaul George leads a strong defensive secondary that includes Glenn Bell, Michael Williams and Marcus Wilkerson.

Controversy, eligibility issues and finally dissension tore apart defending champion Grambling State (3-8, 3-6) and led to the firing of Melvin Spears after three years. The Tigers pulled off a coup by landing former N.C. Central Coach Rod Broadway, who had led his team to two consecutive conference titles and Division II playoff berths.

Second-team All-SWAC QB Brandon Landers returns, as does first-team wideout Clyde Edwards.

Winning three games last year was hardly good enough for Coach Steve Wilson at Texas Southern (3-8, 3-6) but it's an improvement over the one win he had in his first two seasons. Oregon State transfer Lamar Herron should be an impact player at free safety.

Savannah still sings saddest song of I-AA indys

By JONATHAN WOOG, Street & Smith's Copy Editor

It was only two years ago when Savannah State was the lone torchbearer for the Division I-AA independents. In 2006, three teams—Austin Peay, Central Arkansas and Winston-Salem State—joined the Tigers, but only briefly. The Governors bolted for the Ohio Valley Conference, while the Bears joined the Southland and the Rams became members of the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference.

Don't worry, though, Savannah State. There's a new group of schools ready to keep you company.

North Carolina Central and Presbyterian are making the move up from Division II, while Stony Brook is leaving the Northeast Conference. But again, it's a short-lived stop, as all three leave for greener conference pastures in 2008. The Blue Hose and Seawolves will join the Big South, bolstering that league to seven teams. However, Presbyterian doesn't receive full I-AA membership until 2011. As for the Eagles, they become the 11th member of the MEAC.

And Savannah State? Well, since leaving the safe confines of D2 in 2002, the Tigers have gone 5-49, are on their third coach and serving probation until the spring of 2009 after it was found that a former assistant coach provided housing and meals and encouraged players to use anabolic steroids. Even through the turmoil, SSU has shown interest in joining the MEAC, but were denied after applying for membership to the historic conference. Entering the 2007 season, they're still on the outside looking in.

After back-to-back Division II playoff appearances and Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association championships, North Carolina Central will rejoin the MEAC, which it was an original member of in the 1970s.

The Eagles will be high-flying on offense with the return of Stadford Brown, who won league honors for top player and top rookie in 2006. The sophomore quarterback not only helped NCCU lead the conference in points per game (30.9, a school record), but he also threw for 2,577 yards and 26 touchdowns. Top rusher Greg Pruitt Jr. graduated, but junior Jeff Toliver (93 carries, 454 yards, 6 TDs) can carry the load. While four of the top five receiving options graduated, junior wideout Wayne Blackwell returns as Brown's main target.

Defensively, the Eagles welcome back senior secondary stars Derrick Ray and Craig Amos. They should make their share of tackles if opponents can get past standout linebackers Eric Ray and Rashard Coleman.

Central will ease into its first year at the I-AA level against a fairly manageable schedule, with two games against future MEAC opponents and six against Division II teams.

There are big changes happening at Presbyterian. The Blue Hose leave the familiarity of Division II football and the South Atlantic Conference and enter their first season of I-AA play, doing it under an entirely new coaching staff. First-year Coach Bobby Bentley, who will handle the play-calling and hopes to implement a spread offense, inherits a team that went 7-4 last season and returns 13 starters.

The hope is that Presbyterian's offense catches up to its defense, as the Blue Hose ranked last in the SAC in scoring (15.1 ppg) last year.

Quarterback Grayson Mullins will be the man under center. As a sophomore, he played in 10 games, throwing for 939 yards and six touchdowns. But he must cut down on his interceptions (10). With a line that averages 270 pounds, it will give Mullins plenty of time to find wide receiver Justin Durant (37 receptions, 6 TDs) and open holes for running back S.J. Worrell (551 rushing yards, 3 TDs).

While Presbyterian's offense struggled last year, the defense excelled. And even though the Blue Hose lose two all-conference defensive backs in Chad Burgess and Kevin Molony, they should be stout because of linebacker Antwan Thomas (team-high 79 tackles) and linemen Sherman Burnett and Adam McKinney.

In a rude welcome to I-AA play, the Blue Hose will play eight games on the road, facing last year's Southern Conference runner-up, Furman, in the first game and four of their five future Big South opponents.

There is one thing Savannah State can hope for as it heads into the 2007 season: stability. Coach Theo Lemon returns for his second year after leading the Tigers to 2-9 mark, a two-game improvement over their winless 2005 campaign.

The Tigers were young last year, so they return experience. Junior Garrett Williams will be the man at the controls after throwing for 1,264 yards and eight touchdowns last season, but his interceptions (14) must be reduced. Gone is running back Chad Cone, and in place is junior Quinton Beasley, who will share the load with fullback Jamie Beard (15 carries, 112 yards). Garrett Williams will have two quality targets in sophomore Mark Williams and junior Anthony Huntley. Huntley also returned kickoffs last year, bringing one back for a score.

Junior linebackers Trent Newton and Calvin Leonard will be focus of the Tigers' defense, as they led the team in tackles with 114 and 67, respectively. In the secondary, sophomore Antwan Allen played only eight games in 2006 but had a team-leading four sacks.

The Tigers just might get more than two wins this season, as they face three Division II teams and one NAIA opponent. But if they are able to get two key victories over MEAC members Morgan State and Bethune-Cookman, the Tigers may get the acceptance they've been seeking.

After sharing the NEC title in 2005 and finishing second last season, Stony Brook makes an unusual geographic move. The New York school will join a conference (Big South) with schools based in Virginia and the Carolinas. Reason: the NEC limits its schools to 30 scholarships.

In the long run, though, the switch benefits the Big South and Stony Brook, as the addition of the Seawolves gives the conference the sixth full-fledged football member it needed to receive an automatic bid to the I-AA playoffs in 2010.

In his first year as head coach, Chuck Priore led the Seawolves to a 5-6 record last year. But for Stony Brook to be competitive, Priore needs to shore up a defense that allowed 278 points last season.

The defensive unit will be built around the 2006 NEC Defensive Rookie of the Year, Cory Giddings, who recorded 39 tackles and two interceptions last season. The top two tacklers returning are linebackers Tyler Santucci (56 tackles) and Milo Otis (53). Otis also led the team in interceptions with four.

The offense returns some firepower with quarterback Josh Dudash and wide receiver Lynell Suggs. Dudash, whose favorite red-zone target was Suggs (seven receiving TDs), completed 179 of 285 passes for 2,231 yards with a 15-4 TD/interception ratio. Suggs (38 receptions) will line up opposite Dwayne Eley (50). At running back, there will be a one-two punch with sophomore Conte Cuttino and junior Steve Austin, who combined for 936 yards and five scores last year.

Unfortunately, the Seawolves won't get a taste of Big South until 2008, as they have no games slated against future league foes.

GRAND VALLEY STATE, 2006 D2 CHAMPIONS

Offseason exodus of teams to I-AA highlights preseason talk, but the old stand-bys (Grand Valley State, North Alabama) are set to dominate again

By Gregg Dewalt
Florence (Ala.) TimesDaily

The landscape is changing in Division II.

Sure, Grand Valley State remains the team to beat. The Lakers are trying to continue a recent run of dominance that includes four championships in five years.

Coach Chuck Martin's team is coming off another thrilling title win, 17-14 over Northwest Missouri State, and with another championship this year the Lakers will match North Alabama (1993-95) for the longest streak of consecutive trophies.

Much of the Division II news heading into this season, however, is away from the playing field as more teams make the move to Division I-AA. Well-known programs such as North Carolina Central and Presbyterian will step up this year. The North Central Conference will disband after the 2007 season as North Dakota and South Dakota transition to I-AA.

"Our conference is the first conference casualty," NCC Commissioner Roger Thomas says. "We're a product of our own success. We've been very successful in Division II football, and the teams that have gone on or [are] going on have been great teams."

In the past few years, the NCC has watched Northern Colorado, North Dakota State and South Dakota State leave for I-AA.

The defection of North Dakota and South Dakota after this year would leave the NCC with seven teams. The NCC has won eight Division II titles and has four runner-up trophies in 34 years.

"It's bittersweet," Thomas says. "We've been a league since 1921. I'm not knocking Division I-AA; I just hate that this has happened on my watch. We've spent the last year trying to find teams to come into the NCC."

With the announcements of the Fighting Sioux and Coyotes leaving, the remaining NCC teams were trying to find new homes. Nebraska-Omaha was attempting to join the Mid-America Intercollegiate Athletic Association, while Augustana, Minnesota-Duluth, Minnesota State-Mankato and St. Cloud State hoped to hook up with the Northern Sun Intercollegiate Conference.

"The upside is that it gives other teams a chance to get into the playoffs and make it to Florence [Ala.] for the championship game," Thomas says.

On the field, everybody continues to chase Grand Valley State (15-0 overall in 2006).

But it will be a different-looking Lakers team that begins defense of its title. And perhaps that gives the rest of Division II hope. Gone are offensive stalwarts like quarterback Cullen Finnerty, running back Astin Martin and wide receiver Eric Fowler. But the offensive line returns intact, while nine starters are back on defense.

Sophomore Brad Iciek is the likely replacement for the record-setting Finnerty as the Lakers try to extend the nation's longest winning streak of 28 games.

If Grand Valley State is No. 1 in the nation heading into the 2007 season, then Coach Mel Tjeerdsma and Northwest Missouri State (14-1) should be labeled No. 1A. The Bearcats fell three points short of a championship in 2006 after losing to the Lakers by four points the year before.

Unlike Grand Valley State, though, Northwest Missouri State returns the bulk of its skill players. Quarterback Josh Mathews (3,336 passing yards, 23 TDs) leads a potent attack that didn't score less than 24 points in a game until the championship last year. Xavier Omon also returns for his senior season after rushing for 1,518 yards and 22 touchdowns.

This year, North Dakota (11-2) will try to exit Division II on a winning note as it moves up to I-AA in 2008. Key returning players for the Fighting Sioux include running back Ryan Chappell, who rushed for 1,253 yards and 15 TDs while making seven starts last season, and wide receiver Weston Dressler, who torched defenses for 90 catches, 1,215 yards and 16 scores.

North Alabama (11-1) was cruising along until Delta State whipped the Lions 27-10 on their home field in the NCAA quarterfinals. With some of the other top teams in the Gulf South Conference undergoing makeovers—either from a personnel or coaching standpoint—the Lions are the team to beat in 2007.

North Alabama has 15 starters returning, but will have to remake the receiving corps and replace several key defensive players. Quarterback A.J. Milwee leads the offense after throwing 16 TD passes and rushing for eight more in 2006.

Nebraska-Omaha (8-3) is coming off its third straight North Central Conference title. The Mavericks return three first-team All-NCC performers, including All-America offensive tackle Ben Hochstein, the league's best offensive lineman. Quarterback Zach Miller was a Harlon Hill Trophy regional finalist while rushing for 1,098 yards and scoring a school-record 19 touchdowns.

Chadron State was one of the surprise teams last season, going from 4-6 in 2005 to 12-1 in 2006 behind the running of Harlon Hill Trophy winner Danny Woodhead, who led all of college football with more than 2,700 rushing yards. He also topped Division II in scoring and all-purpose yards, and needs 14 scores to reach the 100-TD plateau.

Shepherd (11-1) just missed its first trip to the NCAA semifinals and brings a 21-game regular-season winning streak into 2007. Seven starters return on offense, including running back Dervon Wallace (1,300 yards, 17 TDs) and offensive lineman Ryan Pope. Michael Spiegelberg (9 sacks) leads a unit that was tops nationally in scoring defense.

Ron Roberts, who was promoted from within the program, takes over for Rick Rhoades as coach at Delta State (12-3), and his first priority is to retool an offense that lost QB Scott Eyster (3,926 yards, 36 TD passes) and wide receiver Robert Davis (88 catches, 1,228 yards) to graduation. The defense will be solid with four key players returning in Michael Eubanks, Lardester Hicks-Green, Jamarcus Wiggins and Monterio James.

West Texas A&M (11-2) has offensive issues with the loss of running back Maurice White and Dalton Bell, who was 20-4 as the starting QB, but Jared Brock is one of the nation's best linebackers.

Bloomsburg (12-2) made it all the way to the NCAA semifinals despite an injury-plagued season for running back Jamar Brittingham, who still managed to crank out 1,003 rushing yards. If Brittingham can stay healthy, the Huskies could find themselves in a similar position come playoff time.

South Dakota (9-4) begins its final Division II season as one of the NCC favorites with nine returning offensive starters. Replacing running back Stefan Logan, however, is Coach Ed Meierkort's biggest priority.

Elizabeth City State (9-3) recorded four shutouts in posting the best record in school history last year. Curtis Rich, who threw 21 TD passes in 10 starts, and running back Brandon Fields (981 yards rushing) will lead what should be a strong offense.

Newberry (11-2) will have a tougher time winning the South Atlantic Conference after losing QB Josh Stepp, who set the school's single-season TD mark, and wideout Tymere Zimmerman. The Indians should be strong defensively, however, with the return of linebacker Will Newell, the conference's leading tackler.

Northwood (8-3) lost a heartbreaker, 31-28 in overtime, to South Dakota in the opening round of the NCAAs last season. Coach Pat Riepma must replace QB Kyle Kolbe, who was the Timberwolves' second-leading rusher, and Charleston Hughes, who led all of Division II in solo tackles. The good news is that running back Torris Childs returns after rushing for 973 yards and 16 touchdowns in 2006.

Midwestern State (10-3) advanced to the second round of the playoffs, and should be poised to make another postseason run as QB Daniel Polk returns after both passing and rushing for more than 1,000 yards in 2006. He'll be operating behind standout center Tony Burson, who anchors the line.

West Chester (9-4) came within a point of reaching the NCAA quarterfinals last season and, with three key players returning in QB Bill Zwann (22 TD passes), wideout Michael Washington (55 catches, 16 TDs) and linebacker Lateef Ferguson (114 tackles), the Golden Rams should make a fourth straight postseason appearance.

Bryant (8-3) is coming off its first playoff appearance, but Coach Marty Fine must replace running back Lorenzo Perry, who accumulated 20 of the Bulldogs' 26 rushing touchdowns, and Justin Kix, the school's all-time leading receiver.

Missouri Western State (9-3) will try to overcome the loss of 10 all-conference selections after making its first D2 playoff appearance. Offensive lineman Roger Allen is a good building block, but the Griffons must replace the QB tandem of Matt Landess and Michael Burton, who combined for 17 TD passes last season.

Quarterback Billy Malone returns for his junior year after leading Abilene Christian (8-3) to the NCAAs. Malone (3,136 passing yards, 27 TD passes) was the key for a Wildcats offense that averaged 35.5 points and 434.2 yards per game last season.

The biggest question at Pittsburg State (10-2) is how to replace Harlon Hill Trophy finalist Germaine Race, who finished his career as Division II's all-time-leading rusher (6,985 yards) and college football's all-time scoring leader (658 points).

Wayne State (6-5) is on the rise after making a three-game improvement in the win column under Paul Winters, the 2006 Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference Coach of the Year. The Warriors have one of the nation's rising stars in Joique Bell, who set a Division II freshman rushing record with 2,065 yards and a school-record 23 touchdowns. Daryl Graham, a former All-GLIAC running back at Michigan Tech, gives the Warriors perhaps the best backfield tandem in the division.

David Dean, who was promoted from within the program, takes over for Chris Hatcher at Valdosta State (8-2), which missed the playoffs last season. Willie Copeland returns to direct the offense, and the Blazers landed a variety of Division I-A and I-AA transfers to bolster the roster.

Quarterback Drew Aber is expected to be healthy and ready for the 2007 season at Winona State (9-3) after tearing his ACL midway through last year.

California (Pa.) won six of its final seven games to finish 8-3 last season, just missing its first playoff bid. Brandon Lombardy, who led the Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference in rushing with 1,595 yards and also scored 19 touchdowns, will do most of his running behind returning All-America lineman Tim McCutcheon.

Edinboro (6-5) looks to bounce back from a mediocre season that saw Trevor Harris emerge as one of the best PSAC quarterbacks. Harris threw for 2,547 yards and 20 TDs, and this year tight end Kyle Witucki should be one of his favorite targets.

BEST OF THE REST

In the Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, Ferris State (8-3) returns a solid nucleus on defense, led by tackle Jake Visser (86 tackles).

Saginaw Valley (6-4) missed the playoffs in 2006, but should feature one of the conference's top offenses this year. Quarterback Chris Dougherty threw only three interceptions in 176 attempts last season, while his top receiver, Ric Cottengim, had 52 catches for 765 yards and 13 scores. Both return.

To move into the upper echelon of the GLIAC, Northern Michigan (3-7) will need another big year from QB Buddy Rivera, who threw for 2,399 yards and 20 touchdowns last year.

Michigan Tech (6-4) rebounded from a 0-4 start in 2006 to win six in a row, but the Huskies lose Lee Marana, the conference's all-time leading rusher (4,784 yards).

Indianapolis (6-5) will rely on Craig Jenkins, who set a school record with 1,136 rushing yards in 2006.

Hillsdale (5-6) returns a pair of all-conference performers in wide receiver Nick Gurica, who led the team with 57 catches for 823 yards, and defensive back Jared Kell, who had five interceptions and four fumble recoveries.

Ashland (4-6) looks to rebound from a down year, and Coach Lee Owens will have to decide on a quarterback after John Ferguson and Bill Cundiff split playing time last season.

In the Northeast-10 Conference, Southern Connecticut (7-4) will rely on Brandon Toles, who set a school record with 1,904 rushing yards and 16 TDs last year, to carry much of the offensive load.

Merrimack (8-4) rebounded from a 1-3 start to win seven straight and qualify for postseason play. Quarterback Colin Temple threw 16 TD passes, but was also intercepted 19 times.

Bentley (6-5) will try to return to the playoffs after a two-year absence behind the Northeast-10's top offensive lineman, Mackenzy Bernadeau, and running back J.J. Sullivan, who was injured for much of 2006 and managed only 407 yards rushing.

In the Gulf South Conference, QBs Cole Barthel and Justin Ray return after combining for 20 TD passes and 1,912 yards while splitting time at Arkansas Tech (7-3) last year.

David Knighton returns for Harding (6-4) after tying a school record with 22 touchdown passes. All-conference defensive back Sevohn Greer, who had 11 tackles for loss last season, also returns.

Henderson State (8-3) and West Alabama (6-5) will try to continue to build on their most successful seasons in recent years.

Bemidji State (9-3) won its first outright Northern Sun Intercollegiate Conference title last year by going unbeaten in league play, but lost to Pittsburg State in the Mineral Water Bowl. Zach Stafford returns to lead the nation's top defense against the run, while Justin Guy and John Keaveny anchor a strong offensive line.

In the Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference, Coach Lou Tepper had a good first year at Indiana (Pa.), going 8-2, and the Crimson Hawks will rely on 10 returning defensive starters to carry much of the load while the former head man at Illinois replaces kicker Nick Wallace (transferred to Maryland), three offensive linemen, a quarterback and a running back.

Shippensburg (5-6) and Kutztown (4-6) look to be on the rise. The Raiders return 21 starters, while the Golden Bears get back the bulk of their skill-position players.

Tuskegee (10-2), Albany State (7-4) and Miles should be the class of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference. Miles had to forfeit its 2006 conference title and season for using an ineligible player, allowing Albany State and Tuskegee to share the crown.

Coach Willie Slater continued Tuskegee's winning tradition in his first season, and the Golden Tigers return a solid nucleus of young players.

Fort Lewis (7-4) and Nebraska-Kearney (6-4) will try to make inroads into Chadron State's Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference dominance. The Lopers have most of their defense returning from a squad that only allowed 14.5 points per game last year, while the Skyhawks are coming off one their most successful seasons in school history.

Colorado School of Mines looks to rebound from a 4-7 campaign with a strong defense and wide receiver Michael Curl, who had 1,485 all-purpose yards last year.

For Washburn (7-4) to contend in the Mid-America Intercollegiate Athletic Association, the Ichabods must find capable replacements for several key players, including school record-holders Sam Sissom, a wideout, and running back Trent Hearn.

Former QB Garin Higgins takes over at Emporia State (3-8) for Dave Wiemers, who resigned as coach after the 2006 season.

In the North Central Conference, 14 starters return at Minnesota-Duluth (6-4), including QB Ted Schlafke and Tyler Yelk, the league's top tackler last year.

New Coach Beau Baldwin, a former assistant and quarterback with the Wildcats, has nine returning starters from last year's 6-5 Central Washington team.

Minnesota State-Mankato (4-7) should be exciting to watch with senior QB Ben King throwing to Bryan Dalton and Chris Nowlin, two of the NCC's top receivers.

All five of Western Washington's (5-6) wins in 2006 were of the come-from-behind variety, and Coach Robin Ross will try to get the Vikings to take the early lead against teams more often this season.

DIVISION III PREVIEW

Former Alabama mentor Dubose finds D3 coaching life to his liking at Millsaps

By Mike Goens
Florence (Ala.) TimesDaily

It makes no difference whether it's in high school, the National Football League, a Division I-A power conference or Division III. Millsaps College Coach Mike Dubose says the objective remains the same.

"The game we play in Division III is just as important and means just as much to the players and coaches as it does anywhere else or on any other level," he says. "It's just as fun when you're winning and just as frustrating when you don't."

And Dubose should know.

He has been a coach on all of those levels, enjoying a great deal of success and frustration along the way.

In Dubose's 29 years of coaching, he has been a high school head coach and an assistant coach in the NFL with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. But perhaps he gained the most fame as head coach at his alma mater, the University of Alabama, where Dubose succeeded Gene Stallings and led the Crimson Tide program from 1997-2000.

He says the only difference between the leagues is the fan base.

"They just have more people at Alabama," Dubose says, "but I guarantee you winning means a lot to everyone associated with this program."

Dubose won many championships as a player and coach at Alabama, and his first taste in Division III ended with a title, too. His Majors defeated then-No. 14 Trinity (Texas) 34-12 in the regular-season finale to become a surprise winner of the Southern Collegiate Athletic Conference. They also earned an automatic berth to the D3 playoffs, the school's first postseason appearance in 31 years.

Millsaps is perhaps not ready to challenge Division III kingpin Mount Union, but don't tell that to Dubose and his players.

"Absolutely, our ultimate goal is to win the national championship," he says. "Now, it won't be easy, but our guys got a taste of the price you have to pay to become a champion last year. The greater price you pay, the more important it becomes for you. We've got to raise the bar a little more this year."

Dubose's success in his first year with Millsaps may have also raised the bar in the conference, which has been owned by Trinity in recent years. With Birmingham-Southern (Ala.) making the move from Division I-AA this season, the level of competition is expected to increase. Yet the league's fight continues for national respect and the right to be mentioned among the best conferences in the country.

No one carries more respect than Mount Union.

The Purple Raiders had another ho-hum season in 2006, going 15-0 and winning the national championship, again.

In case you have lost count, Mount Union has a record nine national championships on its resume, with eight of those coming over the last 11 years. The overall record during that 11-year stretch is an incredible 150-4. Not even Dubose's former Alabama team, with 12 national championships all-time, can compete with that run.

The Raiders will be a solid favorite to win their third consecutive Division III crown this year, with 14 starters—seven on both sides of the ball—returning.

Their two biggest weapons, wide receiver Pierre Garcon and tailback Nate Kmic, are back. Garcon had 67 catches for 1,212 yards and 17 touchdowns last year, while Kmic averaged 157.7 yards a game on the ground.

Greg Micheli split playing time at quarterback in 2006 and will be the full-time starter. He was MVP of the NCAA title game. For the season, Micheli completed 74.2 percent of his passes for 1,156 yards and 11 scores. He rushed for another 445 yards and nine touchdowns.

Two top-notch linemen are center Eric Safran and guard Derek Blanchard.

"Having Pierre and Nate back gives us the opportunity to attack teams both through the air and on the ground," says Mount Union's Larry Kehres, who enters his 22nd season as coach. "We expect our offense to be more consistent, especially with the number of games they have under their belts."

Considering the Raiders averaged 489.3 yards and 43.9 points a game last season, that's a sobering thought for opponents.

The defense is almost overlooked with all those gaudy offensive numbers, but the unit is talented. Nick Parr (7 sacks) and Pat McCullough lead the charge up front. Linebackers Matt Rees and Tony DeRiggi combined for 10.5 sacks and were the team's leading tacklers. Safety Matt Kostelnik had five interceptions a year ago and the secondary as a whole will get another boost with the return of cornerback Cameron Rose, who missed 2006 with an injury.

Another constant in D3 has been Saint John's. Year-in and year-out, Coach John Gagliardi has his Johnnies among the division's elite. Gagliardi, entering his 59th year in coaching, has a 443-120-11 overall record. Saint John's has won the Minnesota Intercollegiate Athletic Conference title 29 times and is the winningest team in Division III with a 537-219-24 record in 96 seasons.

Defense will likely be the dominating factor for the Johnnies. Seven starters are back from an impressive unit last season, led by lineman Nick Gunderson, who had 77 tackles, 9.5 sacks and five blocked kicks. Mike Schumacher and Joe Luke are also stout up front. Senior defensive backs John Cloeter and Kevin

The Johnnies, who won the national title in 2003, have plenty of firepower on offense. Quarterback Alex Kofoed, who has won 28 games as a starter and passed for 2,805 yards and 24 touchdowns last season, leads the unit. Kofoed connected with receiver Brian Weber 32 times for 508 yards a year ago. Center Andrew Salvato is a force on the line along with Jason Primus and Jason Brodmerkel.

MOUNT UNION, 2006 D3 CHAMPION

A rising power in Division III is St. John Fisher. The Cardinals won eight games total from 1996 to 2000, but have now won at least eight a year since 2003. They have 15 starters back—eight on offense and seven on defense—from a 12-2 squad. They blanked Rowan 31-0 in the NCAA quarterfinals before losing 26-14 to Mount Union in the semifinals.

Quarterback Rob Kramer completed nearly two-thirds of his passes last season, throwing for 2,019 yards and 22 touchdowns in the process. He was intercepted only once.

James Reile will step into a leadership role as the starting tailback. Reile will run behind Brennan Fortune, a 285-pound tackle who has attracted the attention of pro scouts.

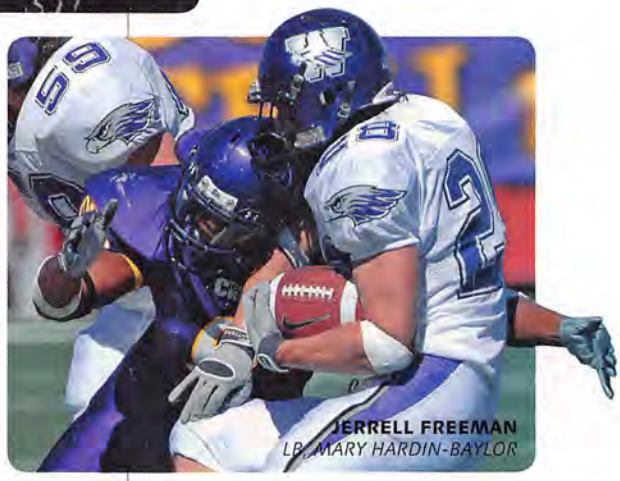
St. John Fisher posted five shutouts a year ago and cornerback Steven Stepnick will lead the defensive unit. Scott Miranto and Matt Driscoll also return to the secondary, and big things are expected from linebacker Josh Gottlieb.

Wisconsin-Whitewater came within a single win of a national championship in 2006 and has all the ingredients to make another run. Even though the Warhawks lost several key stars to graduation, particularly on offense, many younger players were tested during last season's championship run after injuries struck.

The best news is that tailback Justin Beaver returns after missing four games with a broken collarbone. Six linemen, headed by guard Brady Ramseier, are back with starting experience. New Coach Lance Leipold, however, must find a replacement at quarterback quickly and replace some big-play receivers. On defense, linebacker A.J. Raebel and end Ryan Ogrizovich are the ringleaders and the secondary remains intact.

There is a wealth of returning talent at Mary Hardin-Baylor. The Crusaders advanced to the NCAA quarterfinals last season. They have a wealth of starters back on offense and six on a defense that led the nation in stopping the run.

Jarvis Thrasher was inserted at tailback in the fourth game last year and rushed for 1,137 yards. Quarterback Josh Welch is a four-year starter and Cole Smith led the Crusaders in receiving. Both tight ends return, as does the two-deep roster at all five offensive-line slots, led by tackle Caleb Woodall. On defense, linebacker Jerrell Freeman is one of the nation's best. He racked up 96 tackles, four interceptions and 16 tackles for loss last season. Linebacker Eric Henri and cornerback Elliot Barcak will also be key contributors.



JERRELL FREEMAN
LB, MARY HARDIN-BAYLOR

A three-loss season represents a good year for many programs, but not at Rowan. The Profs advanced to the national semifinals for the third consecutive year in 2006, and could be poised to make another run at the championship this season with 13 starters back.

Ulysses Encarnacion missed last season because of a leg injury he suffered in the 2005 Division III playoffs, but returns healthy. Encarnacion joins Davon Edwards at running back, giving the Profs a powerful one-two punch. Dan Lee is the go-to guy on the line, and Emory Lester is back after leading the team in receiving a year ago. The key on offense will be the play of quarterback Joe Rankin. The defense will be stout, led by end Randy Tosh (7 sacks), strong safety Kelvin Bellamy (73 tackles, 4 sacks, 3 forced fumbles) and linebacker Chris Pinto.

Wabash tied for the North Coast Athletic Conference crown last year and has plenty of experience back with seven starters on offense and nine on defense.

The best of the lot could be linebacker Adrian Pynenberg, who has led the Little Giants in tackles for three consecutive seasons. He was the NCAC Defensive Player of the Year in 2006. Matt Kraft and Andy Deig also return at the other two linebacker spots, while the secondary returns intact.

On offense, Dustin Huff lit up the league last season, completing 215 of 318 passes for 29 touchdowns. Also returning is Mike Russell, who led the team with 60 catches for 1,052 yards and 13 scores.

A winning tradition is part of the program at Washington & Jefferson. The Presidents have won 19 of their past 23 league titles and made it to the playoffs last year for the 18th time since 1985. This season they will build around seven returning starters on offense.

Quarterback Bobby Swallow was fourth in Division III for passing efficiency last year, completing nearly 69.4 percent of his throws for 2,022 yards and 20 touchdowns. Matt Houy is quickly developing into one of the top offensive linemen in school history. The question marks are on defense, though, where graduation hit the secondary hard.

Wheaton has become a fixture in the NCAA playoffs and this could be one of the school's best teams. There are eight starters back on offense and seven on defense from a 10-win squad.

Look for the Thunder defense to dominate opponents. End Andy Studebaker can disrupt any offense. He recorded 17.5 sacks last year. Linebackers Steve Pagh and Mike McKinney, who combined for 136 tackles and 17.5 tackles for loss, also return. Cornerback Pete Ittersagen broke up 11 passes and had four interceptions last year. Four offensive linemen and two receivers bring stability to the offense, but the key will be the play of quarterback Zach Ullrich, a transfer from Northern Illinois who is expected to start.

QB, BETHEL

There's a new contender out West. Whitworth claimed its first outright Northwest Conference title last year, with a perfect 10-0 regular season. Fifteen starters are returning, including the conference's Defensive Player of the Year, linebacker Casey Clifton. The Pirates' defense allowed only 13.4 points a game behind the strong play of Clifton (102 tackles) and strong safety Jay Tully (7 INTs).

Repeating the offensive output of 2006 will depend on finding a capable starter at quarterback. The winner of that race will have plenty of weapons to work with, as the top receiver (Steve Silva), the top two running backs and three offensive linemen are back. Silva grabbed 58 passes for 759 yards in 2006.

One of the best-kept secrets in D3 in recent years has been Bethel, a team that tends to be in the considerable shadow cast by conference rival Saint John's. The Royals shared the conference crown with the Johnnies last year and earned a spot in the national playoffs for the fourth time since 2000.

The priority will be replacing running back Phil Porta, the conference's all-time leading rusher. Quarterback Ben Wetzell returns along with four linemen, including center Tommy Davis and receiver Kyle Lee. Three linebackers, led by Steve Luebke, are back, as well as the entire secondary.

Occidental has become a consistent winner from the West, but the Tigers are still trying to reach the next level. With 14 starters back from a nine-win season, this could be the year. Linebacker Anthony Ostland is the big-play performer on defense after intercepting five passes last year. End Alex Wertheimer had 6.5 sacks.

On offense, running back Matt Andersen averaged two touchdowns a game, but the Tigers must find a replacement at quarterback to lead their spread-option attack. They return three proven receivers, led by Jordan Inabnit.

The regular-season winning streak has reached 17 for Wilkes, which is expected to challenge for another conference crown. Linebacker Kyle Follweiler is as good as they get at this level and is coming off a 102-tackle season. Jason Acquaye is a force up front on defense, but some holes must be filled around him. Starters returning on offense are quarterback Al Karaffa (1,966 passing yards, 17 TDs) and linemen Jordan Purdy and Josh George.

Springfield has become a force behind the talents of quarterback Chris Sharpe. He set 12 school and six Division III records last season, but not for his arm. Sharpe, winner of the Melberger Award as the Division III Player of the Year, led the nation by rushing for 161.8 yards a game (1,941 total yards). He also scored 35 times on the ground and passed for four more. The entire offensive backfield returns in fullback Andrew Jackson and halfbacks Tim Brouillard and Derron Walker. Replacing three offensive linemen and the tight end will be crucial. The defense is built around cornerback Joe Harasymiak, who had 10 interceptions in 2006.

This season Millsaps will be favored to win consecutive conference titles, as the Majors won seven straight games last season before losing their playoff opener. Two of their biggest offensive weapons will be running back Tyson Roy (698 rushing, 361 receiving yards) and quarterback Juan Joseph, the SCAC's Offensive Player of the Year after accounting for 253.0 total yards a game. Joseph set school records in passing yards (2,495), completions (224) and touchdown passes (21). Defensively, the Majors have big-play performers in linebackers Shawn Gillenwater and Ronnie Wheat and cornerback Marcus Harris.

In Iowa, Central has been a consistent winner for decades, with 28 conference titles. The Dutch, during a rebuilding season, sneaked up on some opponents last year, but that won't happen in 2007 as plenty of experience returns on both sides of the ball. Tim Connell is a proven winner at quarterback, while Vance Schuring rushed for 1,199 yards and scored 12 times a year ago. The key will be replacing three starting offensive linemen. The defense will rally around linebacker Andrew Lehn and defensive backs Dustyn Baethke and Brett Doud.

Bridgewater had its streak of five straight Old Dominion Athletic Conference titles snapped last year, but the Eagles appear poised to return to dominance. Quarterback Jeff Highfill completed 59.9 percent of his passes for 14 touchdowns, and can also hurt opponents with the run. Brandon Copeland is his top target (41 catches, 672 yards). Keaton Culver heads an offensive line that has four starters back, and running back Phillip Carter figures to benefit the most. Cornerback Earl Chaptman, safety Desmond Jalloh and tackle Michael Jackson pace the defense.

Having two quarterbacks returning with playing experience is good news for Wartburg. Dan Bauder and Nick Yordi proved they could do the job during an eight-win 2006 season. Josh Van Rees takes over at running back, and the receiving corps is talented, led by Kyle Duchman, who has already passed the 100-catch and 1,000-yard marks. Ben Hogan leads a strong line. Defensively, lineman Eric Bruhn leads a unit that also returns Nick Weber, the best player in the secondary. Ryan Gerardy and Kyle Goodchild are aggressive linebackers.

Hope will be looking to repeat as champions of the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Conference and will be led by an offense that put up big numbers last year. The Flying Dutchmen will turn to tailback David Booko, who has rushed for more than 1,000 yards in consecutive seasons and scored 17 touchdowns last year. Receivers Kevin VandenBosch and Doug VanEerden combined for 80 catches and 1,272 yards in 2006. On defense, end Matt Rugenstein is top-notch. He was named the conference's Defensive MVP last season after producing 11.5 sacks and 20.5 tackles for loss.

Don't be surprised if Wisconsin-La Crosse doesn't regroup to challenge for another national crown. The Eagles, entering their 95th football season, have two Division III titles and 33 conference crowns, the most in WIAC history. The defense will carry the load while a new quarterback settles in this season. All three linebackers, including Adam Neitzel, return, along with secondary standouts Jacob Buswell and Nick Ihde. The defensive front needs rebuilding, though. The key returnees on offense are receivers Ted Everson and Jason Wagner, tailback Dan Hall and linemen Randy Gyllin and Jason Olejniczak.

Linfield knows something about winning and should be a beast out West. The offense will be lethal, with quarterback Trevor Scharer back after passing for 2,060 yards and 20 touchdowns last year.

KIMM ANDERSON / ST. CLOUD TIMES / AP WIDE WORLD PHOTOS

Wide receivers Tyler Kaluza and Josh Vierra return after combining for 72 catches and 1,164 yards. The big question will be the defensive front seven, but Keone Tawata, Brian Mehl and Bubba Lemon are solid in the secondary.

Ohio Northern struggled to a 6-4 record during an injury-filled year. The Polar Bears, however, return a plethora of starting experience. Running back R.J. Meadows missed four games in 2006, but will be a constant threat this year. On defense, linebacker Lenny Trusnik can be dominating.

Eleven victories in 2006 was a school best at Carnegie Mellon, and the Tartans are hungry for a repeat. Jameson O'Donnell is one of four starting linemen back who paved the way for two 1,000-yard rushers last season. Both of those runners, Travis Sivek (1,326) and Robert Gimson (1,059), return. Sivek has rushed for a school-record 3,067 yards entering his senior season. Defensive back Jon Scholl and linebacker Trent Sisson lead the defense.

At Coast Guard, all eyes will be on quarterback Christian George. Despite missing the last four games, George was the New England Football Conference Bogan Division Offensive Player of the Year. He passed for just under 1,000 yards and rushed for 615. Running back Lance Lynch and three all-conference linemen also return. Safety Steve Arguelles and linemen John McDonald and Josh Kirby lead the defense. Punter Jesse Harms is also a strong special-teams weapon.

Washington & Lee won its first outright conference championship since 1981, and many key components return for the Generals. Quarterback R.J. Varner was the ODAC's Rookie of the Year after stepping into the spotlight during the fourth game of last season. He will again lead the attack this year, throwing to deep-threat wide receiver Jack Martin. Running back Stuart Sitterson can hurt opponents as a runner, receiver and returner. On defense, Mark Snoddy returns after a nine-interception season and Bryant Fulk can provide numerous big plays as well.

BEST OF THE REST

Replacing a quarterback is the main priority at North Central as it looks for a third straight playoff berth. Players to watch include Dominic Sulo (1,065 rushing and 343 receiving yards), offensive lineman Don Kasper and linebacker Wes Kostellic.

Hardin-Simmons will be hard to stop if it finds a solid quarterback. Receivers Matt Fields and Mychal Carrillo combined for 98 catches last year, while Quinton Jones is a solid runner. Only three starters are back on defense, though.

Ursinus has eight of its All-Centennial Conference selections back from an eight-win season, including defensive back DeVohn Butler and linebacker Brian Hrynczyszyn.

Ursinus will battle always-strong Dickinson for the conference crown. The Red Devils return first-team All-Centennial performers in linebacker Eric Dube, defensive end Eric Hertrich and return specialist Chris McInerney. Replacing a quarterback and four offensive linemen will be crucial.

A sleeping giant could be Kean, which will challenge Rowan in the New Jersey Athletic Conference. Quarterback A.J. Roque is special and has returning receivers Durell Dukes and Brian Williams as his main targets.

Curry has won four straight NEFC championships and returns its two biggest weapons in quarterback Ryan Van De Giesen (1,524 yards, 21 TDs) and running back Steve DiFabio (862 yards).

Since 1955, Wittenberg has had 49 winning seasons, and 2007 looks no different than 48 with the return of quarterback Aaron Huffman and defensive lineman Anthony Davis.

Fifteen starters are back at Christopher Newport as the school enters its seventh year of play. The Captains, who earned playoff spots in five of their first six seasons, face a tough early schedule.

Cal Lutheran could be a solid contender to knock off SCIAC rival Occidental. Quarterback Danny Jones, placekicker Connor Pearce, running back Jose Rojas and defensive lineman Jason Jenkins are big-time performers.

A fourth-straight playoff berth is in Hobart's sights, as 12 starters return. A defense led by tackle Ryan Aruck, cornerback James Alexander and linebacker Jeff Sanders could be very good.

Allegheny will be tough if a quarterback and running back are found.

Often overlooked is Ithaca, but defensive lineman Phil Byers and quarterback Dan Juvan are capable of leading the team a long way.

Cortland lost 13 starters, but still have quarterback Alex Smith, cornerback Jeff Beck and kicker Matthew Mintz.

Last year was considered a rebuilding season at Gettysburg, which could be potent in 2007 with quarterback Matt Flynn, tailback Tom Sturges (1,143 yards) and linebacker Harold Barton (100 tackles) returning to lead the way.

Rensselaer has two superb offensive weapons back in quarterback Jimmy Robertson (2,160 passing yards) and wide receiver Brendan McGowan (61 catches, 767 yards). Lineman Vince Scicchitano and linebacker Tom Rayhill return to lead the defense.

The winner of one national title (1999), Pacific Lutheran, appears close to joining the elite once again. Defensive linemen Andrew Eisentrout and Robert Thomsen and linebacker Chad Blau will lead a strong Lutes defense.

Ripon could challenge St. Norbert in the Midwest Conference with 16 starters back from a 7-3 squad.

Six starters return from John Carroll's sixth-ranked NCAA defense, including defensive back Carlo Melaragno and linebacker Michael Nettling.

Wisconsin-Platteville returns big-time running back Mike Genslinger (1,028 yards, 11 TDs).

SUNY-Brockport has eight defensive starters back, including defensive end Dale Buck and several key players on offense.

A strong defense and the return of two experienced quarterbacks will make Baldwin-Wallace a solid team.

Expect Saint Francis to be bridesmaid no more

By JONATHAN WOOG
Street & Smith's Copy Editor

The National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics experienced a couple of firsts in its 51st title game last season. It was the first time in the championship's history that two teams (Sioux Falls and Saint Francis) with the same mascot (Cougars) played for all the marbles. It was also the first year Carroll didn't win it all after four straight titles (2002-05). And it was the third straight year Saint Francis played the runner-up role.

Sioux Falls will look to defend its title and win back-to-back championships, but the usual suspects, Saint Francis and Carroll, will be in the mix.

It's become an unpleasant refrain for Saint Francis (Ind.) the past three years, as the Cougars have finished runners-up for the NAIA championship, twice to Carroll (2004-05) and most recently to Sioux Falls.

But maybe 2007 is Coach Kevin Donley's chance at glory as eight starters return on offense, led by running backs Daniel Carter and Doug Wasylk. Jeff Wedding steps in at quarterback after seeing limited action last season, and returns a pair of receivers, Bo Thompson and Zach Rainey, who combined for 1,621 yards and 13 touchdowns in 2006. The hope will be that the Cougars' offense can put enough points on the board with the loss of five starters on defense, the most important being last year's NAIA Player of the Year, Brian Kurtz.

Coming off its second NAIA championship in a decade, Sioux Falls has the firepower to repeat. National Coach-of-the-Year Kalen DeBoer's team returns quarterback Chad Cavendar, who led the NAIA in passing yards (3,674) and touchdowns (38) last season. The offensive line returns four starters to protect Cavendar, but he will be without his top target, wide receiver Dusty Hovorka, and running back Mike Dvoracek. Look for senior Trey Erickson to fill the void left by Dvoracek.

Carroll (Mont.) found itself in unusual territory last season, heading home early without an NAIA championship. The Saints were bounced in the quarterfinals by Saint Xavier. But with senior QB John Barnett and tight end Marshall McKewen leading the offense and a defense that allowed only 5.8 points per game in '06, another title run is quite possible.

Teams best watch out for Missouri Valley, as the Vikings return 17 starters from last season's squad. A strong defense led by end Larry Wentzel will have to carry the Vikings while they break in a new quarterback.

Saint Xavier was responsible for ending Carroll's championship streak last season, and it will look to play spoiler again with the return of QB Billy Yeo and running back Jason Banning to the offense and linebacker Sean Kenney on defense.

Behind the one-two punch of running backs Adrian Smith (Mid-South Conference Player of the Year) and Terrance Bell, Bethel has its sights set on a third straight Mid-South Conference Western Division championship and a return to the NAIA playoffs.

Northwestern (Iowa) must replace standout linebacker Austin Janssen, last year's Great Plains Athletic Conference Player of the Year, but returns seven starters on defense, including first-team all-conference lineman Tim Martin.

Standout quarterback Jeff Smith has graduated, but senior Andy Ahrens is expected to be an able replacement at Georgetown (Ky.). His top target will be wideout Brian Piper. On defense, Mid-South Defensive Player-of-the-Year Clay Hamblen returns.

The ground attack will be the key to St. Ambrose's return to the NAIA postseason, with running back Vernon Reed leading the way.

Going for a fourth consecutive NAIA playoff berth, Morningside will depend heavily on a strong secondary led by Chad Hustedt.

Franchione on fast track to coaching success, and could join dad in Division I ranks soon

Brad Franchione grew up wanting nothing more than to please his father, Dennis, who was quickly making a name for himself as a top college football coach. Now Brad's on the fast track in the profession as well, and it may not be long before he's at a school like Texas A&M, where his father coaches. Brad, the head coach at Blinn (Texas) Junior College in Brenham, is only about 30 miles from his father in College Station.

"I tell you what, I never understood what Dad was going through as a head coach until I did it," Brad says. "Now I have a much greater appreciation of what he did and what he's doing. Until you are a head coach you do not understand what it's like to be a head coach."

The younger Franchione has caught onto the game quickly since declaring to his dad near the end of his senior high school year in Pittsburg, Kan., that he wanted to coach.

"He called and said, 'Dad, I need to talk to you,'" Dennis recalls. "I thought, 'Uh, oh.' I wondered what was so important."

Now, at age 33, Brad has Blinn squarely in the national juco limelight after having served in a variety of coaching positions at eight schools in seven states. Despite losing vision in his left eye from an automobile accident in high school and being in the large shadow of his father, Brad put a big exclamation point on his career last season by guiding Blinn to the national junior-college championship.

"I didn't do a single thing to guide him into coaching," Dennis says. "In fact I probably discouraged it, although maybe not vocally. I'd say it's worked out pretty well. I like that he has a good imagination and a no-nonsense approach to the game. And there aren't many coaches around who win national championships in their second year as a head coach."

1> El Camino CC

(Calif.), 12-2 in '06

Four-year-school coaches have long known the way to El Camino in Torrance, as the program has become the USC of the two-year-school circuit. However, never before in his 22 years has Coach John Featherstone had his cupboard so full of quality players. With eight returning starters on defense and five on offense and almost every one of them legitimate major college prospects, it's easy to see why optimism abounds. The best of the lot includes Justin Thompson, a 6-4, 265-pound dominant defensive end who has the likes of USC, Miami, Ohio State and LSU recruiting him; Corey Surrency, a fearless receiver who might be playing for pay on Sundays down the line; Lamar Chapman, whose 5-8, 160-pound size is smaller than his big game at cornerback; and 6-5, 320-pound offensive tackle Daniel Mafoe, another potential NFL prospect. Others of significance include Simi Kuli, an excellent rush end; Cedric Mack, a monster offensive lineman; Joseph Perkins, a free safety who had six picks as a freshman; speedy receiver Verran Tucker; and Tavares Pressley, a breathtaking juco All-America transfer running back from in-state Monterey Peninsula College who also is an excellent return man. The list seems endless, as do the possibilities for a special season.

2> Pearl River CC

(Miss.), 10-2

There are many coaches in the U.S. that would love to accomplish what Tim Hatten has in five seasons at Pearl River. He has a 47-6 record with a National Junior College Athletic Association championship under his belt (2004) and another appearance in the title game (2006). With a dozen returnees—eight on defense, four on offense—at hand, Hatten should continue to work his magic. The defense is so loaded that Hatten projects every starter to wind up with a Division I scholarship, and the incoming class is quality as well. Receiver Roger Frazier, a transfer from Hutchinson (Kan.) Community College who had off-the-field problems and didn't play last season, should knock the rust off quickly and be a big contributor. Sophomores in linebacker Keon Wilson (6-1, 225 pounds) and defensive back Brandon Burns (6-2, 210) are cut from prime-time cloth.

3> Bakersfield College

(Calif.), 11-2

With 14 freshmen starters of a year ago (eight on defense, six on offense), the Renegades are ready to roll as sophomores, with a little bit of everything everywhere. Tailback Pat Patterson; receivers Attrail Snipes and Brandon Banks; offensive guard Mike Papac (6-4, 273 pounds); and offensive lineman Gary Sumlin (6-3, 225) are the heart of the offense. The defense has plenty of star power as well in tackle Daniel Calvin (6-4, 310); end Aaron King (6-4, 235); and linebackers Daron Mackey (6-0, 220) and Lamont Whitehead. Quarterback Jacob Bower (BYU) is a heralded Division I transfer.

4> City College of San Francisco
(Calif.), 10-2

When Coach George Rush took charge of the San Francisco program just over three decades ago, none of this year's players were even born. With a 248-78 record, Rush has helped the Rams become one of the most significant forces in the national junior-college ranks, sending countless players to major college programs. Look for the same song, different verse this time around. With 10 returning starters, San Francisco will again be a legitimate challenger for all of the two-year-school marbles. Among the best sophomores on this season's roster are linebacker Nick Thurston (6-1, 245 pounds); receiver Adrian Hilburn (6-2, 190); defensive lineman Donald Phelps; and safety Rashad Swanson (6-0, 185). Add hotshot Devin Mays, a 5-11, 170-pound cornerback, to the mix and it's easy to see why the winning ways will continue in the city by the Bay.

5> Butler County CC
(Kan.), 11-1

Coach Troy Morrell knows having a running back the caliber of Rudi Johnson (Cincinnati Bengals) on your team as Butler once did (1998-99) is usually a once-in-a-lifetime deal. But get ready for the second coming of Rudi. This one, Beau, is also a Johnson. He has the same build and style as Rudi, only Beau has more speed, according to Morrell. Beau averaged 6.2 yards per carry as a freshman and tops an offense that includes 12 returning lettermen. The defense, which also has a dozen letterwinners back, will be spurred by cornerback Maurice Gray. A nice freshman class will come on strong in a system augmented by one of the most unheralded assistant coaches at any collegiate level in Steve Braet (he has been at Butler 28 seasons), which allows newcomers to learn the game fast. Morrell, one of the best coaches at any collegiate level, definitely has it going on at Butler, with a 73-10 record in seven years and three NJCAA championship game appearances since 2001, with a title victory in 2003.

6> Fresno City College
(Calif.), 8-3

If a tough schedule truly makes or breaks a team, look for Fresno City to be one tough cookie when this year shakes out. The Rams have road games in 2007 against some of California's toughest jucos: Feather River, Sacramento City, City College of San Francisco, College of the Sequoias and Reedley. Fresno City will try to do damage with Derek Shaw, a highly touted QB transfer who has been at Arizona State and Texas Tech the last two seasons, at the controls. He has size (6-4, 215 pounds), is talented and a strong-armed pocket passer with good speed (4.8 in the 40). Shaw is the type of player you can build an offense around. There will also be nine returning starters among the two units, the best of the lot being bookend receivers Arsenio Curry (6-5, 210) and Jon Blea (6-4, 194); center Bronson Tiwanek (6-2, 285); and cornerback Lawrence Hood (5-10, 175).

7> Blinn College

Last year, there was no debate about who the best juco team was as Blinn captured the No. 1 spot in in the NJCAA poll. Blinn and Lackawanna (Pa.) College (10-0) were the only schools in the country at season's end that were undefeated. While Blinn won't be as powerful as it was a year ago, there's still plenty of talent to go along with one of the brightest coaching minds in the juco ranks, Brad Franchione. Standout players include linebackers Terrance Flagg and Sterling Lewis, offensive guard Quintin Johnson and defensive end Emannuel Stephens. Freshmen of note are offensive lineman Marquis Franklin (6-6, 315 pounds) and defensive back Corey West (6-4, 190).

8> Grossmont CC

The coach's name, Michael Jordan, may conjure up basketball thoughts, but make no mistake, this MJ has helped Grossmont establish itself as one of the premier two-year football schools in the land. After taking the head-coaching reins last season from his father, Dave, Michael had to adjust to five position-coaching changes, yet the Griffins still had a chance to be the California state champion. With six returnees on both offense and defense, Grossmont will be much improved in many aspects, including a more cohesive coaching staff, some seasoned sophomores and a bevy of fabulous freshmen. Sophomores of note should be offensive tackle Charles Millenbah (6-5, 305 pounds); linebackers Kyle Marsom (6-2, 233) and Jacob Tauanuu (6-1, 225); defensive tackle Magnum Mauga (6-0, 270); and defensive lineman Matt Moss (6-4, 265).

9> Cisco JC
(Texas), 6-4

The Southwest Conference is arguably the toughest in the NJCAA ranks. Blinn is good and the other six teams (Cisco, Kilgore, Navarro, Trinity Valley, Tyler and Northeastern Oklahoma A&M) have had their share of solid seasons as well. This time around, Cisco looks to be the chief challenger to Blinn, last year's national champion. With 10 starters back on offense and nine returning on defense, the Wranglers' game experience and consistent depth is almost scary. But can they live up to such lofty expectations? Second-year Coach John Parchman will count on sophomores in tackle Ricky McNatt (6-0, 280 pounds) and receiver Dorian Williams (6-2, 180) to lead the offense and strong safety Jocques Crawford (who played running back last season) and defensive end McKinner Dixon (6-3, 275) to highlight the defense. Influential freshmen include linebacker Dwayne Baziel (6-3, 240).

10> Saddleback CC

Coach Mark McElroy is pinning his hopes for another big campaign on a trio of good quarterbacks in Brian Schrock, a 6-0, 180-pound first-year collegian; Sebastian Trujillo, who was last season's backup; and Joe Villegas, a 6-3, 195-pound redshirt freshman. Eight returning starters (four each on offense and defense) will be the catalyst of a team that includes plenty of talent. Leading the way are running backs Andrew Nakihei (5-9, 190 pounds) and Cheyne Verhagen (a 2004 starter who is coming off a Mormon mission); receivers Maurice Clark (6-3, 200) and Donald Hawthorne (who has a 4.3 40 time); linebackers Charles Johnson (6-2, 225) and Ben Terry (6-1, 210); and safeties Michael Ciaccio (6-1, 195) and Rico Russo (6-0, 185). Also watch out for sure-footed kicker Eric Carr, who made 42 of 46 extra points and eight of 10 field goals as a freshman last year.

2007 HIGH SCHOOL ALL-AMERICA TEAM

EARLY BIRDS

Our annual list of the nation's Top 50 high school football players includes 20 who have already made their college destinations known.

By Doug Huff

Nearly half of the athletes on the 26th annual Street & Smith's High School All-America Football Team made future college plans before their junior year in high school ended in the spring.

Twenty of the elite Top 50 honorees on the preseason honor roll had given 13 colleges non-binding verbal OKs for scholarships starting in 2008. That's the most junior-year commitments by the Top 50 in the history of the selections. The binding NCAA scholarships can't be signed until February.

Oklahoma led the early list with four verbals. Ohio State received three, all from offensive linemen, while Texas and Georgia had two each.

The Sooners continue to raid neighboring Texas for talent with three Lone Star recruits—running back Jermie Calhoun of Van, offensive lineman Stephen Good of Paris and defensive end R.J. Washington of Fossil Ridge High in Keller. The fourth Sooner commitment is quarterback Landry Jones from Artesia, N.M.

Ohio State's three line recruits from the Top 50 are Mike Adams of Coffman High in the Columbus area, Michael Brewster of Orlando (Fla.) Edgewater and J.B. Shugarts of Klein, Texas.

The University of Texas landed two in-state talents with quarterback Riley Dodge of Southlake Carroll and wide receiver Dan Buckner of Allen. The Longhorns may opt to use Dodge at his former position, wide receiver, when he reports to Austin.

Georgia received verbals from wide receiver A.J. Green of Summerville, S.C., and in-state defensive end Cornelius Washington of Burke County High in Waynesboro.

The Top 50 selections hail from 25 states, with Texas, California and Florida producing seven selections each.

QUARTERBACKS

Two of the seven honorees are from Texas—Dodge and Andrew Luck from Stratford High in Houston—and both are sons of former college quarterbacks.

Dodge has never played in a losing high school game as Carroll takes a 48-game winning streak into the season while in search of a fourth straight Class 5A championship. The son of ex-Longhorn QB Todd Dodge—the Carroll coach until he opted for the head-coaching job at the University of North Texas after last season—passed for 4,184 yards and 54 touchdowns and rushed for 1,119 yards and 13 more scores in the Dragons' spread offense. He was named the Class 5A Player of the Year and National Junior of the Year by Student Sports magazine.

Luck, the son of ex-West Virginia University and Houston Oilers QB Oliver Luck, passed for 2,926 yards and 27 TDs with six interceptions last season. He also rushed for 714 yards and 10 touchdowns.

Jones could be the most highly recruited prospect out of New Mexico in several years. The future Sooner led Artesia to a 13-0 record and Class 4A title last season. He passed for 3,432 yards and 45 TDs and rushed for nine more scores to earn New Mexico Player of the Year.

Notre Dame received an early commitment from a player at Notre Dame High in Sherman Oaks, Calif., Dayne Crist. The CalHiSports.com All-State Underclass honoree helped his team to an unbeaten regular season as he passed for 1,270 yards and 17 TDs with only three picks in just seven games.

One of the top football/basketball athletes in the land is Terrelle Pryor of Jeannette, Pa. In football last season, he rushed for 1,676 yards and passed for 1,732 yards and 15 scores. Overall, he tallied 29 TDs, including one as a receiver. Comparisons to Vince Young have been made.

Last year's New Jersey Player of the Year returns in versatile Will Hill from St. Peter's Prep in Jersey City. Hill, like Pryor, a two-way player, amassed 3,810 yards and accounted for 47 TDs in 12 games last season. He passed for 968 yards and 21 scores with only three interceptions; rushed for 1,024 yards and 14 TDs; landed 14 passes and scored four TDs; and returned 32 kicks with eight TDs. As a free safety, he intercepted six passes.

E.J. Manual of Bayside High in Virginia Beach, Va., has boosted his recruiting stock with recent summer-camp efforts. In 10 games last season, he passed for 1,973 yards and 15 scores and also rushed for 345 yards and five TDs.

RUNNING BACKS

Darrell Scott of St. Bonaventure High in Ventura, Calif., rates the No. 1 tag among the running backs. Last year, at Moorpark High, the CalHiSports.com Junior Player of the Year in California rushed for 3,194 yards and scored 45 touchdowns. He's joining a team expected to contend for state and national honors.

Another West Coast athlete, Milton Knox of Birmingham High in Lake Balboa, Calif., is coming off a junior season in which he rushed for 2,300-plus yards and earned All-State honors.

Kevin Whaley posted gaudy statistics last year when he earned All-State recognition at Salem High in Virginia Beach, Va. He scored 39 touchdowns while rushing for 1,981 yards.

The top-rated backs in Texas and Louisiana both earned first team All-State kudos as juniors. They are Oklahoma recruit Calhoun and Alonzo Landry of Carencro High in Lafayette, La.

UTILITY PLAYERS

Kenny Tate of DeMatha High in Hyattsville, Md., is another two-sport stalwart. A starter on a nationally ranked Stags basketball team, he could be the most highly recruited player in a decade from a school that produces several major-college signees most seasons. Tate plays wide receiver, defensive back and running back.

Brandon Green piled up big-time stats last season as a do-it-all player at Robeson High in Chicago. A three-sport athlete who played receiver, quarterback, defensive back, kick returner and kicker in 2006 at Robeson, he has piled up 5,703 all-purpose yards and scored 72 TDs, including 60 among 185 career passes.

WIDE RECEIVERS

The deepest position category for quality athletes this season could be wideout.

The top overall prospects in five states may be wide receivers.

In South Carolina, A.J. Green has already been named All-State three times at Summerville. Last season, the University of Georgia recruit landed 60 passes for 1,203 yards and 14 touchdowns and added three more scores on the ground.

Northwestern High of Miami went unbeaten and won a Class 6A title in 2006 as Aldarius Johnson caught 72 passes for 1,361 yards and 19 TDs. Another Top 50 honoree, Martavious Odoms of Pahokee, also helped his unbeaten team win a state title in Florida. Odoms caught 46 passes for 971 yards and 14 scores.

The Minnesota Player of the Year returns this season in Michael Floyd of Cretin-Derham Hall in St. Paul. Last season, Floyd caught 63 passes for 1,240 yards and 16 scores and tacked on three rushing TDs.

In Alabama, the top prospect is Julio Jones of Foley, while some analysts regard University of Texas recruit Buckner as No. 1 in the Lone Star State.

TIGHT ENDS

All three tight-end selections enjoyed celebrating state championships last season. Blake Ayles helped Lutheran High of Orange, Calif., to a 14-1 record. Tennessee recruit Aaron Douglas played a big role in Maryville, Tenn., capturing its third straight title and pushing its win streak to 45 games. Brigham Young University recruit Austin Holt helped Bingham High of South Jordan win a state title in Utah.

KICKERS

Jake Wieclaw of Lincoln-Way Central in New Lenox, Ill., has a new target this year after he set a state record in 2006 with 19 field goals in 23 attempts. He booted a pair of 49-yard three-pointers.

Blair Walsh of Gibbons High in Hollywood, Fla., was near perfect on his field goals by converting 12 of 13 with two regular-season boots of 45 yards, plus a 57-yarder in a preseason contest.

OFFENSIVE LINEMEN

Ohio State may be cornering the market on touted blockers. The Buckeyes landed Ohio's top prospect in Adams (6-8, 305) as well as all-staters from Florida and Texas in Michael Brewster (6-6, 305) of Edgewater High in Orlando and J.B. Shugarts (6-7, 300) from Klein.

Other early commitments include Good (6-5, 290) to Oklahoma; West Virginia

Lineman-of-the-Year Josh Jenkins (6-5, 300) to WVU; Matt Kalil (6-6, 265) of Anaheim (Calif.) Servite to USC; and mammoth Matt Hall (6-10, 320) of Dardanelle, Ark., to Arkansas.

The other highly recruited interior linemen are A.J. Harmon (6-4, 310) from Jefferson County High in Louisville, Ga.; Matt Patchan (6-6, 250) of Armwood High in Seffner, Fla.; Alameda Ta'amu (6-4, 345) of Rainier Beach High in Seattle; and Tyron Smith (6-4, 255) from Rancho Verde High in Moreno Valley, Calif.

DEFENSIVE LINEMEN

A son of an All-America lineman at Nebraska highlights the down linemen. Baker Steinkuhler (6-6, 290), who has earned All-State honors both for offense and defense at Southwest High in Lincoln, will follow his father, Dean, and become a Cornhusker.

Two other recruits are end Cornelius Washington (6-4, 225) of Burke County High in Waynesboro, Ga., to Georgia, and end R.J. Washington (6-3, 245) of Fossil Ridge High in Keller, Texas, to Oklahoma.

Other honorees are two-sport standout Quinton Coples (6-6, 245) of Kinston, N.C.; Ethan Johnson (6-4, 255) of Lincoln High in Portland, Ore; and Robert Quinn (6-5, 245) of Fort Dorchester High in North Charleston, S.C.

LINEBACKERS

Florida State recruit Nigel Bradham (6-2, 220) of Wakulla High in Crawfordville, Fla., gets high marks from the scouting analysts and some believe he might be the top prospect in the Sunshine State.

In Kansas, the No. 1 recruit is Arthur Brown (6-2, 225) of East High in Wichita, an All-State choice who also plays fullback.

Mount Carmel High in Chicago has a rich football tradition and Steven Filer (6-3, 220) is being compared to some of the school's all-time greats.

DeVoe Torrence (6-2, 215) recorded more than 130 tackles and six sacks last season at Canton South before transferring to famed Washington High in Massillon, Ohio's winningest all-time program.

DEFENSIVE BACKS

Boubacar Cissoko of Cass Tech in Detroit was the first early commitment for the University of Michigan. The cornerback is rated the top prospect in the state.

Florida and California are home to the other secondary selections. T.J. Bryant translates his hurdling speed in track to the gridiron for Lincoln High in Tallahassee.

25 PREP TEAMS TO WATCH

(teams listed alphabetically by states)

BY DOUG HUFF

PRATTVILLE ▸ AL (15-0 in '06)

The defending Class 6A state champion Lions return 11 starters, including five on offense, in a bid for a repeat crown. A big change on the offense this season is the move of two-year standout wide receiver Dekendrick Moncrief (6-0, 175 pounds) to quarterback, replacing graduated state Player of the Year Larry Smith. Returning in the backfield is Justin Albert (5-9, 180), who scored three touchdowns in the title game win over four-year champion Hoover. Moncrief will have three key targets in wide receivers Lewis Haley (5-10, 180), Emanuel Davis (6-3, 185) and Dekendrick's junior brother, Quaylon (6-0, 175). Anchoring the offensive line is Chance Guyon (6-1, 270). The veteran defenders include backs Marlow Marshall (6-2, 185) and Reggie Dozier (5-9, 170); linebackers Terrance Williams (6-2, 190), Terrell Jackson (6-1, 205) and junior Lalo Albright (6-0, 200); and linemen Greg Mitchell (6-1, 290), Hayden Findlay (5-11, 190) and Jarvis Nixon (5-11, 270), who was injured last season. Prattville opens the season with the Kickoff Classic contest against North Gwinnett (Ga.).

CENTENNIAL ▸ PEORIA, AZ (14-0)

The Coyotes have 29 lettermen, including 10 starters, back from a dominating Class 5A-II state championship team. Quarterback Scott Burgett (6-2, 210) runs the offense after passing for 1,900 yards and 27 touchdowns last season. Touted All-State linemen Zach Schlink (6-4, 290) and Cory Woolery (6-4, 280) are the key blockers. Two-way player Jeff Hughes (5-11, 190), an All-State cornerback, also rushed for 1,500 yards and 26 scores. Other veteran skill players include a pair of two-way backs in Jerrell Barbour (6-1, 190) and junior John Hughes (5-9, 185). Linebacker Adam Shipley (6-0, 205) also returns.

DE LA SALLE ▸ CONCORD, CA (13-1)

The Spartans have 11 veterans returning from last season's Division I state runner-up. Mike MacGillvray (5-11, 175) is back at quarterback and should have help in the backfield from two-way backs Kaylan Butler (5-9, 190) and Tito Pica (5-9, 190), who is also a touted wrestler. Other veterans include linebacker Brady Amack (6-1, 235); tight end/defensive end Xavier Vigney (6-6, 260); cornerback/wide receiver Graylon Sanders (5-11, 177); and wide receiver/kicker Michael Cycz (5-9, 155). Veteran linemen on hand are Jordan Bouey (6-1, 265), Donald Walter (6-0, 230), Andrew Garaventa (5-11, 240) and Dimitri Mastorakas (5-10, 200).

POLY ▸ LONG BEACH, CA (11-2)

The Jackrabbits return an experienced team and should be in the hunt for state honors in 2007. With eight offensive and seven defensive regulars back from last season, Poly will travel outside the state to tackle Ohio power Cleveland Glenville. Key veterans include two-way lineman Jurrell Casey (6-1, 260); safety/wide receiver Vaughn Telemaque (6-3, 190); wide receiver Randall Cox (5-9, 170); and offensive linemen Marcus Falanai (6-2, 320) and Douglas Spacht (6-3, 285). Vying for the quarterback position will be senior Morgan Fennell (6-2, 180) and promising sophomore Chris Leachman (6-3, 180).

ST. BONAVENTURE ▸ VENTURA, CA (10-2)

The Seraphs' veteran roster was bolstered when CalHiSports.com State Junior Player of the Year and Street & Smith's preseason All-America running back Darrell Scott (6-1, 215) transferred from Moorpark. Scott rushed for 3,194 yards and 45 touchdowns last season. He joins seven returning offensive starters, along with seven defensive veterans. Scott will run behind a strong offensive line featuring Vaughn Dotsy (6-4, 365), Andrew Sims (6-4, 260), B.J. Avila (6-0, 260) and center Chris Perham (6-0, 240). Also back is wide receiver/defensive back K.C. Serna (5-10, 175), junior quarterback Tony Macarena (5-10, 205) and running back/safety Patrick Hall (6-0, 195). The defense is anchored by touted middle linebacker Ryan Panapa (6-2, 255) along with linebacker Loren Powers (6-3, 212), end Ryan Medina (6-3, 250), nose guard Elliott Moon (5-10, 260), junior tackle James Emma (6-0, 230), senior tackle Christian Mohan (6-3, 335) and backs Chad Kurz (6-3, 190) and J.B. Dock (5-11, 165).

NORTHWESTERN ▸ MIAMI, FL (15-0)

The defending Class 6A state champion returns 12 starters—six on each side of the ball. The Bulls could make a run at a national title this season, which includes an early-season showdown in Texas against three-time defending Class 5A-I champion Southlake Carroll. Key returnees include preseason Street & Smith's All-America wide receiver Aldarius Johnson (6-3, 195); quarterback Jacoby Harris (6-3, 185); defensive lineman Marcus Forston (6-2, 290); linebacker Sean Spence (6-0, 195); wide receiver Tommy Streeter (6-4, 195); offensive linemen Vincent Marshall (6-4, 270) and Terrell Killings (6-3, 285); and defensive lineman Benjamin Jones (6-4, 275). Harris passed for 2,920 yards and 37 touchdowns last season, with Johnson catching 19 of his throws for scores and Streeter landing 14.

PAHOKEE ▸ FL (14-0)

The Blue Devils are coming off their third Class 2A state title in the last four years and return several key players including preseason Street & Smith's All-America wide receiver Martavious Odoms (5-8, 170) and quarterback Anthony Sheppard (6-3, 180). Sheppard threw for 2,067 yards and 31 touchdowns, including connecting on 14 with Odoms, in 2006. Two-way lineman Micanor Regis (6-3, 295), who had 11 sacks last season, anchors the defense. Also returning are defensive back Janoris Jenkins (5-11, 175) and linebacker Artis Evans (6-0, 195).

NORTHSIDE ▸ WARNER ROBINS, GA (15-0)

The defending Class 4A state champion Eagles are well-fortified for another title run in 2007. Leading the way is quarterback Marques Ivory (6-1, 235), Georgia's 4A Offensive Player of the Year and one of 14 starters returning. Ivory is joined in the backfield by top rusher Tijuan Green (6-2, 195), with All-State lineman Jerome Bibbins (6-3, 295) up front. Other returnees include wide receivers Nick Bass (5-11, 190) and Kevin Cooper (6-2, 185), lineman Vashaun Oats (6-2, 265) and center Jordan Dooley (6-0, 245). Defensive veterans include end Anthony Taylor (6-2, 205) and four key juniors in lineman Abry Jones (6-4, 245), linebacker Eric Fields (6-2, 208) and backs K.J. Martin (5-11, 65) and Randall McBride (5-10, 175).

ROSWELL ▸ GA (13-1-1)

After tying for last season's Class 5A state title (14-14 against Peachtree Ridge) with an underclassmen-led team, the Hornets are poised for another run at the crown. With eight starters on each side of the ball returning, Roswell will be the preseason team to beat. All-State quarterback Dustin Taliaferro (6-3, 200) runs the offense after passing for 2,048 yards and 17 touchdowns last year. Touted running back Alex Daniel (5-11, 200) is coming off a 1,800-yard rushing season. Last year's top pass catcher, P.J. Beidel (6-0, 180), and Garrett Embry (6-3, 210) return, as do linemen Brandon Reynolds (6-1, 280), Scott Lippencott (5-11, 240) and Matt Haney (6-0, 240). Touted linebackers Bele Okakpu (6-2, 210) and Zach Waddell (6-1, 225) anchor the defense, which includes end Curtis Hazelton (6-3, 235), tackle Braydon Knudson (5-9, 240) and backs Embry, Beidel, Dominique Wheeler (5-9, 165) and junior Ben Allen (5-9, 175). Placekicker/punter Jim Broadway is a deadly special-teams threat.

ST. RITA ▸ CHICAGO, IL (13-1)

The Mustangs have 10 senior starters back from a Class 7A state championship squad. Jason Kafka (6-3, 195) will take over the quarterback role after playing wide receiver as a junior last season. Other offensive veterans include tight end Drew McGowan (6-5, 245) and three linemen in Kevin Galeher (6-4, 310), Dan Smith (6-3, 285) and Luke Knibbs (6-2, 265). The defense is anchored by end Darius Fleming (6-3, 245), a Notre Dame recruit, along with linebackers Kenny Stoklosa (6-1, 235) and Brian Popek (6-1, 205) and cornerback Deonte Hood (5-9, 170). Kicker Steve Flaherty (5-11, 170) also returns.

JOHN CURTIS ▸ RIVER RIDGE, LA (14-0)

The Patriots continue to be the team to beat in Louisiana. With 21 state titles—including the last three in Class 2A and nine in the last 11 years—they reload for another run in Coach J.T. Curtis' 37th year with the program. Ten starters return, including Matt Saucier (6-0, 180), who shared snaps at quarterback last season. A trio of wide receivers returns: Wayne Poole (5-9, 170), Vincent Allen (5-8, 160) and P.J. Smith (6-4, 190). Bryan Munch (6-0, 265) is a third-year starter at center, while tackle Ray Grubbs (6-4, 295) also has experience. On defense, the secondary is solid with Smith and Robby Green (6-1, 175), plus Alex Lauricella and Conner Mullins. Linemen include Chris Nickolson (6-3, 265) and junior Mike Henry (6-5, 265). Kenny Cain, a running back/linebacker, will also contribute.

DEMATHA ▸ HYATTSVILLE, MD (12-0)

The Stags return 15 starters from a team that won its fourth straight D.C.-area Catholic championship. The most touted veteran is preseason Street & Smith's Top 50 athlete Kenny Tate (6-3, 215) a running back/wide receiver/defensive back who also starts on DeMatha's nationally ranked basketball team. Other veterans include 1,000-yard rusher Ashby Christian (5-11, 205); fullback/linebacker Ryan Clarke (6-1, 230); tight end Joe Collura (6-3, 250); center Rob McDowell (6-3, 275); and tackles D.J. Sellman (6-4, 320) and Tony Dreinski (6-4, 320). At quarterback, it will be junior Tommy Chroniger (6-1, 205), who started at safety last year. Other veterans are linebacker Anthony Listordi (6-0, 225) and defensive tackle Nick Rivers (6-1, 260), both third-year starters, plus safety/wide receiver Jonathan Mason (6-1, 205) and linemen Rion Robinson (5-11, 265) and junior Calvin McDowney (6-3, 325).

MUSKEGON ▸ MI (14-0)

The Big Reds will be seeking their third Division 2 state title in the last four years with 11 starters, including six third-year regulars, on hand. Quarterback Chris Crawford (6-0, 170) will run the offense for a third straight season and had 365 total yards, including 228 rushing and two touchdowns, in 2006's title game. Running back Bobby Miller (5-10, 180) and wide receiver Cory Johnson (6-0, 180) are other offensive threats. All-State pick Carlin Landingham (6-4, 285) anchors the line along with Mac Parker (6-2, 260). The defense includes ends Ricky Crosby (6-2, 235) and DeMarrrio Wyrick (6-4, 240), plus linebackers David Spears (5-10, 215) and junior Jason Hannett (5-9, 185). Jarvis McKinley (6-1, 180) and Miller return at cornerback.

SOUTH PANOLA ▸ BATESVILLE, MS (15-0)

ST.PETER'S PREP ▸ JERSEY CITY, NJ (11-1)

Quarterback Will Hill, a preseason Street & Smith's All-American, returns for his senior season along with several other veteran players. The massive offensive line includes Khalil Wilkes (6-3, 290), Shawn Pearson (6-5, 275), Ed Rodger (6-3, 250), Dan Alfieri (6-0, 260) and J.J. Milne (5-10, 260). At running back are Nyshier Oliver, Greg Kohles, Ken Smith and Bill Roman. Hill, who accounted for 3,810 total yards and 47 touchdowns last season, will pass to Mike Nadolny, Joe Holder, Andrew Collucci and Joe Hussey. Besides Hill, who is also a safety, key defenders include nose guard Darryl Greene (6-1, 310), end Anthony Blake (6-1, 245) and cornerbacks Eric Cirino and Charles Gregory.

INDEPENDENCE ▸ CHARLOTTE, NC (16-0)

The beat goes on for the Patriots, who enter the season with a 108-game winning streak and will be seeking their eighth straight Class 4AA state title. With 10 starters returning, the talent pool was improved by the addition of two talented transfers in senior running back Rod Chisholm (5-9, 185) and sophomore quarterback Anthony Carrothers (5-7, 165). They join tight end Mario Carter (6-4, 235), a North Carolina State recruit; wide receiver Javon Rembert (5-8, 180); and linemen Erik Thompson (6-4, 275) and Shannon Andrews (6-2, 275) on offense. Defensively, touted Devonte Holloman (6-2, 215) and Makiri Pugh (5-11, 180) return to the secondary, and ends Freddie Mungo (6-1, 210) and Jordan Woods (6-4, 220) are also back. Lineman Lawrence Williams (6-0, 315) and junior linebacker Dominique Walker (5-9, 180) are other veterans. Junior placekicker Robby Ward also returns.

CARDINAL MOONEY ▸ YOUNGSTOWN, OH (14-0)

The Cardinals retain most of their key players from last year's Ohio Division IV championship team, which some observers believed was as good as any in the state. All-State quarterback/safety Dan McCarthy (6-1, 190), a highly recruited two-way player, rushed for 1,921 yards and 21 touchdowns and passed for 780 yards and eight more scores last season. Other major contributors include running back/linebacker Brandon Beachum (6-1, 220), linebacker/defensive end

Taylor Hill (6-2, 215), linebacker Michael Zordich (6-1, 210), offensive lineman Jarod Emerson (6-6, 275) and junior two-way lineman John Simon (6-2, 250).

ST. XAVIER ▸ CINCINNATI, OH (11-2)

The Bombers are well-stocked with experience and talent to make another run for a Division I state title. Eight starters on each side of the ball return from last season's regional final team that took national No. 1 Lakeland (Fla.) into overtime. The entire offensive backfield is intact, including All-Ohio tailback Darius Ashley (5-9, 190); quarterback Jon Hurley (6-2, 195); fullback Luca Romeo (6-1, 215); and Patrick Berning (5-10, 180). Danny Milligan, a receiver/kicker/punter returner, is also back, as well as wide receivers Jon Scheidler (6-2, 185) and Stephon Ball (6-4, 215). The veteran linemen are Andrew Carpenter (6-3, 285) and Max Bauman (6-2, 270). All-State cornerback Fred Craig (6-2, 210) and linebacker Nick Schneider (6-3, 230) lead the defense. Others returning are linebacker Evan Miller (6-0, 195); ends Joe Langen (6-2, 235) and Patrick Muldoon (6-3, 245); nose guard Joe Richter (6-2, 230); and backs Ross Morand (6-1, 175), Gerry Reilly (6-1, 175) and Tim Bayer (6-1, 180).

JENKS ▸ OK (13-1)

The defending Class 6A state champion Trojans will be seeking their ninth state title in the last 12 years with an experienced team that includes nine offensive starters and four on defense. Quarterback Mark Ginther (6-2, 175) runs the attack, which features wide receiver Dallas Beeler (6-4, 185) and running back Chris Adkins (5-9, 195). Two-way lineman Cory Dorris (6-3, 265) and defensive lineman Tony Gillespie (6-1, 310) anchor the fronts. Other experienced offensive linemen include Kris VanBecelaere (5-10, 240) and juniors Jake Alexander (6-2, 260) and Brian Mincher (6-1, 250). Coach Allan Trimble has an 11-year record of 134-14.

CENTRAL CATHOLIC ▸ PITTSBURGH, PA (10-2)

The western Pennsylvania contender has 14 starters—seven on each side of the ball—returning for another run at a Class 4A state crown. The offense is run by Louisville recruit Tino Sunseri (6-1, 195) and experienced skill players such as fullback Dan Vaughan (6-3, 230); wide receivers Emmanuel Matthews (5-11, 170) and Casey Totten (6-0, 185); tight end Quintin Williams (6-3, 235); and sophomore running back Dom Timbers (5-10, 205). Key defenders will be Williams and Vaughan at ends, Jon Petrigac (6-1, 195) and Terrell Anderson (6-2, 205) at linebacker and Andrew Taglienetti (5-9, 175) at defensive back. A solid two-way lineman is Liam Krahe (6-2, 255).

SUMMERVILLE ▸ SC (12-1)

The nation's all-time winningest coach, John McKissick, has an experienced squad seeking an 11th state title in his 56th season at the helm. McKissick, with 543 wins, will build his team around preseason Street & Smith's All-America wide receiver A.J. Green (6-4, 185), a fourth-year starter and University of Georgia recruit who was the EA Sports National Sophomore of the Year, and quarterback Reid McCollum (6-3, 200). Green, also a safety, caught 60 passes for 1,203 yards and 14 touchdowns last season. McCollum passed for 2,787 yards and 25 scores. Other key contributors include fourth-year placekicker David Behr, who has a state-record 232 career kicking points, lineman Richard Spain and defensive back Davon Ellington.

MARYVILLE ▸ TN (15-0)

What can the Rebels do for an encore? With 12 starters—six on each side of the ball—returning, Maryville takes a 45-game winning streak into the season after capturing its third straight Class 4A state title and sixth in the last seven years. Coach George Quarles, with a 108-9 record in eight seasons, has preseason Street & Smith's All-America tight end Aaron Douglas (6-6, 245), a Tennessee recruit, back, as well as quarterback Brent Burnette (6-3, 215), wide receiver/safety Stephen Shiver (6-3, 205) and three offensive linemen in Caleb West (6-2, 225), Broughton Greene (6-0, 225) and Jeremy Sands (6-4, 270). A promising running back is junior Thomas Shular (5-11, 175). Defensive veterans include junior end Justin Smith (6-1, 230), tackles Todd Hollingsworth (6-1, 230) and junior Marcus Englehardt (6-0, 235), plus defensive backs Tyler Clendenin (5-10, 190) and Caleb Clement (5-10, 180).

CARROLL ▸ SOUTHLAKE, TX (16-0)

The Dragons enter the season in a familiar role as the team to beat in Texas, but with a new coach in former assistant Hal Wasson. Carroll, with a 48-game winning streak and three straight Class 5A-I state titles, could make a serious run at the No. 1 national ranking it held in 2004 and '05 before finishing No. 2 last season to Lakeland, Fla. Leading the way are two University of Texas recruits in quarterback Riley Dodge (6-0, 180) and running back Tre Newton (6-0, 185). Dodge, who is the son of former Carroll Coach Todd Dodge (now the University of North Texas coach), is a preseason Street & Smith's All-American.

Riley Dodge was named the 2006 EA Sports National Junior of the Year after recording 5,303 total yards and 67 touchdowns. Newton is the son of former Dallas Cowboys lineman Nate Newton, and Tre rushed for 2,010 yards and 20 scores last season. They are two of seven offensive starters returning to go along with three defensive regulars.

Other veterans include wide receivers Blake Cantu (6-1, 195) and Chris Brainard (6-0, 175); center Nick Leppo (6-3, 270); offensive linemen Jake Jackson (6-3, 275) and Sam Schwartzstein (6-3, 270); linebacker Derek Tomlin (6-0, 200); safety Luke Anderson (6-0, 180); and defensive linemen Jackson Beall and Blake Bridges. Carroll faces a major early-season test when Florida power Miami Northwestern visits for a televised intersectional contest.

KATY ▸ TX (13-1)

The Tigers return eight offensive and four defensive starters from a Class 5A-II regional final team. Running back Aundre Dean (6-1, 205) is a key offensive returnee after rushing for 2,111 yards and scoring 29 touchdowns last season. Quarterback Bo Mitchell (6-0, 180) runs the offense, which also includes fullback Luis Zavala (5-11, 195), tight end Markham Stayton (6-1, 215) and wide receivers Brian Rowe (6-0, 180) and Joey Fuda (6-0, 155). Veteran offensive linemen are Eric Ball (6-3, 270), James Lowrance (5-9, 235) and Nathan Bryan (6-0, 290). The defense features backs Trent Hunter (5-10, 190) and Terrance Henry (5-10, 170) and linebacker Brad Graham (6-0, 180). Others are to watch are defensive end Micah Marks (6-1, 250), defensive back Terrence Frederick (5-9, 150) and linebacker Blake Adler (5-9, 190).

PARKERSBURG ▸ WV (14-0)

The defending Class 3A state champion has 15 starters returning in search of the school's 11th title. Two-way lineman Josh Jenkins (6-5, 300), a West Virginia University recruit and preseason Street & Smith's All-American, was the state Lineman of the Year and one of five returning All-State honorees among 30 lettermen. Others include placekicker Tyler Warner (6-5, 235), running back Matt Lindamood (6-1, 215), offensive guard Joey Shafer (6-0, 230) and linebacker Matt Littleton (5-9, 185). Quarterback Andy Thomas (6-0, 195) leads the offense and joining him is junior tight end Kyle Smith (6-5, 235). Defensive regulars include tackle Travis Bunner (6-1, 300) and nose guard Zach Nolan (5-10, 260).

CLICK-CLACK™
I THINK YOU HEAR US COMING.
CLICK-CLACK ... It's the last sound you hear before the crowd and the band, the coaches and the cheerleaders ... CLICK-CLACK .... It's the sound of you and your teammates walking down the tunnel; the sound of your Under Armour® cleats on that last few feet of concrete before you step on the field. CLICK-CLACK, CLICK-CLACK... I THINK YOU HEAR US COMING.
